A CHANGE IN SIZE OF PIPE.

We wish to replace some 4-inch cast-iron pipe with 2-inch wrought-iron pipe. Please tell us how many runs of 2-inch returns will be required to take the place of the following 4-inch: Four 4-inch pipes under each of two benches and five 4-inch under another bench. We intend to use 2-inch for returns under the benches. How large should the feed be for each of these? The first two coils are eighty-five feet long and the other is 100 feet long. All the flows will be taken off from a large main flow at the end of the houses.

J. N. C.

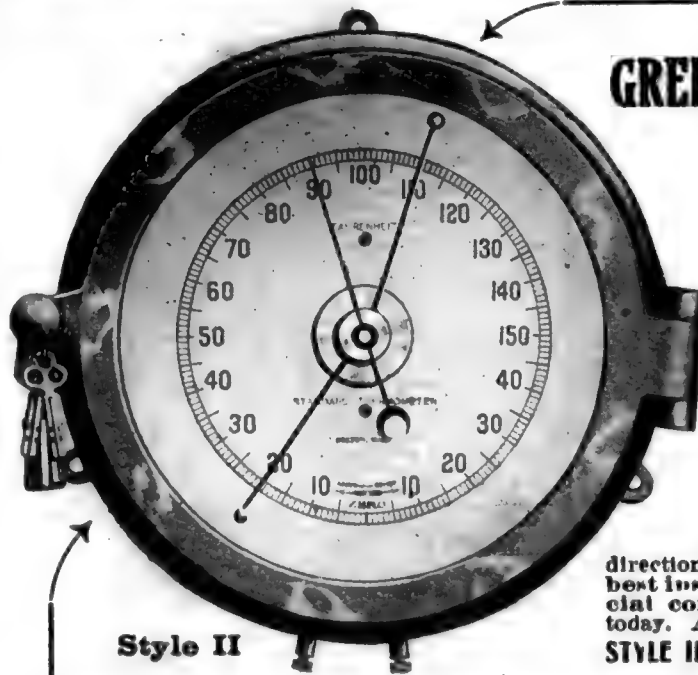

As a rule it will be advisable to substitute two 2-inch pipes for each 4-inch, so that there will be eight 2-inch pipes under two of the benches and ten under the other. A 3-inch pipe will be needed to supply each of the coils. If overhead flow pipes are run through the house and connected with the coils at the farther end, the number of the 2-inch returns in each coil may be reduced by two.

If 2½-inch flows are used, there should not be more than four 2-inch returns in each coil. In that case, five flows and five return coils of four pipes each will be required.

IN SOUTHWESTERN OHIO.

Please give me a heating plan for a greenhouse of the following dimensions: It is 30x50 feet, fourteen feet to the ridge and has 6-foot walls, with two feet of glass in the north wall and three feet of glass in the south wall. The east gable is glass; the west end adjoins a stable, which will be used as a boiler room. Hot water heat will be used. The boiler pit is three or four feet deep. The temperature desired is 60 degrees when the outside temperature is at zero. What size of expansion tank will be necessary? Should it be put above the boiler or can it be put in the greenhouse? The house will contain five benches, three of them five and a half feet wide and the other two three feet wide. Will a boiler rated at 3,050 feet be much too large for a house of this size? E. S.

The house will require three 2½-inch flow pipes and eighteen 2-inch returns. One flow pipe can be supported on each of the side walls and the other from the ridge. Five or six of the return pipes can be carried on each wall and for

New

I should like to make a little inquiry with regard to the Chicago Pump Co.'s Automatic Electric Condensation Pump.

Has it given satisfaction?
Do you think it has saved any on the amount of coal consumed?

About how much is your electric bill per month to run it?

Is it more economical than a trap?

Thanking you in advance for your reply..

Respectfully,

Wm Swinbank

Count!

We use it on 240,000 feet of glass. Costs about $5.00 to $8.00 per month for electricity. Makes more even heat, on lower pressure than traps and takes 40% less boiler capacity. It's a success.

SOUTH PARK CO.

CHICAGO PUMP CO., 1059 Fulton St., CHICAGO, ILL.

The Users Of The... Hughson Regulating Valve

are all satisfied with the results it has given, and many duplicate orders is the proof. This Valve will maintain a steady pressure on the low side, no matter how the initial pressure fluctuates. By carrying 40 or 50 pounds pressure on the boiler and setting the valve to carry 5 or 10 pounds on the line, you always have a reserve to fall back on in case of a sudden drop in temperature. Our new catalogue is just out and if you contemplate making any changes you had better get one—it is yours for the asking.

the others can be distributed under the wide benches. A boiler rated for 1,000 square feet of radiating surface is about what is needed and one of 3,050 feet of radiation will be much larger than can be used economically, unless additional houses are to be added later. The expansion tank should hold anywhere from five to ten gallons and should be connected with the highest part of the flow pipe.

PIPING IN SASKATCHEWAN.

We have a small greenhouse, running east and west, which we wish to heat to grow lettuce and general market crops. The house is 12x100 feet and nine feet from path to ridge, with 8-foot rafters. The walls are three feet high and are built of two-ply lumber. The beds will be solid. The temperature required will be about 50 degrees, with the outside temperature possibly as low as 60 degrees below zero, as we are located in central Saskatchewan, Canada. There are two doors in the house, one at each end; the one at the west end is closed all winter. We expect to put the boiler house at the east end. Kindly inform us as to the best manner of piping and the amount required. J. C. K.

Having had no experience in the heating of greenhouses in a temperature of 60 degrees below zero, the answer will necessarily be largely theoretical. The use of four 2½-inch flow pipes and twelve 2-inch returns is suggested. One flow could be placed upon each plate and the other a foot or so below the ridge. Four returns can be upon each side wall and the others in two coils in the middle walk, if there is one. In case there is no place other than upon the walls, for the returns, they can be placed there and the flow pipes can be arranged as suggested.

SETTING A BOILER.

I should like to ask whether there is anything gained by having eighteen to thirty inches of space under a boiler. Our boiler is a common steam boiler, sixteen feet long, with fifty 4-inch flues. It is set ten inches above the pit floor and the ash and grate pit is dug deeper. We are told that a boiler should be set two feet above the bottom of the pit and that a brick wall should be built to within ten inches of the boiler, at the end of the grate. Does this empty space at the back of the grate serve any purpose, except to contain the ashes and save cleaning so often? We use a hot water system. We are also told that there should be a chamber three feet wide at the end of the boiler, where the smoke enters the flues. Our flue door is eighteen inches from the end of the boiler, which gives ample room for the smoke to enter the flues, if that is the only duty this space is to perform. J. T.

While it is not essential that the space under the boiler, toward the rear, be as much as thirty inches, it would seem that rather more than ten inches would be desirable. The reason for having a space of thirty inches is that it is usually the same as on the other side of the bridge, where a depth of thirty inches is required for the fire-box and ash-pit. Eighteen inches of depth at the rear of the bridge would

WHAT THE USERS SAY ABOUT KROESCHELL BOILERS

Use Kroeschell Boilers and Kroeschell Generators and Piping System:

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

"The Kroeschell Generator purchased from you some time since is giving excellent satisfaction. It not only adds to the capacity of the boiler on account of the increased circulation of the hot water, and consequently less piping is required, but it also seems to maintain a steadier and more even temperature all over the houses where it is in use. For instance, the new house I have just completed, 43 ft. wide by 265 ft. long, and piped according to your instructions, is not varying more than two degrees all over the house at any time, and I consider that remarkable for so large a house. Another advantage is that where roses are grown, sulphur applied to the pipes for checking mildew is much more effective."

STEPHEN MORTENSEN, Southampton, Pa.

power of a boiler which will heat the whole range successfully. J. J. L.

If there is no glass in the exposed side walls of the houses, the 24-foot house can be heated with steam by the use of 860 square feet of radiation; the 27-foot houses will each need 920 square feet and the 42-foot house will require 1,500 square feet, making a total for the four houses of 4,200 square feet. To supply this amount of radiating surface, it will be well to use a boiler rated for about sixty horse-power. This would contain about sixty-four 3-inch tubes if twelve feet long, and forty-eight tubes if sixteen feet in length.

Rice Lake, Wis.—C. A. Hannemann has built an addition to his greenhouse. The new space will be used for carnations.

Islip, N. Y.—Kerr & Skinner have an up-to-date plant. Beginning on a small scale three years ago, they have worked up a good retail connection. They have a fine cactus dahlia, a seedling that originated locally. It is an intense orange scarlet, of immense size, and seems to be well worthy of distribution.

The Market.

Trade shows a steady improvement. For a while after the summer holidays there was about as little life in the people as in the business, but the first few days of increasing trade were all the medicine needed. There are lots of fine flowers in the market. Roses were never before as good at this season of the year and the same might be said of carnations, especially Enchantress. Lilies, Beauties, valley and orchids are coming in quantities and are good. Asters are about all gone and what are left are not of much account. There are still some good gladioli. Greens of all kinds are plentiful.

Various Notes.

The last of the summer vacationists have returned, including Mrs. E. A. Williams, who waited until the last minute before leaving her cottage by the lake.

Fred Burki is among those who like a good machine and may frequently be seen driving his new Packard car, which he just received last week.

De Forest Ludwig has returned to Cornell, after spending the holidays with his parents.

John Harris, who is interested in the amusement business in Toledo, O., returned last week to push the cut flower business, which is his first choice.

Randolph & McClements think they have the finest stock of crotons in this county and they have some good reasons for thinking so.

Wm. Lauch, of New Galilee, is consigning to the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. quantities of fine carnations. Charles Koenig, of Millvale, is sending to the same firm especially fine valley and lilies.

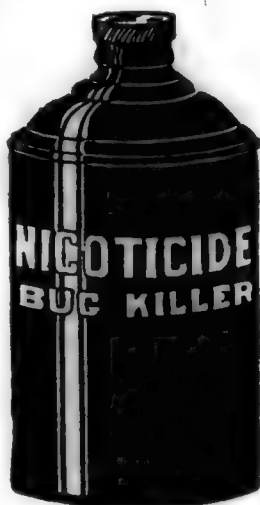

C. Goodwin & Sons, of Bridgeville, Pa., have several houses of chrysanthemums which could not look better, but will not cut many before October 15.

H. L. Blind & Bros. report their summer business to have been ahead of last year in both stores and say the indications are for a splendid fall business. They grow mums, roses and carnations, which are looking fine.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

NEW YORK BELTING

PACKING CO. LTD
91-93 CHAMBERS ST. NEW YORK

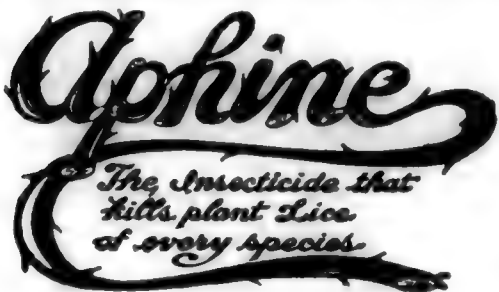

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet.
An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

BUFFALO.The Market.

Up to the present writing we have not had a killing frost. As a result we are still using outdoor stock, but the bulk of it is poor. Asters have almost outgrown their usefulness, which is quite unusual for this locality. Gladioli are getting scarce, but are nicely replaced by dahlias, which are coming in smaller quantity. Bulbs are now being handled largely, as the imports have arrived.

Various Notes.

The contract for the new city greenhouses has just been awarded to the Lord & Burnham Co. The greenhouses are to be used for growing stock for outdoor use around the city. William F. Kasting is one of the members of the park board.

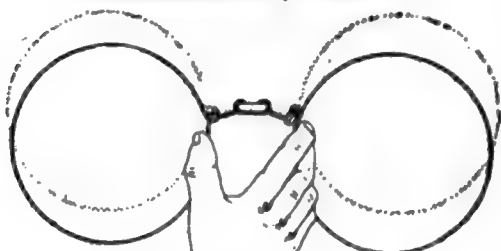

The Florists' Club will take up its duties again in October. It was first proposed that the club hold a show this year on just the same plan and scale as last year. It has been decided, however, to call it off for good reasons. To hold the show on a smaller scale does not appeal to all and so the idea is dropped for the season of 1911.

R. A. S.

MADISON, N. J.

The Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society, after its two months' vacation, met in Masonic hall September 13. About forty members were on hand. Everything is progressing toward a successful flower show. With some new classes just added, there will be over eighty. There is plenty of room for the boys that helped us make the great show we had last year.

The secretary has now quite a number of entries filed and is ready for more. The show will be held in this city this year. Several additional rooms have been secured. We have outgrown our old clothes. E. R.

FISHER CARNATION CLIPS

The method of support for Carnation Plants is either a great expense (if ring or patent supports are used), or if the string with twine method is adopted, it becomes a long, thankless job, to be done over and over each season. Here is a simple device that will remedy both expense and labor.

Directions for the use of Fisher Clips

Stretch No. 18 galvanized wire the length of the bench between each row of carnations, but let the two outside wires over the sides of the bench be of No. 10 galvanized wire. Cut No. 18 galvanized wire into lengths the width of your bench and on each end fasten a Fisher Clip. Two men then can walk along each side of the bench and clip the cross wires on the No. 10 side wire with the Fisher Clip just as fast, almost, as they can walk. It is understood, of course, that each cross wire is put between each row of carnations, thus forming in connection with the length wires a square frame or square support for each plant. As the plants grow and need more support a second and even a third set of wire stringers are run in the same manner. When your plants are ready to throw out, just unclip your cross wires and bundle away for use the next season.

The Fisher Clip is easily fastened to the side wires, literally with a "grip of steel;" they will not slide, but are warranted to hold just where they are clipped in place. They are made of heavy sheet steel and are copper plated to prevent rusting, and are time savers, for two men working with these clips can string or support as many carnation plants in an hour as it takes two men in five hours using the old white cotton stringing method. Also consider these clips in the light of an investment; once purchased they will last as long as you grow carnations.

COST OF THIS METHOD

Calculation based on a bench 100 feet long, 5 feet wide, planted to carnations, consisting of 6 rows with 120 plants to a row. This means
500 ft. of No. 18 gal. wire, for length wires, 3 1/2 lbs. at 5 1/2 c per lb.....$0.20
200 ft. of No. 10 gal. wire, for side length wire, 10 lbs. at 3 1/2 c per lb..... .35
600 ft. of No. 18 gal. wire, for cross wire, 4 lbs. at 5 1/2 c per lb..... .22
240 Fisher Clips, 2 for each row, one on each side of bench, $5 per 1000.. 1.20
Total.....$1.97

As three sets of wires and cross supports are used, the total cost of the supports will not be over $6.00, furnishing ample support for 720 carnation plants, on a bench 100 feet long by 5 feet wide, and there will be no additional cost to you next year.

COMPARISON

A three ring wire support costs about $32.00 per 1000, and will support 2000 plants, or $1.60 per 100 plants; one bench has 720 plants, costing $11.50 for this style of support against a cost of only $6.00 by the use of the Fisher Clip. Your saving will be 50% in cost and by using the Fisher Clip your plants will be better supported.

Try a Few and be Convinced.

INDIANAPOLIS.The Market.

Trade showed considerable improvement last week. The people returning home from their summer vacations, the opening of the schools, and numerous store openings, combined with funeral work, livened up matters greatly, but the market remains about the same as at the last report.

Various Notes.

John Heidenreich and family have returned from a ten weeks' trip through England, Holland, France and Germany.

Baur & Steinkamp say that they have had exceedingly good luck in the propagation of poinsettias this year and that the sale of them has been so heavy that they are about sold out.

Thomas Peet, of Cambridge City, was a visitor this week, having come to attend the Odd Fellows' encampment.

A. Wiegand & Sons were busy with store decorations this week.

W. P. Craig, of Philadelphia, was a visitor last week.

The October meeting of the State Florists' Association is to be held at New Castle, Tuesday, October 3. Florists from Indianapolis and vicinity leave on the Indianapolis, New Castle and Toledo traction car at 1 p. m. It is expected there will be a large attendance at this meeting, as New Castle is always an interesting place for the florists.

Oliver Steinkamp is spending a few days in Richmond this week.

Mr. Christensen, with the Hummel & Downing Co., Milwaukee, spent a few days with the trade this week.

H. L. W.

GREAT NECK, L. I.

W. W. Matthews, well known as a large and successful raiser of Freesia Purity, has several additional benches planted to this popular flower. Mums are also extensively grown. An average of four buds to each plant is found most profitable for market.

George Lasher makes carnations and freesias his specialties and has a modern plant, well stocked.

Robert Thomas, gardener to Mrs. Eldridge, has a pure white amaryllis, with the calla as one parent. The result is a vigorous seedling and a valuable addition to this species. He has also a fine sport of Carnation Enchantress that is quite promising. M.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

KANSAS FAIR WREATH.

Cut flowers, and especially the made-up work, are becoming an increasingly attractive feature of the state fairs. The designs seem to make a greater hit than any other display of the florists' handicraft. At the Kansas state fair this year, H. R. Fisher, of Marysville, took all the blue ribbons for designs and his wreath, lyre and cross were not only a center of attraction for the public equal, almost, to the prize bull, the mammoth pumpkin and the elusive pea, but they elicited the favorable comment of the management, which found the feature one to be encouraged.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a snapshot of Mr. Fisher's wreath, which was shown on an easel. The body of the design was of the magnolia leaves that have become known of late as the first aid of the design-maker. The lasting qualities of these leaves are such that they may be carried in stock for an indefinite time, and all the supply houses are doing a big business in them, somewhat at the expense of galax leaves. With a basket of imperishable magnolia leaves and some ribbon always on hand, the retail florist is in position to make an attractive design for any occasion, at a moment's notice, almost regardless of his supply of other material.

MUMS IN DESIGN WORK.

For Windows and in Sprays.

A chrysanthemum window may be arranged to look like an orchard or garden. Along the front of the window, close to the glass, make a hedge of one kind of smaller-sized blooms or blooming plants, perhaps pompons. If cut flowers are used, a number of jars should be set close together and covered. The jars should be of about equal capacity and height, so that the hedge shall be neat and trim. Bronze would be a good color for the hedge, and yellow for the exhibit flowers proper. Hard some specimens of yellow mums, one to a tall vase, may be set quite close together. They should be seen quite a distance above the hedge, in sufficient numbers to make a stunning display.

For a break in this arrangement or for a separate window, make a chrysanthemum tree after the style of the standard plants. Use large, long-stemmed flowers in a high trumpet vase. Such flowers as are not strong, but particularly long-stemmed, will be the most serviceable. Wire them, if necessary, to keep them in the form of an umbrella-shaped tree. The flowers and their foliage will form the top of the tree, and the vase will make a good trunk, if wrapped with bark. If this design is used as the sole window display, the hedge described in the first design will make a good finish, while some low-growing plants of harmonious color may be planted as a ground, or autumn leaves may be strewn as a groundwork.

The Guiding Principle.

In order to use any flowers intelligently one must grasp something of the character of the flowers, for they have characters in much the same way as people have. The stem, the leaf and the branches, with their outlines, furnish the form; the manner in which they come together, and their extent, constitute the character. For illustration, take a chrysanthemum stalk of average size, with the foliage. It is comparatively straight, with no side lines except the foliage and perhaps a bud or two which has escaped the disbudding process. This, with the lines which expand into the leaf forms, key to the style of spray or other design which can most correctly be constructed from the grouping of these particular flowers.

Returning to the chrysanthemums—the stems being long and fairly straight, we have found the style of spray which is best suited to the chrysanthemum and will proceed to build on that plan. In the finished piece the lines of the stems should be seen as they come together easily and naturally to their source, or the point where they are tied, without any fussiness or cross lines.

The Making of a Mum Spray.

As a rule the finished mum spray is suffocatingly heavy, even for large, heavy flowers. The backgrounds are too solid. The mums require little more than their own foliage. Let the flowers stand out and up, well apart, well ventilated, with their full length of stem. This precaution—throwing the flowers well out and up from the supporting surface—is emphatically demanded for mums of the recurved type. Their own weight on a hard surface flattens the contour of the flowers. It bruises the soft texture and neutralizes the expression.

Do not mix different sizes promiscuously. Mixing the sizes is one of the things which, when well done, are stunning, but when carelessly done, are as makes a simple and nearly straight set of lines.

As an extreme in the other direction, make a little analysis of the forget-me-nots. Nearly every stem takes a decided curve at the tip; side branches are numerous and we have a rather complicated set of lines before we get through. Of what practical use is this analysis? Just this: It gives us the good as a mud pie. Let one size have a definite relation to the other and let the relation be clearly apparent, as in the case of the small mums in the hedge, with the larger ones of the principal exhibit, for the window design mentioned at the beginning of this article.

As a background for a mum spray try some natural wheat. Support from underneath by a stiff, light brush of wild smilax, huckleberry or autumn foliage. Bring the stems through and tie over the stems of the mums, in place of ribbon. Wild brier foliage in autumn tints gives a desirable tone to chrysanthemum baskets and sprays.

Other Flowers With Mums.

Mixing with other flowers, in the ordinary meaning of the term, is not to be tolerated with mums. If, however, with valley or Roman hyacinths, and one would likewise admire the exquisite veiling which Stevia serrata would throw upon a casket bunch of yellow mums, while equally desirable would be a streak of brilliant ampelopsis with the berries, streaked through from the stem to the tip of a fine, large spray of light cream mums. As delightful a combination would be a long-stemmed spray of bronze mums with a tie of Perle roses.

Dahlia Display at A. Wiegand & Sons', Indianapolis, September 26, 1911.

it means the introduction of some other flower in streaks, showers, stem, tie or veiling effects, many of them will be welcome additions. For instance, a spray of medium-sized heliotrope mums may be tied with a spray of American Beauty buds, but when it comes to laying in a Beauty and a mum and a Beauty and a mum—never, for the sake of both Beauties and mums.

One could look with pleasure upon a spray of white mums showered with violets, or a spray of pink showered

A quick analysis of the style of flower and an intelligent blending of size and kind, then, characterize both fine taste and catchy designing.

G. B.

WIDTH VERSUS LENGTH.

The average flower store is deep and narrow, but a good many retailers are coming to see an advantage in the store that is wide and shallow. The first such stores were built in these proportions to meet the necessities imposed by the shape of the space available, as was the case with the Muir store shown in the accompanying illustrations. It stands on Michigan avenue, in Chicago, and covers the front of a range of greenhouses, giving an attractive appearance where nothing else would be in keeping, on one of the best city streets. But the wide front has many advantages. Probably the first of these is the opportunity for display; the store certainly makes a vastly better showing to the stream of people passing than would be the case were the front to consist of only one window, as is usual with narrow stores. Here are fifty-five feet of plate glass and the window decorator has scope for the display of all his abilities. But another decided advantage in the shallow store is that the customer who enters gets a look at the entire place. How many retailers have noticed with regret that customers seldom get to the back of their deep stores; that it is practically dead space after the first thirty feet or so? Did you ever notice that the big, popular bargains advertised by the department stores are almost always found, when one looks for them, in some far corner? They are trying to draw the people into the dead space. The florist with the shallow store has no dead space, and the wider his store is the more live space he has. People will walk back and forth across the front of a wide store who will not walk to the rear of a deep but narrow one. One of the pictures shows the street front of the Muir store and the other shows the view from one side toward the other, with the show windows on the right and the office, refrigerator and ribbon case on the left. The store proper is only twenty feet deep.

RETAIL ADVERTISING.

That florist selling at retail who makes no use of his local newspapers is neglecting the most powerful trade influence in his community. Every florist ought to advertise—it's not necessary, perhaps, but "out of sight, out of mind," is as true today as ever it was. There is no way one can keep in sight of so many people as by carrying steadily an advertisement in the paper read by the people you want to reach.

What the advertisement should be depends on many things, but it should by Wide Frontage of Muir's Retail Store, on Michigan Avenue, Chicago.

Muir's Michigan Avenue Store is Fifty-five Feet Wide and Twenty Feet Deep.

all means make some direct offer. "A sign is for the man who wants to find you; an advertisement is for the man you want to find," is the way one of the close thinkers puts it—yet too many advertisements, so called, are merely signs.

Here is a reproduction of an advertisement that a Toledo florist carries in local papers, changing the wording frequently enough to keep the offer always fresh. It pays. Start something like it this season and you will find it helps your business grow.

SPIRÆA QUEEN ALEXANDRA.

Will you kindly give cultural directions for forcing Queen Alexandra spiræa in the next issue of The Review?
W. B.

The beautiful peach-pink spiræa, Queen Alexandra, is not so suitable for early forcing as Japonica, astilboides, Gladstone or grandiflora. It can be flowered in fairly good shape for Easter, but is much better later, being seen at its best during the month of May and the early part of June, and it is a splendid subject to grow for Memorial day trade, its flowers easily commanding double the prices of the older white spiræa.

Pot the clumps when received, after first soaking them in a tub of water. Stand them where they will get some frost. Easter, 1912, comes earlier than in 1911, and in order to get nice plants in flower place the plants in a brisk, moist heat about the middle of January. They must have plenty of heat and moisture all the time. For Memorial day, start the plants about March 15 to 25. As the flowers open, stand the plants in a cooler and shaded house; if direct sun hits the flowers they soon lose their beautiful pink color. Feed the plants well when in active growth and be careful only to fumigate in light doses, as the foliage easily scorches.

CLEMATIS FROM SEED.

Would you please give us information as to how and when to sow Clematis paniculata?
D. N. C.

Collect the seed when ripe; November would be a suitable time. You can given, as hard freezing will not hurt the seed in the least. If you have not the necessary coldframe sashes at your disposal, make a bed three to three and one-half feet wide outdoors on a gentle slope, and sow the seed there. Mulch with coarse straw or leaves to prevent heaving by the action of frost. Remove the mulch in early spring. The seedlings will not appear in any considerable numbers before the end of May, and many will come later. This clematis is easily raised from seed. With freshly gathered seed to use, they will germinate as thickly as mustard and cress.

NAME OF PLANT.

I am sending you a plant under separate cover and should like to know the botanical and the common name. Please tell me, also, when to propagate them in order to have them for May 15, 1912. Also tell me whether it pays to grow them, what size of pots they should be grown in and in what temperature.
J. G.

The plant is Santolina Chamæcyparissus incana, commonly called lavender cotton. This plant is useful in carpet bedding, on account of its silvery foliage. It requires to be trimmed in the same way as alternantheras. Good sized individual plants are also effective for dotting in carpet beds. The plant is of the easiest possible culture and propagates readily from cuttings, which can be taken either now or in the spring. The best plan is to lift and pot up a few old plants, airing them over winter in a cool house, and take cuttings about the end of February. A suitable size of pots to grow them in is 3-inch and they will require some pinching. Un-sow the seed at once or wait until spring. If only a small number are required, use flats of light, sandy soil and store in a coldframe over winter. If larger quantities are wanted, sow in coldframes in late fall or early spring, covering the seeds only lightly. No protection other than sashes need be

PAPER WHITES FOR CHRISTMAS.

What time should I start Paper Whites so as to have them in bloom for Christmas? I want to grow them in benches in a greenhouse in a temperature of 50 to 52 degrees. E. H. H. F.

Plant the bulbs in the benches at once in order to have them in flower for Christmas. A better plan is to grow them in flats containing four inches of soil. When this is done it is easy to afford, holes can be punched in the slab while it is yet soft.

For supports for the bench I use lumber about the same as in all wood construction benches, except that I run three stringers to a 3-foot bench, lengthwise of the bench, to lay the slabs on. I use common 1 x 4 yellow pine, turned on edge. It has so little surface exposed to the action of drip that I find they last several years. I use 1 x 6 cypress boards for edges, set on the edge of the concrete bottom and fastened to the posts supporting the bench with wagon tire iron made to fit the case.

Teicher's Giant-flowering Mammoth Ten Weeks' Stocks.

move them to a cool cellar or house if they chance to come on a little too early. You can, however, lower the temperature of your house and partly accomplish the same purpose. The flat system is, however, preferable in many ways to planting directly in the benches. C. W.

ANOTHER CONCRETE BENCH.

I get so many good pointers from The Review that I want to tell you how I make concrete benches. I have never seen any made as I make them, and think I have the cheapest and most easily constructed bench yet.

I use cypress edge boards with a concrete bottom. I make slabs one-half inch thick and as long as the bench is wide, using three parts sand, one part cement and one part hydrate lime, using expanded metal lath for reinforcing. The metal lath comes in sheets, eighteen inches wide and eight feet long, which cuts for a 3 foot and 5-foot bench without waste. It costs but 14 cents per square yard.

I use a frame made half an inch larger than the sheet of metal and one-half inch thick, made of wood. On a smooth floor (I use my basement floor, which is cemented) I spread a paper to keep the slab from sticking to it, lay my frame on the paper, run a thin coat of the concrete on the paper, lay the metal lath on top of it and run on a coat of concrete to level up with my frame. I then remove the frame and am ready for another. Any man can make one of these slabs in two or three minutes. If more drainage is wanted than a crack every eighteen inches will

Figuring cement at 40 cents per sack, sand at 8 cents per hundred, metal lath at 14 cents per square yard, and hydrate lime at 25 cents per sack, this is cheaper than a wood bench and can be constructed in as short a time, not counting time to dry the slabs.

My boiler house is also made of cement plaster on metal lath, and marked off. I find it cheaper than lumber, and it will last forever.

If you think this way of making benches has any merits, and care to publish it for the benefit of any others who may care to try these concrete benches, you may do so. It seems to me it has several good points. I have not used them long enough to find out the bad ones. It is cheap, quickly constructed and can be removed and replaced at will. Loyd C. Bunch.

ROOT GROWTHS, GOOD AND BAD.

I should like to have you explain what those little globules are on the roots of clover and peas. Are they parts of the organism of the roots or a parasitic growth?

In a textbook of entomology I have learned that every gall fly has its own distinct gall on leaves, stems, crowns or roots. Please give me a description of the different gall flies and galls affecting the roots and lower stems of rose bushes and violets; also, a description of the eel-worm, its work on the roots, how it affects the growth of rose bushes and how it can be most readily detected. J. F. D.

The nodules on the roots of peas, clover and other leguminous plants are produced by certain nitrogen-gathering bacteria, and hence a plant on which they are found is benefited by them. Each genus of this family seems to have its own species of bacteria; thus, the clover bacteria will not develop nodules upon alfalfa. As nitrogen is the most expensive of the elements required as food by plants, and as it is found in large quantities in the air, it is important that these bacteria exist in the soil, to be used by leguminous crops. If not present it will pay to add them, either by inoculating the soil by means of an artificial culture or by scattering soil, which is known to be inoculated, over the surface and dragging it in.

The galls upon the roots of roses and violets are not due to gall flies, but are generally produced by what are known as nematodes, minute worms. These are especially troublesome in soil that is either poorly drained or overwatered. When a soil has become infested with nematodes it will be best to discard it, although it is generally possible to destroy the worms by steaming the soil.

The name eel-worm is sometimes applied to nematodes and accurately describes their appearance. Their presence can be most easily detected on the roots of roses and violets by looking for galls, which are rounded enlargements usually about one-sixteenth of an inch in diameter.

NEW FORCING STOCKS.

Recently much attention has been attracted in Europe by the new ten weeks' stocks raised by Paul Teicher, of Striegau, Germany. These are adapted to forcing, as pot plants or for cutting, and in response to an inquiry Mr. Teicher sends the following description:

"From March to May there is always much demand for stocks, especially at Memorial day. They are gladly bought and well paid for. I have cultivated a number of sorts which are excellent for forcing, being in bloom at the above specified time.

"The cultivation is easy, and by that especially worth while, so that upon the same beds several crops of stocks can be forced, one after another. By sowing from September to January, the young plants are to be then transplanted into greenhouses or coldframes. The greenhouses must be cool at night, not warmer than 50 degrees; only by intense sunlight the temperature of the air can be allowed to go up to 65 degrees.

"I have classified my ten weeks' stocks for forcing into three races, the large-flowering dwarf pyramidal ten weeks' stocks; Teicher's giant-flowering mammoth column ten weeks' stocks and large-flowering perpetual ten weeks' stocks (Empress Augusta Victoria).

"The large-flowering dwarf pyramidal ten weeks' stocks are the earliest. They produce a great many of double-flowering plants, and can also be used for cut flowers as well as for cultivation in pots. There now are six named colors and varieties in this class: Snowflake, snow-white, wall-flower-leaved; Rose Teicher, delicate light rose; Kate Teicher, porcelain-blue; Ruby, fiery red; Mrs. Mary Teicher, soft, delicate salmon-colored; Sapphire, deep sapphirine blue.

"The giant-flowering mammoth column ten weeks' stocks are only producing true plants of one stalk and are marking out a high percentage of double flowering plants, about eighty per cent. The individual flower spikes bear themselves erectly on slender, hard stems and produce often from fifteen to twenty blossoms. They are loosely and gracefully formed, so that every individual flower is of value. The flowers are of beautiful round form and gigantic, sometimes even of doubleness. Its color is pure snow-white. The foliage is long and dark green.

"The large-flowering perpetual ten weeks' stock, Empress Augusta Victoria, has a fine pyramidal branching growth, attaining a height of twenty-four inches. It forms a grand, pyramidal-shaped bouquet, with long flower spikes. The flowers are bright, silvery, delicate light lilac with metallic luster, a color which, in such intensity, has not yet appeared in any other stocks. The individual blossoms, which are of extraordinary size, are borne on large stems, which give them additional value for arranging in vases and for bouquets."

LAWN PLANTS DURING DROUGHT.

[A paper by J. T. D. Fulmer, of Des Moines, Ia., read at the ninth annual meeting of the Society of Iowa Florists, at Des Moines, August 30, 1911.]

The subject assigned to me is one we have all had to study during the summer that is now drawing to a close, for in my experience this has been the driest of them all.

I have found mulching a great help when it can be done, but when the drought starts as early as it did last spring one is obliged to cultivate the young plants, and the hoe must be frequently used, though not to a great depth.

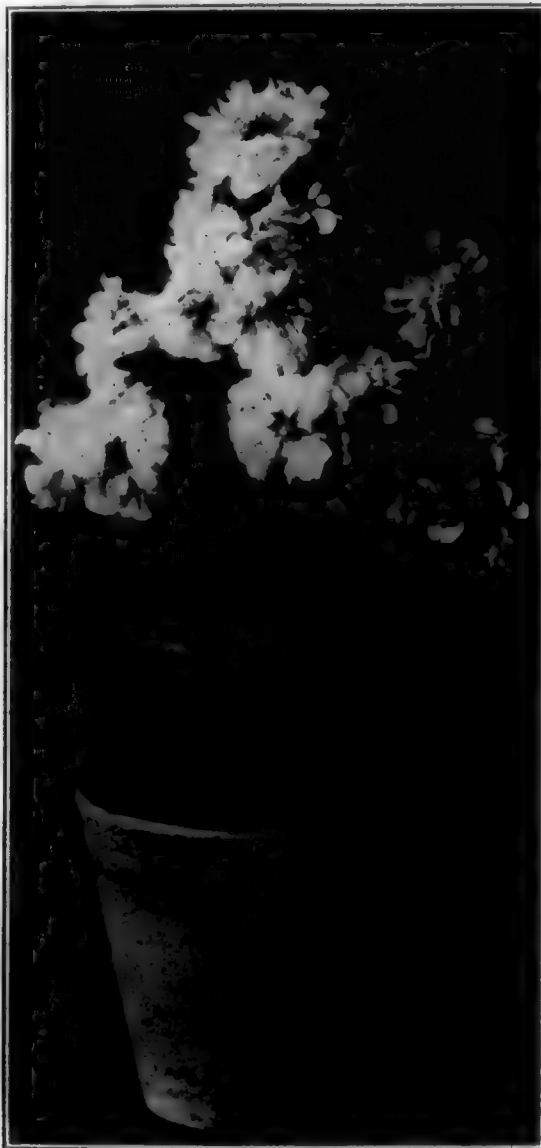

Artificial Watering.

We often hear the old remark that "water does not take the place of rain." This, I must say, is erroneous, for we all know good crops are grown in the greenhouses, where it never rains. So, I say, water your plants in the park or on the lawn, but be sure to supply enough water to be equivalent to a good rain, which is from one and a half to two and a half inches at a time. This is done by means of a good revolving sprinkler, allowing it to run from two to three hours before it is moved to another location. Follow this the next day with the hoe, and the loose soil will act as a mulch, thus keeping the earth moist for several days.

Right and Wrong Watering.

But, let me repeat, when you water be sure that the soil is thoroughly wet, for a light watering with the sprinkling can is not only of no account, but is a positive harm, for when the surface only is watered, the roots of the plants are encouraged to come up for the moisture, instead of going down for moisture. Thus we soon have most of the roots close to the top of the ground, whereas, with a thorough watering, the roots penetrate deeply into the soil.

Fortunate, indeed, is he who has a good water supply in time of a drought, for without it we can only recommend constant stirring of the soil, with mulching where it is possible. But with plenty of water and judicious management, the drought problem is solved.

ly crusted with San Jose scale. This will soon kill your plants unless attended to as soon as possible. You cannot apply any sufficiently strong remedy to kill the scale until the foliage has gone. Then spray your lilacs with the lime-sulphur solution, or with one of the soluble oil solutions. Use a fine spray nozzle and be sure to wet every vestige of wood. To make sure, give another spraying in spring just before growth starts. Spray all your lilacs—it will be money well expended. C. W.

SPENCER PEAS FOR WINTER.

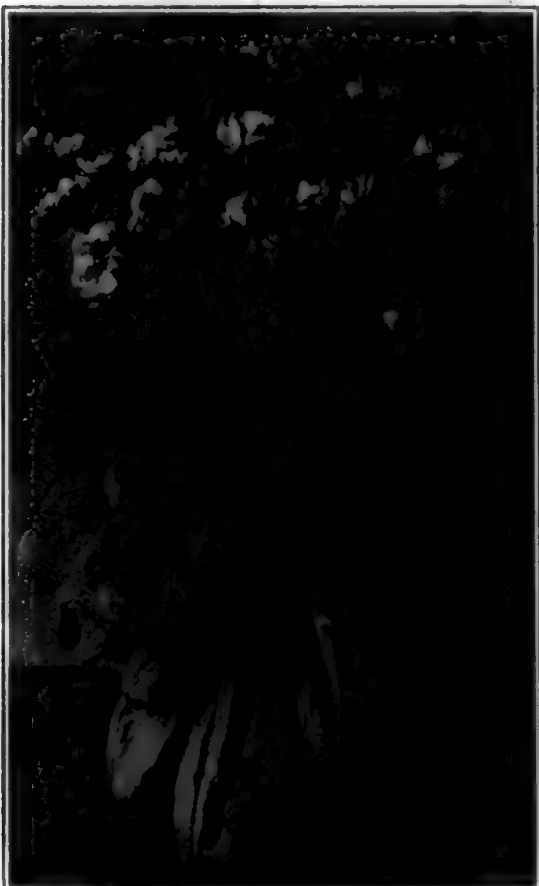

Are the Spencer sweet peas good for winter flowering? I noticed that others were recommended in The Review for July 27. I have the Spencers growing now, six inches high, but want the best, even if I do have to sow again.

S. M.

The Spencer type of sweet peas is not suitable at all for winter flowering. They are excellent sown after Christmas for spring crops, but they will not flower at all in winter. Suitable winter varieties are: Christmas White, Watchung, Mont Blanc, Florence Denzer, all pure white; Christmas Pink, similar in color to the old Blanche Ferry, an excellent forcer; Mrs. F. J. Dolansky, pale pink; Mrs. A. Wallace and Wallacea, lavender; Mrs. William Sim, salmon pink; Mrs. W. W. Smalley, satin pink. By sowing at once you will get flowers about Thanksgiving.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Lilies.

The bulbs of the Formosa type of longiflorums are now at hand and should be potted without delay, using a 5-inch or 6-inch pot for each bulb, according to its size. These lilies have steadily grown in popularity. They have generally proved almost immune from disease, which is a great point in their favor. They are hybrids, and a single case will contain quite a variety of types. Some will grow eighteen inches high; others will not bloom until five or six feet high. Occasionally they disappoint our expectations by sending up one or two flowers to the spike, but they average much better than this. As pot plants for Easter they are not so good as Longiflorum giganteum or multiflorum, but for cutting they are superior to either of these varieties. We have had them in flower at Christmas, and some from the same batch bloomed for Easter. However, any retail grower who wants cut lilies which are clean should give this a trial. All who have once grown it want it again.

The bulbs of Harrisii, potted about August 1, should now be well rooted and have growths several inches long. These are useful at both Thanksgiving and Christmas. When once the pots are full of roots, give them a house with a night temperature of 65 degrees. Avoid overwatering until the plants are in actual growth, but spray over freely and keep tobacco dust scattered over the tops to keep green aphids in check.

Cold storage longiflorums, once they are well rooted, want much the same treatment as Harrisii. Give them a brisk, moist heat, to keep them moving right along. A quantity of these will flower ahead of the Harrisii, and this is well, as there is always a good call for cut lilies in the fall and winter.

Lilium Speciosum.

Lilium speciosum from cold storage bulbs should have the flower buds now showing plainly. Do not subject this lily to the same warm treatment as the Harrisii and longiflorums. It likes cooler and more airy treatment, in order to produce the best class of flowers. Feed the plants well with liquid manure, as they will now be well pot-bound.

Lilium Candidum.

Lilium candidum should all be potted before this time. If not yet potted, lose no time in getting them into the soil, as they will only be dissipating their strength making roots and leaves in a dry shed. Those potted a few weeks ago will now have made considerable leaf growth. Keep them in a coldframe, and only place sashes over them to throw off heavy rains, which in the early stages of growth sometimes cause the bulbs and roots to decay, particularly if the weather is quite warm and humid. Expose the plants to all the early frosts. This is necessary to prepare them properly for forcing.

Paper White Narcissi.

Paper White narcissi of the earliest planting have already made some growth, and can be placed under the bench in a house kept anywhere from 55 to 60 degrees at night. Treated thus, they can be had in flower early in November. Later batches should be kept under the bench of a colder house or in a cellar. It is better to pot up or place in flats any bulbs still out of the soil, or they will fritter away much of their strength. The Roman hyacinths are slower in starting than the Paper Whites and should be covered with ashes until they make growths a couple of inches long, when they can be placed in a warm house and forced into bloom.

Pot-grown Ramblers.

Pot-grown rambler should now have their growths well made up. In order to ripen their wood better, they should be run drier at the roots, not to the extent of actual wilting or shriveling, but just enough to check further growth. In a couple of weeks these plants can be laid on their sides and further rested, in order to prepare them properly for early forcing. This work may seem needless, but try a few plants thus ripened up and an equal number which have been watered freely right along, and you will note quite a difference when they are forced. Of course, it is much too early to think of any forcing. The plants need several good freezings before that is done.

Mignonette.

We have just given supports to the early mignonette, sown early in July. Wires stretched lengthways of the house, with cross strings such as are used for carnations, answer well. The wire carnation supports may be used, but the other supports give the plants more play and will be found the more satisfactory. Look out sharply for the green worms, which will play havoc with the foliage. Fumigating must be done carefully, as mignonette is easily injured. A little air-slaked lime, blown through a powder bellows, will kill them, and hand-picking should be resorted to also. Keep the surface soil clear of weeds and well stirred. As the plants are now in active growth, a good water supply will be needed. Keep a low night temperature and do not use any fire heat except to keep the minimum at 40 degrees.

Cannas.

Cannas need not be dug until some days after frost has cut them down. Dig up the roots on a warm, sunny day. Do not shake off the soil too much, however. A shed or dry cellar containing shelves, where a night temperature anywhere from 40 to 50 degrees can be maintained, will suit them. Keep them away from the heaters. A cellar which will winter potatoes will usually answer equally well for cannas and gladioli.

CURLED LEAVES ON AFTERGLOW.

I am sending you, under separate cover, some samples of my Afterglow carnations. I purchased most of my plants this year and all were in excellent condition except Afterglow. I thought at the time the trouble was due to the extremely hot weather, but I find they do not improve much with the growth they have made inside. Can you tell me the trouble and the remedy for it?

W. L.

The curly leaves on the young growth on your Afterglow do not signify anything really serious. In fact, you will find these on this variety every year, to a greater or less extent, after you bench the plants. The check resulting from the transplanting, which unbalanced for a time the regular flow of sap, is what caused it, and as soon as the plants resume their natural growth this trouble will disappear. There is no disease about it. Some years ago, when we grew Mrs. Joost, we found the same condition every fall, but the variety was an easy grower and grew out of it quickly, leaving no trace of the trouble. Afterglow is not so easy to handle, and is apt to look rather discouraging for some time after being benched. After root action is resumed, however, it grows rapidly and by early winter it catches up with other varieties and surpasses most of them in quality. Afterglow is likely, also, to lose considerable of the lower foliage when lifted from the field.

By far the finest Afterglows we have ever seen were grown on the bench from the start. If you can afford the space, it will pay you well to grow it that way. Then there will be no trouble in losing foliage, or with curled foliage or spot diseases, while you are trying to get them restarted on the benches.

Geraniums

GERANIUM FOLIAGE BLIGHTED.

I am sending you some diseased leaves from my stock geranium plants, which have been outdoors all summer. About four weeks ago these spots began to show and the plants stopped growing. The flower buds do not develop; only one or two flowers develop and the rest dry up and die. The leaves finally turn yellow and die. Can you tell me cause and remedy for this?

I have taken cuttings from these plants and placed them in the greenhouse, but dipped them in a weak Bordeaux mixture first. Do you think that this disease would get on other kinds of plants next to them, and will they make good, strong plants?

W. D. G.

The rather sunless but humid weather experienced for some weeks is chiefly responsible for your geraniums becoming affected as you describe. A year ago, climatic conditions were different, being hot and dry, and geraniums flowered with a freedom seldom seen. There is little that can be done outdoors to check the spread of the blight, but cuttings taken from such plants and kept under glass are not likely to show any disease. At least this has been my experience. Dipping in Bordeaux will not hurt the cuttings, and if, perchance, any of the blight should show later, give them a spraying with it.

In making the cuttings, trim off the leaves quite closely and expose them to the fullest sunshine. Keep dry at the root after the first watering; not sufficiently dry to cause shriveling, but the outdoor cuttings are always soft and constant watering will rot many of them. You need not be under any apprehension about your other plants becoming affected. Conditions under glass, with a drier and more buoyant atmosphere, are not favorable to the spread of blight.

C. W.

VEGETABLES WITH GERANIUMS.

I should like to know how late I can buy rooted geraniums and have them in bloom for Decoration day. My house will be occupied until after the beginning of 1912. How long will it take to have blooms and buds from these, and what temperature is best for forcing them?

What is the proper time to sow tomato seed for strong plants, to be marketed from May 15? Would the temperature for geraniums be suitable for tomato plants?

In your judgment, what would be the more profitable crop from now until February—mushrooms or lettuce, bearing in mind that I have grown mushrooms and not lettuce, and that the price of mushrooms will average 40 cents per pound?

J. O. S.

You should get rooted cuttings of geraniums in the early part of November, to make nice, large plants for early spring sales. You can get them later in winter and still make nice plants, but they are harder to get and cost more in winter than in the fall, and they do not take up much room for a long time in 2-inch or 2½-inch pots. Get them this fall, if you can care for them. They do not want a high temperature, but seem to do best in about the same temperature as roses—58 to 60 degrees at night and 75 degrees on good, bright days. If necessary, they can be held quite cool after they are once started, provided you are careful about watering.

The best temperature for tomato plants is about the same as for the geraniums. Many growers plant the first tomato seed about March 1, but I find it too early. April 1 is early enough for the main crop, but some may be planted earlier and later.

ORCHIDS

CATTLEYA SHEATHS ROTTING.

Some of the flower sheaths on my Cattleya labiata are turning yellow and rotting. Since the bulbs were matured I have kept them dry, only spraying them over to prevent shriveling. Please let me know the cause of the trouble and how to prevent it. Perhaps I have kept the atmosphere too moist. I gave plenty of air on the sides, about one foot from the plants. Any information will be appreciated.

H. R.

All cattleyas require quite a good supply of water at the roots until the flowers are cut, after which they should be kept considerably drier until growths and roots are pushing actively. You have possibly done too much overhead spraying and kept the atmosphere overcharged with moisture. The cattleyas are still benefited by a spraying overhead during the morning on hot days. It should always be done so that the plants will be dry before night. C. labiata likes some top air as well as from the sides; in fact, the ventilators should never be closed at the top until colder nights come on. I am inclined to think that you must have damped among the plants too much, which caused the air to be too moist at night. A little fire heat would have relieved the situation and probably prevented the sheaths from decaying. A Dwarf Stone is the most satisfactory variety to grow for plant trade.

Lettuce will pay you better than mushrooms, unless you thoroughly understand the growing of the latter, but if you are sure you can get a crop of mushrooms they may pay you better than lettuce. A good crop of mushrooms would surely pay the better.

GERANIUM FOR NAME.

We are sending you, under separate cover, some geranium blossoms, and should be glad to know the names of the varieties. The blossoms are numbered and if you will name them according to number, we shall greatly appreciate it.

R. W.

I regret that the flowers were all too much withered to be recognizable. Shipped September 24, they were received September 30, rather a long time for geranium flowers to be out of water. If you will wait until the middle or end of October, when the weather will be cooler, and will send another lot of spikes, similarly packed, using, however, a light wooden or tin box in place of cardboard, I will try to name them. If you can also take a single flower of each variety, press them and number them on a sheet of paper, it will materially assist in naming them.

C. W.

possible cause of rot is also overfeeding. Most orchids stand some feeding, but it must be done with care, otherwise fine bulbs will be made up and the flowers lost. Another season, water these and any other cattleyas quite freely until the flowers have passed and keep a drier and more buoyant atmosphere and you should not have any of this trouble; also, do not keep the plants too heavily shaded.

C. W.

SHADING.

While we are still likely to get some clear and warm days, the nights are much cooler, with a greater amount of humidity in the form of dew. There are some plants which always need some protection from direct sunshine, and many ferns, palms and some other foliage plants are included in this list, but houses containing roses, carnations, violets, chrysanthemums and the general line of flowering plants require no shade from now on, unless it may be in the case of chrysanthemums when in flower, to prevent burning. Some plants, however, such as cyclamens, cinerarias, calceolarias, gesneras, late gloxinias and tuberous begonias, must be protected for some weeks longer, either with a little whitening on the glass, or, better still, some movable shade, like cheesecloth or lath shades. In cleaning the shading from the roofs of houses, it will be found that the early morning, with the dew on, is the best time for the work. Usually a rub with a long-handled brush, followed by a hosing down, will suffice. If this fails, some Dutch Cleanser or lye, lightly sprayed on or laid on with a mop, will soon soften the shade so that it can be removed.

was moved in May. Other shipments go to all the principal cut flower markets, even as far east as New York and Boston.

Much Skilled Labor Required.

Probably there is no crop which can be grown with less care and labor than the peony requires, but when cutting time arrives the florist who goes in extensively for peonies must be prepared to find a large amount of help. Especially is this the case in such a season as the one this year, when great heat brought the flowers out with a rush. A great many peony growers found it impossible to cut their flowers in such shape as to be suitable for storage. The cutting and handling is important—on it depends a large part of the value of the crop. Mr. Reiman is located three miles from the city of Vincennes. He has his regular greenhouse force as the nucleus for the small army of hands employed in the peony season. Eight or ten of his regular employees do the cutting, beginning early in the morning and, if possible, resting during the heat of the day, resuming work in late afternoon, so that the flowers may be cut in the coolest hours. He employs both men and women from Vincennes to help his regular force. When the blooms come in from the fields in clothes-baskets, they go to sorting tables in the packing shed. Here women sort the flowers under the direction of a keen-eyed, experienced forewoman. Those in certain stages of development only, depending on variety, will do for storage. If too open they must be sold at once. After the flowers are sorted they go into pails of water and are given a drink of at least two hours' duration. Putting green carnation dye in the water has shown that a peony flower will take up the dye within a half hour, but it has been

THE CUT FLOWER INDUSTRY.

Peonies by the Acre.

"Great oaks from little acorns grow," and from the planting of a few small roots big fields of peonies have come into existence.

Probably few florists appreciate the extent to which the peony is grown for cut flower purposes in certain sections of the central west. At Vincennes, in Indiana, W. A. Reiman is not content with twelve acres of peonies grown exclusively for the cut blooms—he is this season planting between two and three acres more.

Mr. Reiman began in the peony business by planting a few roots merely for his own amusement. When the plants became established and gave typical blooms he found they were in such good request among the customers who visited his greenhouses that he planted a small piece of ground with stock to supply cut flowers for his local trade. Then, and it must have been, he thinks, close to fifteen years ago, he began sending a few flowers each spring to a Chicago commission house. The returns were excellent and they induced him to go on adding to his field until now it includes full twelve acres of plants. There have been many predictions that the peony would be overdone as a Memorial day cut flower, but this has not been the case with Mr. Reiman; he never has had as many flowers as it has been possible to market at profitable prices; indeed, the prices have not declined at all within recent years. The returns have fluctuated from year to year in accordance with various crop and market factors, but there has been no sign, from his point of view, that the market was becoming surfeited with peonies. Otherwise there would be no such thing as planting over two acres more this season.

A Few Varieties Enough.

Mr. Reiman does not grow many varieties. There are quite a number of sorts in small quantity, but the old Whitleyi, or Queen Victoria, is his standby. There are better peonies, but there are none that beat it as a keeper and shipper. That is why eight acres of Mr. Reiman's twelve are in this one old standard cut flower variety.

Vincennes is located where there never is a failure in getting the crop for Decoration day. Ordinarily cutting begins in the first week of May and the heaviest crop is cut about the middle of the month, with some of the later sorts holding over until early in June. This year the entire crop was cut within a week, because of the sudden arrival of midsummer heat. The greater part of the crop still is consigned to a Chicago commission house, which puts the blooms in cold storage as fast as received, to hold them for the special Memorial day demand. This year, because of weather conditions, it was not possible to clean up, as is usually done, by May 30, but because of its excellent keeping qualities Queen Victoria was as good in June as in May and better prices were received for the stock unsold at Memorial day than for that part of the crop which found that two hours is as little time in water as can be given to insure good keeping quality, and four hours is given when possible.

Bunching, Packing and Shipping.

After the flowers have had their drink they go back to bunching tables, where thirteen identical buds are picked out and tied with the heads perfectly even. Then they go under a knife which cuts all the stems to the length of the shortest in the bunch, the sorters in the first place having graded to approximately even lengths.

After bunching and wrapping in paper, a different colored paper to indicate each variety, the bunches go into the shipping cases. Trips to the train are made twice a day, at noon and at evening. With thirty or forty people on the job, thousands of dozens can be handled in a day when the season is at its height.

For next year Mr. Reiman plans not only the additional acres of plants, but will build a cooling shed, a large ice house with ice chamber overhead and cool room beneath, in which to work his stock. He also is planning a shipping case to try icing the bunches, just as the wholesale houses do with shipments of cut flowers. It is not certain how this will work, but the aim is to avoid the heating in transit which has destroyed some of the shipments.

Not far from Mr. Reiman's peony fields there is a commercial cold storage warehouse. This year his crop was so far ahead of Decoration day that he felt it necessary to store in this warehouse some 8,000 blooms reserved for his own local trade. When these came out, May 29, they were found to give larger, better developed flowers, with better keeping qualities, and gave better all-around satisfaction to his customers than were given by the flowers fresh cut from the field.

Next season Mr. Reiman will have an auto truck to carry his harvest hands back and forth from Vincennes and to shorten the time between packing room and express office.

When asked for a portrait to accompany these notes, Mr. Reiman wrote: "I appreciate your desire to place my portrait or a picture of my peony field in The Review, but have neither. Nor do I care for too much publicity, rather pursuing the even tenor of my way, ambitious only to own and manage the largest peony farm in this country. I will plant between two and three acres this fall, making between fourteen and fifteen acres of peonies, and am now preparing ground for several acres next season."

THE CHRISTMAS ROSE.

With the advent of autumn, one's attention naturally is called to things that will lend beauty and variety to the monotony of winter. There are many things one can do to bring cheer and life to the otherwise dreary winter months. Window and porch boxes can be filled with evergreens. But perhaps there is nothing that gives more satisfaction or real pleasure than a bed or even a clump of Christmas roses, Helleborus niger. Its beautiful, dark-green foliage, which retains its brightness throughout the winter, is in itself attractive, but added to this is the charm of the beautiful, waxy-white flowers, which appear in amazing profusion at a time when all other flowers, even the lingering hardy chrysanthemums, have been discolored by frost. When Mother Earth has had her first covering of snow, then, when all vegetation is seared and when flowers are especially appreciated, the Christmas roses begin. The rain, the snow, the sleet and cold may come and go—bravely and persistently these little plants hold their own; and when a few days of sunshine warm the earth even a little, they send up their wealth of flowers, which, when perhaps at their best, are again frozen and covered with a foot or two of snow, there to remain till the elements again give them a chance, when they will resume their development and continue to do so all winter and spring. Few plants will stand freezing and thawing like the helleborus, and few plants possessing such interesting characteristics are so little known. It is deserving of a place in every collection of hardy plants.

The propagation of the helleborus is somewhat slow and it is due to this fact, perhaps, more than to anything else, that it has never become more popular. But when correctly handled, a goodly stock can be created in a few years. It is a good plan to lift the clumps in the autumn after the early or mid-season chrysanthemums are done, and plant a quantity of them in a cool house or pit with but little artificial heat, giving all the air possible at all times. They will surprise one with the abundance of bloom which can be cut November 20 to January 10, just when the weather is darkest and flowers are at a premium. Blooms grown under these conditions are of a finer quality than those grown in the open, and the crop comes more quickly.

These plants may then be taken up and, after the soil on the much matted roots has all been washed off at the hydrant, one can see to make the divisions with a knife without waste or injury to the plant. These divisions, which should all have at least one leaf left on them, may be heeled into a box and stored in a cold cellar or pit until they can be planted out in the spring. For this planting out, choose a shady situation, under the eaves on the north side of a building, or under trees, for they suffer in a hot, sunny exposure and from extreme drought. If left thus two years they will be large enough to give a good crop of flowers in the cool house again.

Many uses for these flowers will suggest themselves to the live florist, for they are serviceable in made-up work and effective when used in conjunction with their own foliage and bronze and green leucothoe and galax leaves.

CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

The average quality of stock of all kinds is everything that could be desired. The cooler nights have helped so that now, no matter what you buy in seasonable flowers, it is firm and holds up well. The supply up to this week was a little more than the demand. Now they seem to balance nicely and unless indications fail, and history of corresponding periods of other years does not repeat, the market will soon tighten up until the advent of the first heavy crop of chrysanthemums.

For all practical purposes the strictly outdoor summer flowers are out of the market. Still, even at as late a date as the first few days of this week gladioli and asters were offered. Cosmos and dahlias, especially the former, are enjoying a degree of popularity. The steady demand has, however, swung around to lines which it will continue to seek for the next eight or nine months. These lines include, of course, roses and carnations. The former are in a heavy supply, and while they moved somewhat slowly at times last week, they will apparently clean up well this week, unless the bottom should fall out of business. American Beauties, Taft, My Maryland and Richmond are the leaders in quality, with the others all close to the front. Carnations are good property and enjoy a call, especially for work purposes. Other offerings include lilies, valley and orchids. The first named find fairly rapid sales. Chrysanthemums, just coming in, sell in a hurry. Valley is none too plentiful. Some excellent cattleyas were snapped up by local buyers.

The green goods supply is ample and this line, with flowers and supplies, is enjoying a most gratifying out-of-town call.

Bowling Club.

The bowling club of the Cincinnati Florists' Society held a business meeting at the salesrooms of the Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange, 24 Third avenue, east. Chas. H. Hoffmeister was reelected secretary and treasurer of the organization and rules and regulations for the ensuing year were adopted. Wielert's, on Vine street, near Fifteenth, was chosen as the bowling place, and the first meeting will be held there October 16, and on every first and third Monday of each month thereafter. After the session the boys rolled some good scores at Finke's alleys.

Various Notes.

Harry Sunderhaus, who recently came back from New York, is now one of the sales floor force at C. E. Critchell's.

Ed. Forter and E. G. Gillett took a flying trip to New Castle the early part of the week.

L. H. Kyrk reports a good call for dahlias and cosmos.

"Bill" Salmon, the eminent street faker, after a summer doing county fairs selling everything from chewing gum to whips, again looking for bargains, haunts the wholesalers.

Judging from the way C. E. Critchell is receiving southern smilax and ordering more, he must intend to furnish the entire call for this article in the middle west.

The sympathy of the trade is with J. Chas. and Louis Murphy in the loss of their father, T. J. Murphy.

P. J. Olinger's cut of My Maryland from his New Castle greenhouses has been so good that they scarcely hesitated on the way from the plant to the retailer.

W. A. Hollingsworth, Atlanta, Ga., was a visitor on the way to and from Chicago. C. H. H.

The executive committee for the exhibition to be held November 13 to 18 has donned its overalls, got down to work, and is enthusiastic regarding the prospects for the show.

The committee met at E. G. Gillett's store, Friday, September 29, received reports of various committees, and everything says that the coming event will be the greatest exhibition of flowers ever held in Cincinnati. Wm. Murphy was elected superintendent, and that in itself is a guarantee of success. Henry Swartz was added to the committee, and other members of the Cincinnati Florists' Society are putting their shoulders to the wheel. John C. Hertwig has charge of the advertising, and a kind reception is asked for him when he comes for an ad in the souvenir program, which will be out a few days before the opening of the exhibition. One interesting feature will be the music, afternoon and evening. The railroads are much interested and are giving help and encouragement. The convention bureau of the Cincinnati Commercial Association is boosting, and will take over one of the largest cash prizes.

Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., will give his European lecture some evening. The date will be announced shortly.

To sum up everything, the Cincinnati Florists' Society will do everything it can to make the event a success in every particular, so that visitors will go away feeling happy and contented. Entry blanks and premium lists will be sent upon application.

ILLINOIS STATE FAIR.

Fine Flower Show Progressing.

This is florists' week at the Illinois State Fair at Springfield. The display is not so large as would be justified by the liberality of the premiums, but the competition nevertheless is keen and it is interesting to note that of the seventy-eight classes for professional florists, staging for which was required October 2 and 3, every class filled with the single exception of the one provided for fifty variegated carnations. This is a record not equaled by many of the big fall shows in the metropolitan cities. The second day, Tuesday, October 3, was the big day, though exhibits are to be freshened up by the addition of new classes on the following days of the week. October 3 there was a meeting of the executive committee of the Illinois State Florists' Association and there were florists to the number of twenty-five or thirty, besides the exhibitors, representing the trade from all parts of the state. There was heavy rain, which marred the event, but in other respects it was entirely successful. A. Miller, of Chicago, assisted Robert O'Dwyer, who is superintendent of floriculture.

The Roses.

The classes for roses offered $40 as first premium for fifty Beauties and $12 as first premium for fifty blooms of other varieties. The only large exhibitor from outside Springfield was Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, which captured seven firsts, being all the classes entered in, staging splendid, long-stemmed stock. The full list of awards is as follows:

Fifty American Beauties—Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, first; A. C. Brown, Springfield, Ill., second; A. C. Canfield, Springfield, third.
Fifty Richmond—Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; A. C. Brown, second; A. C. Canfield, third.

Six varieties, twenty-five blooms each, Beauties excepted—Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; A. C. Canfield, second; A. C. Brown, third.

Carnations.

On carnations the competition was keener than on roses. The Chicago Carnation Co. and Poehlmann Bros. Co. were the principal outside exhibitors, and between these two competition was close, with the Springfield growers seeing to it that the outsiders had no easy thing. The awards were as follows:

Fifty white carnations—Chicago Carnation Co., Chicago, first; W. H. Gullett & Sons, Lincoln, second; Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, third.
Fifty flesh pink carnations—Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; Chicago Carnation Co., second; Gullett & Sons, third.
Fifty light pink carnations—Chicago Carnation Co., first; A. C. Brown, Springfield, second; A. C. Canfield, Springfield, third.

Fifty crimson carnations—A. C. Canfield, first.
Fifty White Enchantress—Chicago Carnation Co., first; Poehlmann Bros. Co., second; A. C. Brown, third.
Four vases carnations, fifty blooms each of four varieties—Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; Chicago Carnation Co., second; A. C. Brown, third.
One hundred carnations, any color, any variety—Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; Chicago Carnation Co., second; A. C. Brown, third.

Retail Work.

The closest competition and the most attractive feature of the entire display was found in the retail work. Four premiums were offered in most of the classes and in nearly every instance all the money was won. Two Chicago exhibitors and several from "down state" competed with the local florists. It was a showing of design work and table decorating such as before never has been seen at the State Fair. The awards were as follows:

Standing cross four feet high—Wirth & Gaupp, Springfield, first; W. H. Gullett & Sons, Lincoln, second; Cottage Greenhouse, Litchfield, third.

Corsage bouquet—Hey Floral Co., first; Gullett & Sons, second; Geo. A. Kuhl, third; J. F. Ammann, fourth.

Miscellaneous Plants.

As is usual at exhibitions of several days' duration, the affair was opened by the staging of miscellaneous plant exhibits, on Monday, October 2. As usual, the advertising opportunities and the liberality of the premiums attracted many exhibitors from outside Springfield. Plants came from Chicago and from Pekin in considerable quantities. The quality of the stock was excellent and the arrangement better than heretofore has been the case at this exhibition. The judges were a day in making their awards, which were as follows:

ILLINOIS FLORISTS TO MEET.

A meeting of five members of the executive committee of the Illinois State Florists' Association was held at the State Fair, Springfield, Ill., October 3. C. L. Washburn presided. It was decided to hold the annual convention and exhibition at Joliet March 5, 1912.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Seasonable weather has come at last. A change for the better is inevitable and already the outlook is more cheerful. The asters and gladioli are practically out of the running. This week should see their finish, and the first sharp frost will end the dahlia shipments. Dahlias were superb last week, and yet it was hard to dispose of the best in quality at over $1 per hundred. The medium and lower grades brought hardly the cost of express.

Chrysanthemums are coming now and the daily increase is noticeable. From all accounts, the local growers are loaded to the muzzle with them, and we may as well prepare for a tremendous flood. Already fine stock is here, good enough to bring $2 to $3 per dozen.

Notwithstanding the oft repeated lesson of the folly of sending violets to the New York market before the middle of October, hundreds of boxes came in during the hot spell last week. The best, used in limited quantities by the retail stores, sold at 30 cents per hundred, but this demand did not use up ten per cent of the shipments. It will not be easy work to get the price back to a paying basis. The wholesalers who guaranteed a certain figure for these early boxes must needs be expert mathematicians.

Lily of the valley has dropped one-third in price and the best lilies seldom bring above $5 per hundred. The orchid supply must have many sources, for the quantity in the market daily is remarkable. It is an unexpected humiliation that these gems of floriculture should be offered on the street, and in the big stores, at prices that cheapen them with the class who willingly pay good prices for the best of things. Fortunately, some large funeral orders last week slightly relieved the congestion.

Carnations have improved wonderfully during the last ten days, both in stem and flower, and while the short stock drags slowly at 50 cents a hundred, some of the selected has been held at $2.50, with an upward tendency. The hot weather made havoc with the roses, and of the short-stemmed new stock there was a great surplus. The new varieties, however, held well, and the select Bride, Killarney and Richmond brought satisfactory returns.

The general demand by the retail stores is light. The majority are waiting for something to turn up.

Various Notes.

The October meeting of the New York Florists' Club will be held next Monday evening, October 8, at the rooms in the Grand Opera House building. There will be exhibits and refreshments, and an address by J. K.

M. L. Farquhar, of Boston, on "The Horticultural Outlook."

The auction houses are now well filled with buyers every Tuesday and Friday, and the variety of stock offered is attractive. Among the retailers bidding last week were Myer, of Madison avenue, and Stumpp, lately returned from a summer tour of Europe, in company with W. H. Siebrecht, Sr., of Chappaqua. Some of the palms offered brought as high as $40 each.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Trepel will celebrate their tin wedding October 20. E. S. Gorney, who has been with Mr. Trepel during the last year, returns to Wax Bros., Boston, where he was employed for ten years before coming to New York.

There are rumors of several additions to the ranks of the wholesale florists from the list of ambitious lieutenants.

Charles Millang and family have returned from the mountains. In his absence his home was robbed for the second time. On the first occasion Mr. Millang was at home and captured the robber. This time Charles was happy to find his fur coats had eluded the eyes of the thief, but about $50 in cash and some silverware are gone.

Several from New York went to Philadelphia October 3 to attend the Florists Club's banquet on the occasion of its silver anniversary.

An executive committee meeting of the American Rose Society was held at the office of Traendly & Schenck September 28. W. F. Kasting, of Buffalo, and Benj. Hammond, of Fishkill, were in the city.

Dan Cameron, representing Sander & Son, arrived from London September 29.

Large importations of bulbs, plants, etc., arrived last week at the port of New York for A. T. Boddington, McHutchison & Co., Ralph M. Ward & Co., Stumpp & Walter Co., J. M. Thorburn & Co., O. V. Zangen, H. F. Darrow, A. Rolker & Sons, Reed & Keller, F. R. Pierson Co., W. E. Marshall & Co. and others, the aggregate being enormous. These are busy days and nights with the bulb dealers. Seedsmen's travelers report the spring outlook excellent.

Walter Mott, representing Wm. Elliott & Sons, was in the city over Sunday on his way to Boston and Newport.

H. A. Bunyard has been on the sick list with a severe cold, and is taking a short rest in the country.

Kessler Bros. have opened their wholesale cut flower department and have some expert growers on their list.

J. W. Merritt, of Brooklyn, added spice to his experience last month by consummating an elopement. The young couple have since received the parental blessing.

McKinney, at Fifth avenue and Forty-second street, has surprised his friends by the announcement that the handsome little lady who presides at his desk is to be addressed as Mrs. McKinney hereafter. The wedding took place several weeks ago. Mr. McKinney had a handsome decoration last week at Delmonico's. Arthur Merritt was the designer.

Walter Siebrecht, of Siebrecht & Siebrecht, celebrated his birthday September 28 with a theater party and dinner. Geo. Siebrecht, of the firm, has been on the sick list with a severe cold.

Alex. McConnell had the decorations for the funeral of Mrs. Kingdon, the mother of Mrs. Geo. Gould. Among the designs were ten large orchid wreaths and a pall in which were used over 800 cattleyas. Nearly 2,000 orchids were used in the work.

Bonnot Bros. have begun their regular fall shipments of roses.

The handsome celosia plants in M. C. Ford's windows have departed; the demand for them was immediate. This house is handling superb Beauties.

Russin & Handing have rented the large store over Kessler Bros. and completely filled it with their basket importations and novelties.

Mr. Brown, of Mann & Brown, Richmond, Va., was one of the visitors at Boddington's last week. Mr. Boddington says Darwin tulips are in wide demand.

A call on the Brooklyn wholesalers found all cheerful and optimistic. Kuebler's supply department is growing. Bonnet & Blake are receiving excellent rose and carnation stock from their Jersey and Long Island growers. The Greater New York Association held its regular monthly meeting last week. Manager Crawbuck says it was a good year, but that he expects to double it this season. His son is one of the office force.

D. Fuerstenberg, the big Philadelphia grower, was a visitor last week.

Bowling.

The New York bowlers commence the new season's work Friday evening, October 6. Monday afternoon, October 9, the members of the club will bowl at Thum's alleys and all are invited, as well as any florists from out of town.

Every Wednesday evening the Rutherford Bowling Club meets at its alleys at Carlton Hill, N. J. This club will shortly bowl a match game with New York. The scores September 27 were:

Player	1st	2d	3d
Richter	187	134	136
Feller	151	156	136
Latham	101	144	118
Roehrs, E.	166	172	172
Hasselbuhn	156	150	184
Vermeulen	106	125	...
Clark	127	108	...

BOSTON.

The Market.

Outdoor flowers are rapidly passing. More frosts and frequent rains have ruined many of them, and indoor flowers are once more in the ascendant. Roses are steadily improving in quality. They are much more plentiful, but are selling rather better than a week ago. There are, however, many of the short stems which go at $1 per hundred. Beauties are now exceptionally good, with fine stems. Killarney and White Killarney are as good and popular as ever and Mrs. Ward sells well. Prince de Bulgarie and Lady Hillingdon both catch the popular favor. Few of the old Bride and Maid are seen. Richmond still has the field among red roses.

Carnations are much more abundant and stems are quite good on the early planted stock. Those who have White Wonder and Gloriosa are well pleased with them. Violets are coming from quite a few growers. As yet they are confined to singles. In addition to Golden Glow, there are now October Frost and Marquis de Montmort chrysanthemums. Lilies are not plentiful, but demand is light. Valley is overabundant. Cattleya labiata is now coming from several growers. There is also a good variety of other seasonable orchids.

Dahlias are coming from some growers. They do not sell well here, however. Asters are short-stemmed and nearing the end. Cosmos is abundant; so is candytuft, but neither sells well. There is a somewhat better call for asparagus and adiantum. Some flowering plants are already appearing, including Lorraine begonias nicely bloomed. All the stores are now featuring crotons, palms, ferns and other pot plants and business in this line is looking up.

Various Notes.

Thos. Roland was first in the market with pink chrysanthemums and is making fine daily shipments of Marquis de Montmort.

The Boston Rose Co., Pemberton square, is receiving excellent shipments of carnations from Peter Fisher; also a fine line of roses, including Richmond, Hillingdon, Killarney and Beauties from the Montgomery Co., South Hadley, Mass.

H. L. Shedd, of South Lowell, has the finest Golden Glow mums I have seen this season.

Miss Lillian Alderson, for three years at the Swanley School of Horticulture in England, is now instructress at the Ladies' School of Horticulture, Groton, Mass. This school is making good headway and has turned out some capable lady gardeners. Robert Cameron is lecturer here on practical gardening, and is the right man for the position.

John Barr, of South Natick, grows such fine carnations that he never has any difficulty in disposing of his flowers. His Pink Delight, White Perfection, Fenn and Beacon are superb. Scarlet Glow also is well liked.

L. E. Small, of Tewksbury, is strong on White Wonder, Scarlet Glow and Gloriosa carnations.

The funeral of General Samuel C. Lawrence, of Medford, brought out the finest display of floral souvenirs seen here for years. Julius Zinn, who resides in Medford, had many fine designs. I saw some excellent ones also at J. Newman & Sons', on Tremont street. Galvin's, MacMulkin's, Penn's and other stores all had a share of the orders.

Albert Roper, of Tewksbury, now has large daily shipments of carnations. These include a number of Mr. Roper's own seedlings.

Thomas Pegler is doing a rousing business these days. He has added Blue Label valley to his regular lines and the quality makes it sell on sight.

The Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co. is having excellent dahlia displays at its store from the Marblehead dahlia farms. They have a complete cold storage plant for lilies and lily of the valley, selling large quantities of both.

Henry M. Robinson & Co. have completed the alterations to their ice chests and now have everything in running order for fall business. They keep eight men busy the year around in their wire frame department, making all they sell.

Recent visitors have included H. A. Barnard, representing Stuart Low & Co., Enfield, England, looking as young as ever; F. G. Sealy, Rutherford, N. J., representing Julius Roehrs Co., and H. Weezenar, with Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J., all reporting good fall business.

September gave us a rather lower temperature than the average, with more cloudy and showery days. The month did not keep up its reputation of being the wettest in the year, the rainfall being less than three inches, not half what we had in August.

Wheeler & Co., of Waban, and Paul de Nave, of Fall River, are each cutting a nice crop of Cattleya labiata.

The annual chrysanthemum show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society will be held November 9 to 12. Last year no show was held, but everything points to a fine exhibition this season.

Between seeding orchid flowers, looking over furniture and buying solitaires, Geo. W. Butterworth is a busy man these days.

The big Brockton fair, the leading institution of its kind in New England, opened October 3 and drew the usual immense attendances. In cut flowers dahlias were, as usual, the leading feature, being largely shown by J. K. Alexander, G. H. Walker, W. D. Hathaway, W. P. Lothrop and many other specialists.

Several growers are this week bringing in Polly Rose and Pacific chrysanthemums. These average a few days later than a year ago, as, indeed, do almost all varieties of mums, due to the prolonged heat wave.

Carl Jurgens, of Newport, is sending Welch Bros. superb valley, which has been having a wonderful sale of late.

LIVING UP TO A NAME.

The following is too good for me to enjoy alone. The laugh was sure enough on our little friend, Sammy Seligman, Wertheimers' traveler, who was seen making down Michigan avenue, in Chicago, the other evening, sans umbrella, though the rain was falling steadily. He sure enough was "Sprinkleproof."

OBITUARY.

Isaac Gillett.

Isaac Gillett, of Watervliet, N. Y., died September 22, in the Samaritan hospital at Troy. He was 68 years old and for many years had been in business as a grower at 1507 Eighth avenue. When the Civil war began he was employed at the Watervliet arsenal, but later he enlisted in Company H, Seventh New York Heavy Artillery. He was a member of Post Jones-Kane, G. A. R., and of the Third Avenue Methodist church. The survivors are his wife and six sons, Isaac, Walter, Abram, Samuel, William and Daniel Gillett, and three daughters, Mrs. Barbara Scott, Mrs. Lottie Cady and Mrs. Charles Hamilton, all of Watervliet.

South Haven, Mich.—W. A. Hartman has withdrawn from the florists' business here and has gone to Gold Center, Nev., to engage in an irrigation project.

Anacostia, D. C.—Fred H. Kramer has recently had constructed two new houses on the Good Hope road. Others have been built on the Bickings estate, at Good Hope. James F. Pierce is modernizing part of his equipment on the Bowen road. Similar work is being done for Alexander B. Garden, at his Minnesota avenue place. Gude Bros. Co. is adding a number of rose houses on the Bladensburg road.

NEWS, NOTES, AND COMMENTS

READERS ARE INVITED TO CONTRIBUTE ITEMS FOR THIS DEPARTMENT.

Sea Cliff, N. Y.—Thomas Watkins is adding a greenhouse, 25x150, for carnations.

Dubois, Pa.—L. E. Gray, formerly a florist here, reports that he has embarked in other business.

Hobart, Ind.—A. Londenberg has built another greenhouse, 27x100, and made other improvements.

Baraboo, Wis.—The first house in the new range for E. T. Ross, on Eighth street, has been erected. The office and boiler room have also been completed. The office is at 409 Oak street.

Fairfield, Ia.—E. H. Montgomery has reglazed his greenhouses and made other repairs and improvements. Business, he says, has been quite active since the arrival of cool weather.

Jersey City, N. J.—Herman J. Banniedt, who has a flower store at 489 Central avenue, was recently the victim of a sneak thief, who stole a diamond ring and a small amount of money from the cash drawer.

Lynn, Mass.—E. F. Dwyer & Son won first prize for cut flowers at the annual show of the Houghton Horticultural Society, and second prize for cut flowers from hardy perennials. Wilbur D. Moon received first prize for dahlias.

Sea Cliff, N. Y.—E. J. Buchtenkirch is the latest addition to the florists' ranks here, having erected a Weathered structure, comprising an office and workroom connecting with a carnation house 32x200 feet, with space and plans for more.

Marietta, O.—The Marietta Floral Co. has moved into its new store, at 121 Putnam street. The firm has also undertaken extensive improvements in its greenhouses and general equipment, with a view to entering the wholesale field. The sales department will be in charge of Mrs. E. C. Holz.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y.—The recent gathering of the Knights Templar made a busy week for T. J. Totten, who had the decorations for the ball. Henry Schrade also had a good share of the business, while John Ralph had a big plant decoration. Christian Dehn furnished the bouquets for the ladies.

Beverly, N. J.—John A. Cook, the Church street florist, was recently found unconscious on the floor of a room in his home and physicians who were summoned declared he had died of heart disease. Mrs. Cook, however, refused to believe that her husband was dead and she called other physicians, who discovered faint traces of life and at length succeeded in reviving him. At last report he was on the way to recovery.

Troy, N. Y.—J. G. Barrett says there is no let-up to orders for funeral designs, a special feature with him.

Slingerlands, N. Y.—Fred Goldring has finished rebuilding part of his range and has everything in fine shape for the coming season.

Islip, N. Y.—B. Fagan & Son expect to erect a building to cover the entire frontage. It will consist of a show house and office combined.

Watervliet, N. Y.—Henry Hannell is completing two houses, each 30x150 feet, for carnations. The plants have made a fine growth, and with a grand lot of mums he expects to cut some heavy crops.

Anderson, Ind.—For fifteen years Henry Klus, of B. H. Klus & Son, dropped odd pennies, nickels and dimes into a crevice in the wall of the kitchen of his home. September 22 he cut away the plaster and lathing that covered the depository and $1,099.54 rolled out on the floor at his feet.

Glen Cove, N. Y.—The annual dahlia show of the Nassau County Horticultural Society, which was to be held September 27, was postponed till October 11, owing to the lateness of the dahlias. The society's chrysanthemum show will be held November 1 and 2, in Pembroke hall.

West Albany, N. Y.—The Danker Greenhouses will receive an addition in the near future of a special house for orchids, to keep pace with the increasing demand for this aristocrat among flowers. There are still some good asters to be had that survived the recent frost. These help out the shortage in carnations, which, however, will soon be in crop.

Murphysboro, Ill.—Claude Wisely, proprietor of Wisely's Greenhouses, is constructing two new houses, each 28x150, using Foley materials, including iron gutters and angle iron eave plates. When completed, Mr. Wisely will have a total of 25,000 square feet of glass. This is the result of ten years' work, as he started with only one house, 8x10, when 14 years old, and now has what is said to be the largest range in southern Illinois.

Kalamazoo, Mich.—September 21 was Taft day here. The city was beautifully decorated all along the line of march and there were at least 50,000 visitors. In the evening the President was tendered a banquet at the New Burdick hotel. The decorations at the banquet hall were in charge of G. Van Bochove & Bro., being carried out in red, white and blue, and were quite elaborate, great quantities of red roses, carnations, asparagus, adiantum and palms being used.

Wakefield, Mass.—John Barry has erected another greenhouse on his property on Main street.

Racine, Wis.—Clark E. Adams, on Washington avenue, has just completed a new iron-frame greenhouse, which takes the place of the one destroyed by fire a few months ago.

Reed City, Mich.—T. H. Long, of Evart, Mich., has purchased the greenhouses which were conducted for a number of years by Jacob Noll and W. Pepler, in this town.

Wooster, O.—Wm. E. Penick, on South Market street, has removed to the room one door north of his former store. In his new quarters he will have more space and a better opportunity to display his stock.

Dayton, O.—Adam Fischer, who was formerly florist at the National Soldiers' Home, in this city, but had been residing for some time with a relative in Cincinnati, recently became despondent on account of ill health and inability to continue his work, and committed suicide by hanging.

Columbus, O.—The State Board of Agriculture has decided to erect a greenhouse at the state fair grounds, so as to grow the needed stock for the flower beds. President C. H. Janson, T. E. Cromley and Secretary A. P. Sandles have called for preliminary plans.

Temple, Tex.—J. R. Boyd, of Cleburne, Tex., in company with his nephew, has opened a store at the corner of Calhoun avenue and Eighth street, under the name of the Temple Seed & Floral Co. The firm has been preparing for business here since the beginning of July and has spent several thousand dollars in purchasing ground and erecting a greenhouse. Until the plants in the new house have begun to bloom, so as to supply part of the stock for the store, all of the needed flowers will be shipped from Cleburne, where Mr. Boyd has a range of houses.

New Haven, Conn.—The Doolittle Floral Co., the new organization whose incorporation was recently announced in The Review, has purchased the greenhouses and retail department of the Frank S. Platt Co. and has begun business at the corner of Orange and Court streets. A. L. Doolittle, who had been with the Frank S. Platt Co. for eighteen years, is president and manager of the new concern; Frank C. Dowd, of Madison, is treasurer and assistant manager; Henry H. Kelsey, of New Haven, is the secretary and superintendent of the greenhouses, and Frank S. Platt is a director. The capital stock is $25,000.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.
Officers for 1911: President, George Asmus,
Chicago; vice-president, R. Vincent, Jr., White
Marsh, Md.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.
Officers for 1912: President, R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; vice-president, August Poehlmann, Morton Grove, Ill.; secretary, John Young, Bedford Hills, N. Y.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.
Annual convention, Chicago, Ill., August 20 to 23, 1912.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

THE exhibits the amateurs are making at the innumerable early autumn flower shows prove that the public interest is growing rapidly.

THERE are a lot of retail buyers who always are looking for a chance to buy at wholesale—but that isn't any reason why one should give them trade prices.

SOME of the closest observers of the trend of events at Washington are convinced that legislation establishing the parcels post will be enacted at the session of Congress that opens in December.

THE present series of double-page spreads has consisted of nine, published in the last eight issues. As only one each week can have the center position, those who want this special position should make their reservations early.

THE Detroit florists have secured the Wayne pavilion for the big rose and carnation show January 10 to 13, 1912.
So large an exhibition is in prospect that plans are being made to admit the public at certain hours and charge an admission fee.

THE WESTERN ASSOCIATION.

The adjourned meeting of the Western Dahlia and Gladiolus Association (not society), organized at Chicago,
August 5, 1911, will be called to order at the Sherman House, Wednesday, November 15, 1911, at 10 o'clock a. m., for the completion of the charter list and the regular business of the association. For full particulars see Bulletin
No. 1, to be issued October 10, 1911.

E. S. Thompson,
H. W. Koerner, Secretary.
Vice-president and Chairman.

BUYING ADVERTISING.

It is a peculiar fact that many men, in buying advertising, do so utterly without regard for what they get for their money. They would not think of paying one grower as much for 500 plants as another charges for 1,000, but they cheerfully pay to a publisher as much as they are charged by another who gives twice the circulation. Commenting on this phase of human nature in his annual address, President Roeding of the Pacific Coast Nursery-men's Association recently said:
"The only possible way of determining what results you are securing from your advertising is to have a check system to keep you in touch with the newspaper bringing in the best returns.
Without some such plan as this you might be devoting large sums of money to a paper bringing in the smallest number of inquiries. Regard your advertising just as you would any other business transaction; in other words, you are buying publicity for your business on the same principle that you would expend on any other class of merchandise."

BUYING FROM ADVERTISERS.

That advertised stock is the best stock, and the cheapest in the long run, is coming to be generally recognized.
Those who advertise steadily absolutely must give full satisfaction to those to whom they sell, else they soon would exhaust the field of possible customers and advertising would become unprofitable. This is how:

We enclose a dollar bill for renewal of our subscription to The Review; it seems to grow larger and better each year. We buy all our stock and supplies from Review advertisers and haven't been "stung" yet, always finding goods as advertised, and sometimes better.—Tom O'Connor, Greensboro, S. C., September 25, 1911.

VARIEGATED GLADIOLUS LEAVES

In The Review of September 14, page 18, H. E. Meader states that he has found in his stock a seedling gladiolus with variegated foliage. "A broad white stripe," he says, "runs through each leaf and up through each flower sheath." I was especially interested in his statement, as we have a few gladioli of that sort. On the first one, in 1907, only a faint, thread-like line was perceptible, but this season we have some with one-half of the leaf white and with broad lines on the flower sheath. No two are alike. The bloom is yellow, with a maroon blotch, and is of good size and wide-open form. The stock is from bulblets, as we have been unable to secure seed from it until this season.
Mrs. A. H. Austin.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Department of Registration.

Public notice is hereby given that Jackson & Perkins Co., of Newark, Wayne county, N. Y., offer for registration the roses described below. Any person objecting to the registration, or to the use of the proposed names, is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Ortolo—Seedling from yellow rambler, crossed with pollen from an unnamed seedling which was itself the result of the crossing of multiflora with various tea roses; holds its yellow color better than any other yellow rambler in commerce; remontant.

Genevieve Clark—Deep pink when the flowers first open, changing to a clear shell-pink as they grow older, the covered and shaded portions of the petals being almost white; for bedding and forcing in pots.

Sunshine—Yellow dwarf polyantha; same habit of growth and bloom as Mrs. Cutbush; deep golden yellow in bud, changing to a lemon yellow as the flowers open.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Business has picked up decidedly since the arrival of October and, indeed, there are reports of marked acceleration in the closing days of September. The weather of late has been in favor of flower selling. The outdoor stock is practically out of the way and overcast skies have in a measure reduced the cuts under glass. At the same time the flower users have become more active, so that practically all the buyers are now being heard from regularly and in many instances their requirements are of satisfying size.

Beauties are both less abundant and

ORCHIDS

Fancy Labiata Cattleyas by the Dozen or Hundred.

There are no finer Cattleyas anywhere in this country—the prices ($40.00 per 100) really are low for such large, perfect, highly colored flowers. Feature them in your corsage work.

VIOLETS VALLEY

Fine—you'll agree you never saw better in October. Push them now, while the weather is so your customers can wear them on the street.

If you have had any difficulty getting your Valley orders filled, it was because you didn't order of us. Always plenty of Fancy Valley here.

KILLARNEYS

Pink and White—the finest.

Our Killarneys and White Killarneys carry fine heads on all lengths—good flowers on the short stems and the very finest of flowers on the "special" lengths. We always have a large supply. None better anywhere, and few so good. Send an order and we will prove it to you.

CARNATIONS

Try these—you will like them.

The new crop of Carnations is coming in strong—it is earlier and finer than the first big crop ever has been before. These are as good flowers as one could ask at this date and the stems are good, long enough for any purpose you are likely to want them for. Order some today and see for yourself.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

No limit to our supply.

Send along your orders—we've got the stock: Golden Glow and October Frost, excellent quality and a steady supply, as usual. We are headquarters for the finest early Mums the market affords.

AMERICAN BEAUTIES

Our stock always is fine.

We have Beauties that will meet with the approval of the most critical buyers—nothing whatever the matter with them. Large heads, splendid color, strong stems, perfect foliage.

MEXICAN IVY

Try this green and you never will be without it. Ours is good.

ADIANTUM

This is one of our specialties—fine stock always on hand. Order at any time.

Here you get the best Fancy Ferns, all the Smilax and Asparagus strings you want, Sprengeri and Plumosus bunches, and Galax.

in heavier request. The result has been a stiffening in prices, especially for the medium lengths. The receipts now are cleaning up daily without recourse to forced sales. Roses continue in large supply. There has been some improvement in average prices, but nothing worth speaking about thus far, for roses still are selling below their normal values, and there are many buyers who consider roses of both the longest and the shorter grades as offering the best values now to be had in cut flowers. The quality of the roses continues excellent. The dark weather has had some effect on the color of Killarney, but not enough to impair its value. The flowers are good on all lengths of stems.

The present week brought a pronounced increase in the orders for chrysanthemums, yellow being specially in request. Some of the growers have cut out their earliest Golden Glow. Others are beginning to send in the blooms from their second-early batch of plants and these are of much better quality than the earliest stock. The October Frost and Smith's Advance, which are the two white varieties now coming in, also are of excellent quality. Better chrysanthemums never have been seen in this market in the first week of October. There has been an advance in the price of yellows, but white continues to sell at last week's quotations, and on the whole the mums are not bringing as much money as usual. Perhaps it is because buyers recognize that they have been getting special values that the demand has increased so sharply the last few days.

There was an increased call for carnations last week, but it was not until October arrived that there was any improvement in prices. The flower still is selling much below last year's prices at this date, though the quality never was better at this time of the year. There are a few asters still coming in, but they are not of shipable quality. Gladioli still can be had in considerable quantity, but the quality is not good. Dahlias are more plentiful than heretofore and those which reach the market in unbruised condition are selling fairly well. Easter lilies continue abundant; it seems doubtful if they can pay at the prices which now rule. Valley was in strong request at the opening of the present week, though recently it has been in such light demand that clean sales were impossible.

There was a slump in the cattleya market last week, due to heavy shipments to this market from glutted markets in the east. Buyers who can use quantities were quick to take advantage of the situation and forced prices down to 30 cents for first-class locally grown cattleyas, but this week found the market lightly supplied and prices firmer, at least temporarily.

Violets have become one of the wholesalers' problems. Some of the stock recently received has been as good as anyone could ask at this date, but the retailers have refused to buy in quantity, so that extremely low average prices have been made for the best goods, with practically no sale for the poorer violets. Due to some slip of the express company, the violets shipped from Rhinebeck to arrive Sunday morning were twenty-four hours late, arriving with the shipments intended for Monday.

There is increased call for asparagus strings and smilax for decorating. Of the latter there is an abundance.

Express Rates Go Down.

It has been reported that the express companies would take legal steps to contest the order of the State Railroad and Warehouse Commission in the matter of reducing express rates in Illinois and an appeal was filed September 26 with the Circuit Court at Springfield, but nevertheless the rates went down October 1—if one insisted on it. Wholesalers found that some of the shipments heretofore billed at 50 cents per hundred pounds came billed at 40 cents per hundred, while others were billed at the old rate. John Poehlmann got into touch by telephone with the chief clerk of the Wells Fargo and insisted on having all shipments billed at the reduction, and the wagon man was instructed over the 'phone to change the billing. The reduced rate applies only on shipments wholly within the state of Illinois, but it reduces to 40 cents the rate within a radius of thirty miles from Chicago.

for September as ahead of those for last year. With minor exceptions, the report is that September fell behind the record of a year ago. Demand was so inactive that prices averaged much below those of last September. It should be taken into consideration, however, that September, 1910, was an exceptionally good September.

September Weather.

September was an unusual month, meteorologically speaking. There were only nine clear days and rain fell on

The Silver Anniversary.

This is the silver anniversary of the Chicago Florists' Club. Delegations are expected in town this afternoon from St. Louis, Cincinnati, Milwaukee, Detroit and other cities to assist in the celebration. At 2:30 this afternoon there will be a bowling tournament for five-men teams, representing the five cities, at Bensinger's new bowling alleys, 29 West Randolph street. The monthly club meeting will be held at the usual place at 7:00 p. m. The transaction of routine business will be followed by a reading of a paper on chrysanthemums by Elmer D. Smith, president of the American Chrysanthemum Society. At 8:30 the annual banquet will be served.

President H. E. Philpott called a meeting of the officers and trustees of the Florists' Club at the Union restaurant October 2 to canvass the list of committees for appointment to handle the 1912 convention.

Various Notes.

The capital stock of the Fleischman Floral Co. has been reduced from $100,000 to $10,000.

C. L. Washburn, president of the Illinois State Florists' Association, was at Springfield October 3 and 4 to attend a meeting of the executive committee.

Beginning October 2, Peter Reinberg started morning and afternoon wagon trips from the greenhouses to the store.

Schiller the Florist and Albert T. Hey Floral Co., the latter of Maywood, are exhibiting in the retail department at the State Fair this week.

At John Kruchten's it is said the call for gardenias greatly exceeds the supply.

Willie Abrahamson has returned from Denver and has gone to work for the Chicago Flower Growers' Co., succeeding W. Graff.

WHOLESALE GROWER OF CUT FLOWERS

30 E. Randolph St., CHICAGO, ILL.

E. S. Thompson, Benton Harbor, Mich., is shipping quantities of dahlias this week to Kyle & Foerster and the Chicago Flower Growers' Association. He puts up his stock in pasteboard boxes, each box containing from sixty to eighty blooms of one variety, so that they reach the market in a much better condition than do dahlias packed in the ordinary cut flower shipping cases.

While C. A. Samuelson still holds the lease on the entire big double building on Michigan avenue in which his store is located, he has sublet the north store, formerly used as a demonstrating room and for the display of supplies. Moving the show cases into the main store adds to rather than detracts from its appearance, helps the sales and takes $1,800 per year off the rent.

BULLETIN No. 3

Will you need wicker decorating Pot Covers this season? Why not place your order now for your year's supply and take the opportunity of this special offer? After years of study we have at last been able to produce a Pot Cover that will stand up and not go to pieces in one year's use. Our Pot Covers are made entirely of reed, with a wooden bottom, and not with a flimsy willow bottom which, after using the cover a dozen times, will sag in the middle and fall out entirely. In fact, or in a few words, the Pot Cover we are offering is the best and strongest on the market. This can be endorsed by our Philadelphia florists, who use them year in and year out and would use no other.

Note our prices for this quality Pot Cover:

6-in., $ 5.75 per doz. 10-in., $11.75 per doz.
8-in., 9.00 per doz. 11-in., 14.50 per doz.
9-in., 10.50 per doz. 12-in., 16.00 per doz.

We can also make Pot Covers to fit any size tub. Write us your wants in this line and I am sure it will be profitable to you.

SPECIAL NOTE.—All our Pot Covers are made to fit standard pots, and measure from one to two inches larger than the size given, thus insuring an easy matter in putting them in or taking them out.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Early chrysanthemums are the strong feature of a slowly improving market. Golden Glow, or, as the buyers have rechristened it, Early Glow, is in larger supply than at any time this season. The other varieties are Smith's Advance, Early Snow, Polly Rose and Montmort. They afford a range of color sufficient for most requirements. The only difficulty is that they are not yet plentiful, possibly excepting the first named. Each day sees this trouble grow smaller. The quality is excellent. Prices are good, but not fancy. When chrysanthemums of the requisite color can not be obtained dahlias are an excellent substitute. Golden West and Mrs. J. Gardner Cassatt, a beautiful shade of deep pink, are the leaders; great, long-stemmed flowers that are a revelation to those accustomed to naturally grown dahlias of ordinary breed. They bring an excellent price and are worth it. The dahlias range from fancy to cull, or, prosaically speaking, from $5 per hundred to anything that you can get; sometimes precious hard, for everybody wants the one and nobody wants the other. Assters are not yet over, more's the pity.

Carnation conditions improve. There is more salable stock and more demand for it. The Wards head the list, with specials of a couple of other sorts that chance to be especially well done. Many of the carnations coming into town are not up to market requirements. Beauties are decidedly the best selling roses. The best have stiffened in price. All the grades realize fair prices. This is not true of other roses. All but the best drag. Cattleyas are abundant. Gardenias are in request, due rather to a lull between outdoor and indoor crops of the flowers than to any heavy demand. Violets have hardly got started yet; doubles are in. The supply of valley has increased in anticipation of the demand. Easter lilies are in request. Fine oak foliage has come.

The Silver Jubilee.

The annual meeting of the Florists'

Club was held Tuesday evening, October 3, at 6:30 p. m., in the club room at Horticultural hall. The principal business was the election of officers to serve for the coming year. They were:

President—J. Otto Thilow.
Vice-president—Thomas W. Logan.
Treasurer—George Craig.
Secretary—David Rust.

After the brief business meeting came the event of the evening, the club's silver jubilee. The celebration took the form of a banquet. About 125 were present, each member having the privilege of subscribing for a lady. There were also a number of visitors present from other cities. The affair was probably the most brilliant in the history of the club. The toasts follow:

Chairman—Joseph Hancock, President Florists' Club of Philadelphia.
Toastmaster—Hon. W. B. Smith.
"Our Club"—Robert Craig.

lies in the character of the improvements. Myers & Samtman are adding two 125 horse-power boilers to their battery, giving them six boilers in all for heating their large plant. When it is understood that the four older boilers heated the entire plant last season, with sufficient reserve capacity for the new house built in the spring and another, if need be, it will be seen that the expenditure for these new boilers is in the nature of insurance and of coal economy. These improvements show that Myers & Samtman are progressive, that their business is run on sound principles and that they are taking no unnecessary chances in this rather risky business of ours.

The place is entirely devoted to roses in benches, Beauties, Maryland, Hilda, to which have been added Double Killarney and White Killarney. The stock is in fine condition, evidence of skillful culture. A portion of one bench is devoted to testing the novelties. Here are seen many varieties the names of which are known all over the country, growing side by side, earning or losing the firm's confidence by their work.

Various Notes.

The Market.

September 30 being cool, business responded quickly and trade was fairly good. October 2 brought rain and dullness. Generally speaking, business is on the mend. A lot of old stock has been cleaned up, and the market being free of it, the new arrivals are meeting better conditions. Prices are stiffening, but are not yet good. The prospects, however, are distinctly encouraging. Roses are improving in quality and the market for them is in a generally livelier condition. Prices, as yet, are scarcely higher, but they are noticeably firmer. Lilies are in rather better demand and prices are stiffening. The first October Frost and Halliday mums are added to the list and it is remarked that it is unusually early for Hallidays, which seldom arrive here before the end of October.

Various Notes.

C. E. Meehan, of the Pennock-Meehan Co., was here last week looking over the situation.

Henry Pfister has given up growing his own stock and has sold his greenhouses at Chevy Chase. After trying the plan of buying everything for some time, he pronounces it more satisfactory than trying to wholesale and retail at the same time. Mr. Pfister finds business rather better than it was last year, although he is located where he must depend on the best class of trade—people who go away from the city early and stay late. After spending twenty-seven years in the government service, Mr. Pfister says he regrets that he did not set up for himself many years sooner than he did.

GOOD JOBS FOR GOOD MEN

THE growing importance of the horticultural trades is strikingly shown by the demand for trained men who are familiar with the greenhouse, nursery and seed businesses. We could use, or place with our clients, at least a dozen good men if we knew where to find them. Some of the openings that offer unusual opportunities, details concerning which can be obtained by writing us, are as follows:

COPY MEN.—For our own staff. The first requirement is the ability to write clear, concise, convincing English—and consequently experience on a daily paper is almost necessary. Another essential is love of the things that grow and a successful record in growing plants, trees and shrubs, commercially or otherwise. Further, it is highly desirable to have had training in the sales department of some business—preferably, of course, in one the product of which is sold to the classes of people who buy fruits or ornamentals. Only young men can be considered, and good health, clean habits, ability and willingness to do a lot of hard work, are some of the necessary qualifications.

PARTNER IN NURSERY.—For one of the best greenhouse and nursery plants in the country—50,600 feet of glass and 130 acres. A competent man who possesses good business ability will be sold a half interest at a fair price and on reasonable terms. Locality is unexcelled for growing many kinds of nursery stock.

CORRESPONDENCE CLERK.—For leading nursery, growing fruit and ornamental trees, etc., in large quantities, and selling both at retail and wholesale. The business of this firm is growing by leaps and bounds, and there is no better opening for a young man of energy, adaptability and some experience in the right line.

OFFICE MANAGER.—For another prominent firm of nurserymen. A man who knows book-keeping, office systems, filing methods, etc., and who is thoroughly up-to-date, will find this the chance of a lifetime. "Has beens" and fellows who know it all need not apply, however,—a "live wire" with executive ability is required.

SHIPPING FOREMAN.—For great eastern fruit-tree nursery. A fine position for men of good habits and clear record. No booze-fighters or lazybones will be considered. Knowledge of varieties and of good and bad trees an absolute essential—also ability to handle and hustle men.

Write us fully if any of these openings appeal to you.

Your communications will have prompt attention.

CELERY CULTURE IN THE SOUTH.

May I ask you to have some one of the readers of The Review give a description of the methods of celery culture in the south? I should like to know which are the best varieties, the best seasons for planting, the best commercial fertilizers and the best systems of irrigation in southern latitudes. I am located in southwestern Tennessee. M. L.

Golden Self-Blanching and White Plume are the two leading varieties of celery; I mean, the varieties grown more than all others. There are, however, some other varieties that are grown largely in some localities.

Celery requires a large amount of fertilizer, particularly rich in nitrogen, but the amount advisable to use would depend largely upon the kind and condition of soil you have. As to dates of planting, etc., I can not spec-

Anacostia, D. C.—C. L. Jenkins & Son have enlarged and repaired their greenhouses and have a fine stock, which gives promise of an excellent crop. They have also improved their place by erecting a six-room residence. In spite of the dry, hot summer, they had splendid success with their asters and had heavy crops of flowers, as is evidenced by some photographs taken in their fields this summer.

Six Pages of Retailers' Cards

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

The Market.

The local market last week was pretty much as it was the week previous. There seems to be a decided awakening in retail circles and the demand for first-class stock is considerably heavier. This week the fall festivities begin and this should create quite a demand for cut stock.

At the wholesale houses the stock of mums is increasing and some good shipments of early white and yellow were seen. Roses are plentiful in all varieties, as also are carnations. Gladioli and asters are about over for this season, but some nice dahlias are coming in now. Valley and lilies are good sellers, and asparagus and smilax clean up almost daily.

Various Notes.

Ostertag Bros. have a large decoration to furnish this week on the east side for a big department store that is celebrating its twenty-fifth anniversary. It is said that six Beauties are to be given to each lady caller.

Geo. H. Angermueller was well supplied last week with fancy roses and carnations, also a fine shipment of fancy cattleyas.

Fred Bruenig, W. H. Kruse, Diemer Floral Co. and Schoenle Floral Co. report good business on the south side. A large amount of funeral work kept them all busy last week.

The H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co. is cutting a large crop of roses and carnations, which are being consigned to the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co.

C. A. Kuehn had a good run on lilies last week. A fine lot of roses and white mums were also among his consignments.

Quite a large delegation of St. Louis Florists' Club members left here Wednesday evening, October 4, to attend the twenty-fifth anniversary celebration of the Chicago Florists' Club.

REPORTS from Holland are to the effect that hyacinths are selling unusually well and that the surplus, if any, will be small. Tulips also have moved faster than last year and there has been a tendency toward stiffening prices. Crocus are scarce and high. The principal bulb shipments have now gone forward, but the late ripening varieties still to go are turning out small in size, because of the long, dry, hot August.

LILIUM HARRISII

(THE BERMUDA EASTER LILY)

LET US SUPPLY YOUR WANTS IN LILIES THIS SEASON

We think we can make it to your advantage to do so, as regards both quality and price.

The stock that we offer is not gathered indiscriminately from all kinds of sources, but is grown for us by a few selected growers whose stocks have been worked up from the true, original stock. In order to insure the health of the product, the bulbs are not grown on the same field oftener than one season, other crops being grown on the field the preceding year. The ground is thoroughly manured when the previous crop is grown, leaving it in a high state of cultivation, and when the lily bulbs are planted no fresh manure is used; this prevents disease and insures a crop of strong, healthy bulbs.

In addition to this, we do not dig our bulbs as early as they are usually dug, but leave them in the ground until they are thoroughly ripened and matured. When Harrisii is good it leaves little to be desired. There is very little, if any, stock obtainable as good as the stock that we are offering. We are supplying only this one grade of selected stock and when this is disposed of we shall have no more to offer.

While the quality of the stock that we offer is of the highest, our prices are as low as, or lower than, the prices of those who offer the ordinary stock gathered from indiscriminate sources. We are sure buyers will find our stock very satisfactory, and much more so than the Japan-grown Longiflorum, which has badly deteriorated in recent years.

Bear in mind that we were the original introducers of Harrisii in Bermuda, and that we have exceptional facilities for obtaining our present supplies. Also take note that the smallest bulbs that we offer are 6-7 inch bulbs, not 5-7 inch, as usually offered.

6-7 inch bulbs, 335 to the case, $15.00 per case; full thousand lots, $ 40.00 per 1000
7-9 inch bulbs, 200 to the case, 16.00 per case; full thousand lots, 75.00 per 1000
9-11 inch bulbs, 100 to the case, 18.00 per case; full thousand lots, 175.00 per 1000

FERNS

ing of future prices ought to be delayed take into consideration the situation on pea seed, which by general consent is going to be an exceedingly scarce article for the coming crop and sell at an exceptionally high price per bushel. The few western canners who have booked orders for future peas have done so at higher prices than last year."

PEAS AND BEANS.

The latest information regarding the pea crop gives no room for any improvement on conditions previously reported. The shortage, we think, is fully as great as, if not greater than, last year. The bean situation is, however, considerably less encouraging during the last two or three weeks. We have had a good deal of hot weather, with insufficient moisture, and as a consequence we do not look for more than sixty to seventy-five per cent of a crop.—S. M. Isbell & Co., Jackson, Mich., September 26, 1911.

It is difficult to say much about pea and bean crops until threshing is further along. As far as our field estimates go, they would indicate that beans would be about two-thirds of a crop, perhaps more and perhaps less. As regards peas, we find some are threshing out better than we expected, but at the best the crop will be short. How short we cannot tell until we have completed threshing and taken deliveries from farmers.—Alfred J. Brown Seed Co., Grand Rapids, Mich., September 23, 1911.

IMPORTS.

The imports of seeds through the port of New York for the week ending September 23 were as follows:

Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.	Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.
Caraway	2,120	$11,476	Hemp	137	$ 560

Fenugreek	54	181	Rape	9	83
Grass	384	3,388	Other		18,678

DUTY ON PANDANUS SEEDS.

The duty on pandanus seeds is 10 cents per pound, according to a decision of the Board of General Appraisers announced September 21. The decision followed the importation, consigned to Maltus & Ware, of merchandise invoiced as Pandanus utilis seeds, which the collector at New York classified under paragraph 266, tariff act of 1909, as seeds not specially provided for, and was claimed to be free of duty as palm nuts or palm-nut kernels under paragraph 635.

In his opinion sustaining the collector General Appraiser Waite said: "The evidence seems to disclose that this commodity has been known for some time in the commercial world as palm seeds. It appears to be the seeds of a species of pine, sometimes called the 'screw pine,' and is in no sense the product of the palm tree. Just what is intended to be covered by the term 'palm nut' in the statute we are unable to determine, and there has been no testimony or evidence to enlighten us upon that point. The record does not disclose that the term 'palm nut' is used in the commercial world. We have passed upon this same commodity in two previous cases (Abstract 2246, T. D. 25482, and Abstract 9136, T. D.

26875), where the records were as meager, apparently, as in this case. In both instances we have reached the conclusion reached here and declined to hold the commodity free under the provision for palm nuts. We do not think it is in any true sense a nut. It consists of a thick fibrous covering, containing in its inner parts a number of small orifices in which the germinating portion of the seed is found. Following the decisions heretofore made we overrule the protest.

NO DUTY ON RIB GRASS SEED.

C. C. Morse & Co., San Francisco, were sustained, September 22, in a protest at the assessment of duty on rib grass seed. The collector at San Francisco classified the merchandise as "seeds not specially provided for," under paragraph 266, tariff act of 1909, and the importer claimed it to be free of duty as "all flower and grass seeds," under paragraph 668.

General Appraiser Waite, in an opinion sustaining the protest, said: "The testimony shows that this is the seed of what is known as rib grass, Plantago lanceolata. It belongs to the plantain family. The testimony also shows that it is considered in the commercial world, to wit, by seedsmen, as a grass, and is catalogued among the grass or forage seeds, with clover, timothy, meadow grass, red top, etc., the same as vetch, spurry and sanfoin. It does not belong among the true grasses, but the board had not construed this paragraph as covering only the true grasses, but rather those plants which are used for forage or feed purposes. This is the first importation of this seed that has been called to the attention of the board, so far as the records disclose. Its use, however, is the same as that of vetch and spurry, and the principles upon which we think the case should be decided are set forth in Willett's case, G. A. 6350 (T. D. 27306), wherein vetch seed was the subject under discussion. Following the principles and rules laid down in that case, we sustain the protest."

The word "Sincere" literally means "without wax," and originated in olden times when wax was used to cover defects in pottery. Whenever a piece of pottery was genuine or free from deception, it was said to be "sincere." Horseshoe Brand Giganteum are sincere bulbs, because there is no deception in their make-up or marketing. They are grown by experienced lily growers—not amateurs—cultivated and fertilized very carefully, graded in sizes and quality, packed properly, and shipped after they are fully matured. Everything done to promote quality that we know of. It is only natural, as a consequence of this extra care, that Horseshoe Brand Giganteum cost a little more than most brands; and to offset this extra cost, they are worth in flowering value all and more than you pay for them. It's the old story of the cheap and the high-priced chisel—ask the carpenter, the man who knows chisel values, which he buys. Same in the bulb business. Write for prices.

TORONTO.

The Market.

Trade during the last week has picked up considerably. Funeral work has been quite plentiful and this, together with weddings and a good call for cut flowers, has kept things going. Stock is arriving in much better shape. Roses are excellent and carnations are improving rapidly. Mums are in excellent demand, but some retailers complain they are hard to get. Violets have made their appearance and are of excellent quality for this time of year. Dahlias are now offered in quantity.

Various Notes.

S. Tidy & Sons have received a big shipment of palms from Belgium. They also received a number of Nephrolepis Harrisii from Philadelphia. They are using a number of these to decorate their store.

Mr. Hoath, who was with Sir Henry M. Pellatt for some time, has opened a store near Spadina avenue and College street.

S. A. Frost has had a fire in the shed in the rear of his premises on College street. Damage to the extent of $200 was done.

J. S. Simmons has purchased the business of Mrs. Thos. Plumb, on North Yonge street, and will run it as a branch in connection with his main store.

Steele-Briggs Seed Co. has received a permit for the erection of a new building at the corner of Spadina avenue and St. Clarence Square.

Visitors: A. Zirkman, representing M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia; Julius Dilloff, representing Schloss Bros., New York. E. A. F.

PACIFIC COAST.

Eugene, Ore.—R. Rae has completed a new addition to his greenhouses and has installed a new ten horse-power boiler.

Puyallup, Wash.—A. Lingham, proprietor of the Puyallup Nursery, had a splendid exhibit of dahlias at the annual show in Tacoma.

Portland, Ore. — The Clackamas Greenhouse Co., with principal place of business here, has filed articles of incorporation, with $20,000 capital stock. The incorporators are F. Niklas, Albert Herbert and Wm. Lawrence.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

The Market.

The weather has turned slightly warm again and everything is lovely—with the exception of business, which is rather quiet, although the indications are that it may pick up at any time. There has been quite a bit of funeral work, however, which has been well divided among the retailers. Carnations are not as plentiful as they were one year ago. It seems that many of the growers were rather late in getting their houses changed this season, and as a consequence stock of good quality is scarce. Of roses we have little complaint and, considering the season, the stock looks as well as could be ex-suddenly dropped off; hence there was an accumulation of funeral flowers. As-ters are rapidly passing, and there is but little good stock in sight to take their place. Mums are slowly making up the deficiency. Carnations and roses are of better quality. Mildew is prevalent on all sides, which necessitates early firing. Valley and orchids are unusually scarce, with a brisk demand.

Few good blooming plants, outside of cyclamens, are to be had. The bulb departments are unusually busy, filling out-of-town orders.

Business Prospects.

With the approach of autumn it begins to be possible to form an estimate of the coming winter's trade. Roses will be sufficient for the demand until Christmas; for a couple of months after that they will, owing to climatic conditions, be in short supply. Carnations will probably be in short supply all winter. The three members of the Enchantress family and Beacon will be the leaders in quantity. Chrysanthemums, from present appearances, will show no surplus.

Violets will not be grown locally; it is much easier and cheaper to get them from California. Florists here will be able to handle large quantities of these if they are able to procure them at as favorable rates as the street sellers, but last winter this was not the case, as the street men sold freshly arrived stock at lower rates than those quoted by the wholesale houses to the regular trade. This was so evident that the trade had to take steps to protect themselves and they will no doubt do the same again this winter if the high prices are repeated, and this will not be favorable to the sale of large quantities of the flowers through any channel in this city.

Summer Sweet Pea Show.

The exhibit of sweet peas at the summer show was, as usual, quite extensive, embracing practically all the winners sent out in Britain during the previous year. In reds, Sunproof Crimson will supersede George Stark, improved. Tom Bolton will replace Othello. Etta Dyke will easily hold the premier place in white. In another year Asta Ohn will be as good as any other mauve variety. Doris Asher takes first place as a salmon pink. Mrs. Harcastle Sykes and Constance Oliver are, as before, pinks that cannot be beaten. The variety Jimmy Bland, which created such a furore last year, was only shown in limited quantities, all available plants being used for seed purposes. It is understood that this splendid variety has sported pink, the sport being equal in quality to the parent.

EFFECT OF TRADE LISTS.

[An extract from an address by Jim Parker, of Tecumseh, Okla., at the St. Louis convention of the American Association of Nurserymen.]

It seems to me that the discussion of the question of "Who Are Entitled to Trade Lists?" has, underlying it, the fundamental doctrine of the greatest good for the greatest number. That sounds like good philosophy.

Now, just what occurs if these trade prices are sent to the planters? First let me ask you if you ever saw a bargain counter rush to buy cheap trees from the local nurseryman or from a delivery yard? You never did, and you won't see mail trains overloaded with orders in reply to special prices to planters. The people want quality rather than cheapness and they are a little suspicious of bargain lots. Again, when a farmer writes a wholesaler for prices it seems that he already had his mind made up to buy. Most likely he is acting for others in the community, as well as for himself. The farmers, as well as the nurserymen, are clannish. There is some retail nurseryman who is on the job trying to get this business, and who is in most cases entitled to it. When the farmer receives these prices he gets cold feet on the proposition of sending cash with order. No promise of good stock is worth a copper to him that does not carry with it the idea that he can pass on the worth or worthlessness of the goods before he pays for them. In a majority of cases he won't buy. He will only use his price list as a leverage to bear down prices with the local salesman. But the local salesman can not compete, because the conditions are not the same. In the retail business the purchaser expects to get his trees delivered at a certain place at a certain time and to have the privilege of examining the trees to see that they are in good condition and according to contract. This means a risk as to the purchaser's ability to pay, a risk as to the promptness of the transportation company, a risk as to favorable or unfavorable weather, and a risk as to that uncertain quantity of the steadfastness of the purposes of men. All these are risks that it is better for the development of the country that the nurseryman should assume, but it means the necessity for twenty to thirty per cent higher prices than where these risks are not assumed.

For these reasons the quoting of trade prices to planters merely means that the business becomes confused and a community that would plant 100,000 trees if properly canvassed will not plant more than 25,000 if they have had trade prices quoted them. If wholesalers wish to sell to the people, they should meet the terms which the public demands of the retail nurseryman. If it becomes a question of the survival of the fittest, send a man out and take the business, but don't block the progress of orchard planting with a five per cent investment in time and postage to send out a special price list in reply to an inquiry under the vain delusion that it will bring you business, or because you are too lazy to look up the prospective customer and see whether he is a nurseryman or farmer.

Right here let me say that this kind of business is done quite as often by the small nurseryman and retailer as by the wholesale nurseryman. They go into fits easily enough if their trade is interfered with, but they seem willing enough to send special prices to parts of the country where they are not doing business regularly. They also offer their remnants at ruinously low prices to the retail trade, thus interfering with the wholesale business and creating a situation that in some measure justifies the wholesale man in lapping over the retailer and offering trees direct to planters.

Now, how do these methods compare when considered from the standpoint of our doctrine of the greatest good for the greatest number? One method means a margin of extra profit which enables salesmen to go out and get the business, the other a margin of discount which decreases business. The one method will sell 100,000 trees at a profit and start orchards enough to supply 10,000 people with fruit. The other will sell 25,000 trees at cost and block the sale of 75,000. Which is best for the interests of nurserymen and for the public good? But these difficulties in the trade are growing less every year. The Wholesale Nurserymen's Association is doing a great work in keeping a record of the dishonest retail nurserymen and passing the word out to all wholesalers, thus making it hard for a deadbeat to do business. The Retail Nurserymen's Association is doing a good work in protecting the trade from the encroachments of wholesalers and a still greater work in blacklisting the dishonest salesman. We are fast approaching that time when the nurserymen of the country will stand with and for each other and can present to the world a solid front of clean, honest men.

DENVER.

The Market.

The last two weeks have not shown any great improvement in sales, but stock has improved noticeably, both in quantity and quality. Toward the last of the month there is a tendency to get along with as little as possible, in order to keep the bills down. After the first of the month, things always pick up.

There is an abundance of tea roses of a good grade, but they stay around until they are ready for the dump. Some of the white roses on the market are as fine as any grown anywhere at any time. Short-stemmed teas are not moving. One grower who is cutting a good many is retailing them at 25 cents a dozen, to get rid of them. Good Beauties with long stems are comparatively scarce, but one can get all he wants of the shorter grades. Carnations are equal to the demand, except when some extra heavy shipping orders are received, as was the case last week. A few single violets are being brought in, and are good in spite of the continued warm weather. They sell on sight. Some garden flowers are still on the market. There has, as yet, been no killing frost.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Valentine returned September 18 from an extended trip along the Pacific coast.

The Elitch-Long Flower Store has on display in the window a quantity of red and blue ribbons, prizes awarded the firm at the recent Colorado state fair at Pueblo. Other Denver florists who made displays and received prizes were W. W. Wilmore, for the best collection of gladioli, and Harry J. Berry, for the best dahlias.

Double White Killarney

THIS ROSE, IN THE OPINION OF THE BEST ROSE GROWERS IN THE COUNTRY, IS

The Grandest Forcing Rose That Has Ever Been Offered

Pure white, or practically so, with size, substance and petalage, it is a wonderful white summer rose, and as a winter forcing rose it has no equal.

Killarney Queen

A cerise pink, with the same petalage as Killarney, but in growth and character of bloom it is stronger and heavier than Killarney.

These are the roses shown at the Baltimore Convention in August. We shall show them in St. Louis, Milwaukee and Chicago this fall. They will be at Detroit in January.

Each variety considered separately; prices the same.

Emil Glauber, E. S. Kennedy and C. L. Gross went to Greeley with the Denver Chamber of Commerce crowd to celebrate "Potato day."

Smith & Obrecht report a heavy fall business in their line. They are just completing a pit, in which to store palms, bay trees, etc., during the winter.

C. Zbendin, who has been dangerously ill, is now reported to be on the road to recovery.

The Park Floral Co. has a new store man, Ulrich J. Helie, of Chicago.

Harry J. Berry and Miss Blanche Hamer were married September 27. The news came as a surprise to most of Mr. Berry's friends, as few of them knew that he was contemplating anything of the kind. He has the hearty congratulations of the trade.

The City Floral Co. has finished installing its boiler. The firm is growing carnations and violets just now, but later will take up the growing of bedding stock.

Carl L. Gross is up in Lost Park, trying to shoot a deer. We trust he will be fortunate.

Geo. H. Cooper has decided to devote all of his efforts to one place, and has had the fixtures moved from 1506 Broadway to his store at 833 Fifteenth street, where they will be made to harmonize with the other furniture. The store on Broadway will be rented or re-leased.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

A slump in business characterized the market last week and if it were not for a little funeral work there would be almost nothing doing. Frosty nights are putting an end to outdoor flowers, especially asters. Violets are much improved and the demand for them is increasing. Roses are good and are maintaining a fair price. Maryland is excellent and superior to any other pink. Tafts are also fine, but short-stemmed roses of all kinds are somewhat scarce. There are good Radiance and Beauties in all grades, but Wards are not as plentiful as they were. A few speciosums of good quality are on the market. Bouvardia, although excellent, is not selling well.

Salvias, boltonias, anemones, eupatoriums and wild asters are arriving in great quantities, but gladioli are scarce and in only slight request. Flowering plants meet with approval, but it is still early for a large supply of primroses, begonias and chrysanthemum plants. Boston ferns are selling well.

Carnations are much better than they were; larger blooms and longer stems are the rule. Helianthus has been largely used this fall in all kinds of work, but the supply is about exhausted.

Old-fashioned Dutch bouquets are coming into favor this fall, especially for debutantes.

CARNATIONS

MALTA, OHIO, Sept. 15, 1911.
The plants arrived Wednesday evening and were in fine shape. I have had to buy carnation plants several times, but have never bought any that were as good. I am well pleased with them. If I ever want any of the varieties you grow in the future, you are sure to get my order.

(700 shipped September 11.)

GOSHEN, N. Y., Sept. 28, 1911.
Just a few lines to tell you that your shipment of carnations was received in very good order. Accept my thanks. They are just the kind of stock I had hoped to receive. Every one in the benches have made their new fibers, I guess, by the way they look. There was no go-back to them when planted, although I put them in in the heat of the day.

(400 shipped September 19.)

These unsolicited letters speak for themselves. Names of the writers given on request. For prices and description of stock, see classified adv. under carnations.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.

The Market.

We are now enjoying ideal fall weather. The recent cold snap brought many people to their winter homes. Business is increasing and all retailers are kept busy. Flowers seem to be abundant. Dahlias are in great demand, but few are seen on the market. Millinery and department store fall openings helped business, as flowers have become a principal feature of these affairs, much to the delight of the retailer.

The retailers who cater to the Jewish trade did a big business last week for the Jewish new year. The last Sunday in September is observed for the decoration of the graves of Jewish people. There were a few early weddings and social decorations and funeral work has kept up well.

Carnations are coming in much better, with longer stems and larger flowers. Outdoor stock has nearly all vanished, with the exception of dahlias, a few gladioli and late asters. The florists are now all busy planting bulbs. Chrysanthemums are becoming more plentiful.

Various Notes.

The Doolittle Floral Co., of Orange street, had several wedding decorations last week.

Alfred Ostermann is enjoying his vacation in Europe.

John H. Slocombe, of this city, and William F. Jost, of East Haven, were two of the prize winners at the annual dahlia exhibition of the Connecticut Horticultural Society, which was held in Hartford September 19 and 20.

John Champion and family have returned to their home on Ellsworth avenue, after having spent the summer at the shore. S.

Rockland, Me.—Walter O. Frost, whose business at 253 Camden street was transferred for a time to W. A. Ripley, has again taken possession of the establishment and is conducting it in his own name.

Burlington, Wis. — Frank Mueller, vice-president and manager of the Burlington Floral Co., and Miss Josephine Schemmer, also of this city, were married Tuesday morning, September 26. SMITH'S ADVANCE is the earliest large-flowered white Chrysanthemum. Like Golden Glow, it will produce good blooms at any season of the year following an active period of growth. Buds selected June 10 were cut July 25, 5½ inches in diameter, with excellent stem, foliage and remarkable substance. The later buds, for August and September, gave larger and finer flowers, carried on stems 3 to 3½ feet long. We offer stock plants for immediate or later delivery, from one of the most celebrated growers, at 40c each, $4.50 per doz., $35.00 per 100.

SPECIAL—3 plants for $1.00.

CHRYSANTEMUMS.

EARLIEST WHITE.

Smith's Advance is the earliest large flowered white chrysanthemum. Like Golden Glow, it will produce good blooms at any season of the year following an active period of growth. Buds selected June 10 were cut July 25, 5½ inches in diameter, with excellent stem, foliage and remarkable substance. The later buds, for August and September, gave larger and finer flowers carried on stems 3 to 3½ feet long. We offer stock plants at 40c each, $4.50 per doz., $35.00 per 100. SPECIAL—3 plants for $1.00.

PANSIES.

PANSY PARK PERFECTION is the most thoroughbred strain of giant show and fancy pansies, the flowers of largest size and most perfect form. I have made growing of pansy seeds and plants a specialty for nearly 40 years and it is the result of many years of breeding and selection. It also contains every variety introduced by foreign growers up to date. One of many reports: "Pansies received in fine condition, and they are nice, healthy plants." F. D. Keyes, Florence, Mass. An immense stock of fine field-grown plants from seed sown thinly, broadcast, so that each plant has plenty of room to grow stocky and strong, with extra good roots. Over 75 varieties mixed, the reds, bronzes and best fancy sorts in large proportion, 1000, $3.00; 500, $1.75; 5000, $14.00; 10,000, $27.00. Cash.

Two layers of glass instead of one

You never cover Sunlight Double Glass Sash

You do away with heavy, expensive mats and boards, and your plants get all the light all the time.

The dry air between the two layers of glass takes the place of mats and boards

It is ¾ inch thick and is a better non-conductor. The glass is held in place without putty—can't slip out—easily replaced.

Crops on the market weeks ahead

Under Sunlight Double Glass Sash your plants are earlier and sturdier and you can have bigger, better crops on the market weeks ahead while the prices are still high. In many cases the extra profit on one crop has paid for the sash themselves.

Send for these books

THERE has been a sharp advance on the popular greenhouse coals, and jobbers predict that there are yet other boosts to come.

HEAT FOR ONE SMALL HOUSE.What size of boiler and how much piping will be required to heat a greenhouse 20x32, here in the northern part of New York state? How deep should the boiler be set below the house floor?
J. O. S.

To heat a house 20x32 feet to 60 degrees in weather 10 degrees below zero, something less than 300 square feet of radiation will be needed and it will be well to have a boiler rated for about 400 square feet. For the radiating surface use three 2½-inch flow pipes and ten 2-inch returns. It will be desirable to have the boiler sunk so that it will be entirely below the level of the returns, though with the flows overhead this will not be necessary.

HEAT FOR A VIOLET HOUSE.

As we are now putting up a greenhouse, 22x100, and will add another of the same size next year, we shall be pleased to receive a little information on the heating of the house we are putting up. The house will be three-quarter span. The east end will be all glass. The west end will be boarded up four feet; above that will be glass. The back wall, five feet high, will be boarded. The front wall will be four feet high and will contain two feet of glass and two feet of boards. The height from the ground to the ridge will be ten feet six inches.

We shall heat with hot water, with the flows overhead. We should like to know where we ought to put the expansion tank, and how deep the boiler pit should be. The boiler shed will be at the west end. What size of boiler will be needed to heat two houses of this size? What piping will be required for one house, to keep the temperature up to 55 or 60 degrees when the temperature is 15 to 20 degrees below zero outside? We shall use the

I should like to make a little inquiry with regard to the Chicago Pump Co.'s Automatic Electric Condensation Pump.

Has it given satisfaction?
Do you think it has saved any on the amount of coal consumed?
About how much is your electric bill per month to run it?Is it more economical than a trap?
Thanking you in advance for your reply..

Respectfully,

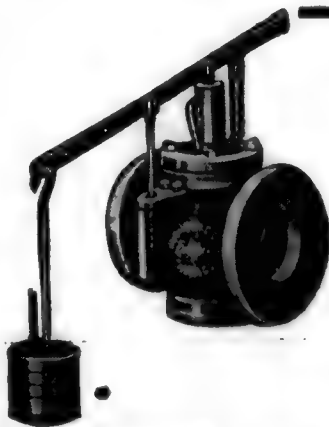

Wm Swinbank

We use it on 240,000 feet of glass. Costs about $5.00 to $8.00 per month for electricity. Makes more even heat, on lower pressure than traps and takes 40% less boiler capacity. It's a success.

are all satisfied with the results it has given, and many duplicate orders is the proof. This Valve will maintain a steady pressure on the low side, no matter how the initial pressure fluctuates. By carrying 40 or 50 pounds pressure on the boiler and setting the valve to carry 5 or 10 pounds on the line, you always have a reserve to fall back on in case of a sudden drop in temperature. Our new catalogue is just out and if you contemplate making any changes you had better get one—it is yours for the asking.

visible to have the top of the boiler two feet below the returns, if possible, as there would then be no trouble about returning the water to the boiler. In case steam is used, a trap would be required if the boiler is higher than the returns.

For heating one of the houses with hot water, use three 2½-inch flow pipes and twelve 2-inch returns. One of the flows can be about two feet below the ridge and the others can be placed on the walls, or one can be under the ridge, another on the front plate and the third under the purlin. Distribute the returns on the walls as evenly as possible, but do not connect more than five returns to one flow pipe. Give the flow pipes a slight fall and connect the expansion pipe at the highest point, which will be near the boiler. The tank need not be a great distance above the flow pipe, but an elevation of eight or ten feet will be desirable.

If steam is to be used, carry a 2-inch flow under the ridge and distribute ten 1¼-inch returns on the walls.

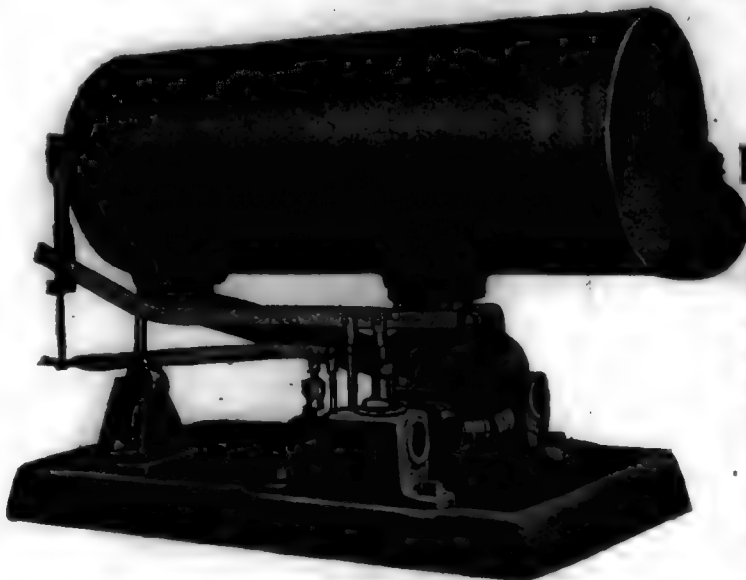

A HOME-MADE HEATER.

I am erecting a double house, each section of which is 21x60, with the center wall skeleton or open. The height to the eaves is four feet six inches. I shall use hot water for heating and wish to get information as to the placing of pipes to heat these two houses effectively from the same heater. I am thinking of building my own furnace, making it of fire-brick and heating the water from a coil placed inside. Can this be done with success? What size of pipe should be used? I expect to use both solid and raised benches. My main crops will be lettuce and tomatoes. I can connect with the city water supply. My location is western Oregon.

H. K. M.

While coil boilers are sometimes used, it is generally better to procure one of the greenhouse boilers now on the market. It will be best to use 2-inch pipe in making such a boiler, and to put about one-twenty-fifth as much pipe in the boiler as will be needed for radiation. Something over 1,000 square feet of radiation will be needed to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees in zero weather in the two houses, and about forty square feet or seventy linear feet of 2-inch pipe will be needed in the heater. For radiation, use three 2-inch flows and twelve 2-inch returns in each house, placing one flow on each wall, and the other under the ridge. The returns can be arranged in three coils underneath the flows.

A LEAN-TO FOR LETTUCE.

Please tell us how to pipe a lean-to house, 12x100, for lettuce, using 2-inch pipe for flows and returns. We will attach the lean-to to our present house, removing the side boards and glass. In a house such as described a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees can be secured by using two 2-inch flow pipes and four 2-inch returns. Unless the heater is below the level of the returns, however, it would be better to use one 2½-inch flow and five 2-inch returns. The flow should be near the ridge and the returns may be placed on the wall or under the benches, as may be most convenient. If the wall is removed, the heat from the main house will pass into the lean-to, provided the latter is the cooler. In the case of high winds there might also be some trouble in securing an even temperature, unless both houses are piped to obtain about the same degree of heat.

PIPING SHOW HOUSE.

Will you kindly state what amount of coils will be needed for a store conservatory 22x24 feet and twelve feet to the ridge pole? The heating will be done with hot water, using 1½-inch pipes, and the temperature required will be 70 to 75 degrees in the daytime and 55 to 60 degrees at night. Our location is northern Illinois.

C. H. F.

For a night temperature of 60 degrees, in a house 22x24 feet, about 240 square feet of radiating surface will be needed. If 1½-inch pipe is used for the flows as well as the returns, this will mean 480 linear feet of pipe. By carrying two pipes under the purlins to the farther end of the house, it will be possible to drop each of them vertically into headers from which four pipes on each wall can be carried around to the end of the house near the heater. Two other flows can be carried under the ridge and these can be connected with coils under two of the benches. The number of pipes in each coil will depend upon their length, but there should be about eighty linear feet in each coil. Each coil can be connected to the heater by means of a 1½-inch pipe.

Trade was fair last week. Funeral work has been light, but decorations for the fall openings have livened matters a little.

Flowers of all kinds are plentiful. Dahlias are being shipped in by the thousands daily. Beauties and roses are to be had in any quantity. Carnations are plentiful and about the same in quality as before. The aster season is about at a close. Chrysanthemums are becoming more plentiful and the price is a little lower.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Business continues to improve. Chrysanthemums and violets are added to the list of stock and asters have about disappeared. Stock of all kinds is looking fine. Roses are good and carnations are getting better every day.

More good flowers will be grown in this vicinity than ever before, as there has been a great deal of new glass put up this season. With the present cheerful outlook, there will be a demand, also, for all good flowers grown.

Pittsburgh and the surrounding districts have had more than their share of rain and storms, which are keeping the greenhouse men back in their fall work.

Various Notes.

The retailers are all making fine window displays. Mrs. E. A. Williams had beautiful dahlia displays last week, using only one color each day. The display of Lyndhurst, a fine dark red, in combination with blue ribbons, was particularly striking.

The A. W. Smith Co. has had some striking window displays of tritomas and gladioli. However, their whole store is one immense window and one can stand on the sidewalk and see their display of specimen ferns and other plants, which are beautiful at all times.

H. L. Blind & Bros. have made some improvements in their Center avenue store and are now redecorating their Liberty avenue store.

Randolph & McClements know how to get all there is out of dahlias and, with the fine specimen ferns, their store is a bower of beauty.

The Zieger Co. is making special efforts that are not without effect. In fact, if business is not up to the usual mark this season, it will not be because the florists are not showing the people the best there is to be had in the most attractive way.

Miss E. B. Maxwell, Wilkinsburg, Pa., is preparing for what she believes will be the best season she has ever had. The prospects all look bright to her.

Hoo-Hoo.

At Stewart Station, on the Verona macadamized road, P. S. Randolph, of Randolph & McClements, is erecting seven fine greenhouses. The buildings are going up on thirty-two acres which Mr. Randolph has purchased for about $35,000. The purchase is for Mr. Randolph's son, P. S. Randolph, Jr., who will operate the greenhouses. Only a few years ago Randolph & McClements bought the Siebert property and greenhouses on Stanton avenue, old Eighteenth ward, and the first report was that they would also operate the new establishment at Stewart Station, but Mr. Randolph says the firm will have no interest in the new greenhouses.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

NEW YORK BELTING
AND
PACKING CO. LTD
91-93 CHAMBERS ST. NEW YORK

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet.
An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

FISHER CARNATION CLIPS

Directions for the use of Fisher Clips

Stretch No. 18 galvanized wire the length of the bench between each row of carnations, but let the two outside wires over the sides of the bench be of No. 10 galvanized wire. Cut No. 18 galvanized wire into lengths the width of your bench and on each end fasten a Fisher Clip. Two men then can walk along each side of the bench and clip the cross wires on the No. 10 side wire with the Fisher Clip just as fast, almost, as they can walk. It is understood, of course, that each cross wire is put between each row of carnations, thus forming in connection with the length wires a square frame or square support for each plant. As the plants grow and need more support a second and even a third set of wire stringers are run in the same manner. When your plants are ready to throw out, just unclip your cross wires and bundle away for use the next season.

The Fisher Clip is easily fastened to the side wires, literally with a "grip of steel;" they will not slide, but are warranted to hold just where they are clipped in place. They are made of heavy sheet steel and are copper plated to prevent rusting, and are time savers, for two men working with these clips can string or support as many carnation plants in an hour as it takes two men in five hours using the old white cotton stringing method. Also consider these clips in the light of an investment; once purchased they will last as long as you grow carnations.

COST OF THIS METHOD

Calculation based on a bench 100 feet long, 5 feet wide, planted to carnations, consisting of 6 rows with 120 plants to a row. This means
500 ft. of No. 18 gal. wire, for length wires, 3 1/4 lbs. at 5 1/2 c per lb. $0.20
200 ft. of No. 10 gal. wire, for side length wire, 10 lbs. at 3 1/2 c per lb.35
600 ft. of No. 18 gal. wire, for cross wire, 4 lbs. at 5 1/2 c per lb.22
240 Fisher Clips, 2 for each row, one on each side of bench, $5 per 1000.. 1.20
Total.....$1.97

As three sets of wires and cross supports are used, the total cost of the supports will not be over $6.00, furnishing ample support for 720 carnation plants, on a bench 100 feet long by 5 feet wide, and there will be no additional cost to you next year.

COMPARISON

A three ring wire support costs about $32.00 per 1000, and will support 2000 plants, or $1.60 per 100 plants; one bench has 720 plants, costing $11.50 for this style of support against a cost of only $6.00 by the use of the Fisher Clip. Your saving will be 50% in cost and by using the Fisher Clip your plants will be better supported.

Try a Few and be Convinced.

GREENSBORO, N. C.

The J. Van Lindley Nursery Co. has completed its large, new iron-frame greenhouse. It is a Lord & Burnham house and one of the largest in the south. It will be planted to carnations. The firm is also making some improvements in the already handsome cut flower store, which is under the management of the popular Charles W. Moorby, formerly of Philadelphia. Their stock all looks fine and they are amply prepared to take care of their immense trade the coming winter.

Howard Gardner has purchased ten acres in the northern part of the city and will erect a range of up-to-date greenhouses, to take care of his thriving trade, which has outgrown his present quarters.

Tom O'Connor is cutting thousands of fine, long-stemmed dahlias from two acres of plants that are grown exclusively for cut flowers. Each plant is grown to a single stalk and staked, and some of them are over eight feet tall. They are all grown by irrigation and kept well cultivated, and have not been affected in the least by the dry season.

George M. Todd, who grows ferns, vegetables and bedding plants, is preparing to enlarge his greenhouses in the spring.

ROCHESTER, N. H.

At the annual Rochester fair, held September 26 to 29, there was a finer floral display than usual, although early frosts had cut off practically all flowers outdoors through New Hampshire. E. A. Corson won many first prizes in the plant, cut flower and design classes, his exhibit being of excellent quality. John K. Alexander, of East Bridgewater, Mass., W. P. Lothrop, of the same town, and Geo. H. Walker, of North Dighton, Mass., made large dahlia displays, dividing the premiums. B. Hammond Tracy had a splendid lot of gladioli. Mr. Tracy arranged a table artistically and also captured first prizes for best basket and parlor bouquet, each of gladioli. W. N. Craig, of North Easton, Mass., judged the plant department.

Cambridge, Mass.—John H. F. Macdonald has opened a flower store at 5 Brattle Square and will conduct it under the name of Macdonald the Florist. Mr. Macdonald was formerly with Welch Bros., of Boston, and Howard's Flower Shop, of this city.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

The return of residents from the country and summer places, with the improvement in the supply of cut flowers, has caused a slight improvement in the demand, but it is not up to what the standard was a year ago. On the other hand, however, the supply of flowers is not up to that standard. There is a great scarcity of good carnations; only a few mums have yet put in an appearance and asters are practically all gone. Funeral work keeps up well and decorations for the openings of dry goods stores and similar places help out.

Various Notes.

The new wholesale market is now a positive fact. It was incorporated last week at the office of the Secretary of State, under the laws of Rhode Island, as the Providence Wholesale Flower Market, with Alexander Macrae, John A. Macrae and Joseph Kopelman as incorporators. The company is authorized to engage in the general wholesale and retail flower trade, with a capital stock of $5,000, divided into shares of $25 each, with rooms at 43 Washington street, which will be opened October 15.

Albert Holscher is cutting some fine chrysanthemums and violets, which find ready sale.

The Westminster Greenhouses are making extensive improvements in the front of the range on Westminster street. They are also building a cold cellar for bulbs.

Several of the larger growers in this section have been receiving their shipments of bulbs from across the water during the last week, and getting them under cover.

The Rhode Island State College has opened its nineteenth year with a large influx of new students. F. J. Godin assumes the duties of Emil A. Mallette as caretaker of the college greenhouses and instructor in horticulture.

A fire which destroyed the two upper stories of the Smith block, on Broadway, Newport, a few days ago, caused considerable damage to the store of H. L. De Blois.

The firm of Smith & Berker, on North Broadway, East Providence, has been dissolved by mutual consent, Gabriel C. Berker retiring, and the greenhouses will be continued by Frank W. Smith.

Oscar Schultz is remodeling his oldest range of greenhouses at Newport, using a larger size of glass.

Wonder Why Question

THREE

ONE of your leading rose growers in the Philadelphia section wanted to broaden out, so he bought a large piece of land several miles from his old plant and began looking around for the best concern to build his first house of the proposed range. This was to be 55x600.

Before getting any figures he did considerable traveling about looking at various houses erected by different concerns. Finally he asked two concerns to bid—we were one of the two. That other concern beat us on price—but we built the house.

Wonder why?

Here is the owner's own explanation:

"While there was considerable difference between the two bids, we decided that the Lord & Burnham House was the cheaper at the higher figure. We see no reason to regret our decision. We expect to build more houses in the future, and do not see how we could improve on what we have already built."

FROM these open pages shown you would think it a book on boilers; but it's more than that — a lot more. It's a Florists' Supply Book of greenhouse materials.

The first half is devoted to greenhouse heating. Not just boilers, pipes and fittings, but pages of useful information such as you have wanted time and time again.

There are 66 pages in the book now, but it's made up loose leaf fashion, and we are going to add at least another 66 before it's completed—maybe more.

It works like this: We send you the book of 66 pages now ; and then every once in a while (perhaps oftener) we will mail you additional pages all ready for putting right in the book. All you have to do is, simply turn back a couple of fasteners and in the pages go.

Every time we get out a new thing of importance we will promptly print up some pages about it and mail them to you.

You can see that such a book will be invaluable to you, because it can always be kept right up to date.

Send for a copy right now, while it's on your mind. Don't put it off till tomorrow, for day after tomorrow you may need it badly.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

THE NEW GIBBS STORE.

Lynn, one of the great shoe manufacturing cities of Massachusetts, has several excellent flower stores, among the finest and most up-to-date of which is the new one of Gibbs Bros., opened September 19 and shown in the accompanying illustration. Announcements were sent out for an opening day and the attendance was so large that 2,500 Asparagus plumosus plants were given away as souvenirs.

The store is fitted up in most modern manner. The salesroom is 30x40, with a handsome display refrigerator at the left as the customers enter. The ice goes in from outside the building, which is a great saving in ways that not only retail florists but their customers will appreciate. In the rear is a curved eave conservatory 15x17. The floor is concrete and the walls are of white brick. One of the conveniences is a retiring room for employees. In the rear of this is the work room, where all design making and littery tasks are performed. There is a driveway in the rear of the store and everything is shipped from the rear door, and all freight comes in that way, the idea being that nothing shall go through the front door except customers. Everything about the store is of first-class quality, steel ceilings, marble counters and all piping and wiring inside the walls. A high grade stock of florists' supplies is carried.

The firm of Gibbs Bros. consists of two members, J. C. Gibbs, who looks after the store, the buying and the selling, and J. F. Gibbs, who looks after the greenhouses and growing. They started in business fifteen years ago, leasing one small greenhouse. The range now covers 25,000 square feet and the plant occupies one and one-half acres of land in the city, but a mile and a half from the store. The regular crew now numbers ten and during the holiday rushes as many as twenty-two have been on the pay roll.

THE FALL CAMPAIGN.

Even among those retail florists who make the largest and most effective use of printers' ink as a selling force there is a disposition to husband the ammunition during the summer, against the season when the gunning's a good deal better, in autumn. There is much logic in the theory that October is the best month of the year for florists' advertising to the general public. By October the flower users are back in town, where they can be reached by the published reminder that "violets are again in season"; that, "owing to market conditions, we can offer an exceptionally good grade of roses at $1.50 per dozen"; that "October brides will find our bouquets a delight"; that "chrysanthemums are in bloom," and that "it's time to plant bulbs in your flower beds." One of the truest of old sayings is, "Out of sight, out of mind." The flower store has been more or less out of sight and out of mind all summer. Advertising at the opening of the autumn season brings flowers into sight, and into mind much earlier than might be the case were flower users left to slowly awaken to a realization of their own needs.

On page 12 there are reproduced some of the advertisements well-known retailers have used in the first weeks of October. On the theory that any advertising is better than no advertising, all these are good. But there is one fact a good many retail florists have yet to learn, and this is that the right copy is almost as essential as choosing the right paper. Almost any one can pick out the best advertising medium—in every case the best paper is the one that carries the most advertising directed to the same class of buyers you want to reach—but not every one can write an advertisement that will produce the desired result. The subject is one that deserves study. Read the advertisements here and note the difference in the appeal they make. It won't take you long to decide that the largest advertisement is not necessarily the best business bringer, or that the one that makes the quickest appeal to the eye does not always make the quickest appeal to the pocketbook. Judge your advertisement from the standpoint of the stranger reading it, and you will do better advertising.

By all means start your autumn advertising right away, but also by all means give some care, time and thought to the copy you hand to the paper. Unless you take an interest in it, better turn the copy writing over to some one who makes that his business. A good man's services will be worth all they cost.

with carmine; Prince Camille de Rohan, velvety crimson; Margaret Dickson, white, pale flesh center; Captain Hayward, crimson scarlet.

Killarneys, both pink and white, can be flowered for Easter, but are less satisfactory than the hybrid perpetuals. Maman Cochet, pink or white, is an excellent pot variety. Clothilde Souper and Hermosa also make nice pot plants.

DUTCH BULBS

FOR BEDS AND BORDERS.

A Big Increase in the Demand.

From the beginning to the end of October, according to latitude, Dutch bulbs for bedding should be planted. The work in the more southerly states can be done even later, but it is unwise to keep the bulbs too long out of the soil, as in a dry state they fritter away much of their strength. I have planted tulips and narcissi in December and they have flowered fairly well, but the quality would have been better if they had been in the soil at least a month earlier. This year frosts have come unusually early in some sections and, with tender bedding plants killed, there is no good excuse for delaying the bulb planting.

While the demand for forcing bulbs has not shown any great gains in late years, there is a tremendous increase in the numbers sold for bedding and naturalizing. Every retail florist with the facilities at command should plant a bed or border of these hardy bulbs. They improve the appearance of his place and prove an excellent advertisement. With a steadily growing call for all sorts of hardy bulbs, here is a line which every live florist might well take hold of and develop. One or two tasteful plantings are bound to bring added orders another season. We are still far behind Europe in bulb planting, but there are no reasons why this should be so, as bulbs here are as easily cultivated as there and no class of flowers furnish greater enjoyment.

The Soil to Use.

Bulbs are not at all fussy subjects to grow for bedding. They like soil well enriched with rotted manure. Do not on any account use fresh manure, as the ammonia is harmful to nearly all bulbs. Stiff, clayey soil can be improved by adding road grit, sand or fine coal ashes to give it porosity. In light, sandy soil it is also advisable to plant the bulbs more deeply than in heavier loams. If at all acid in nature use some lime in the soil.

The depth at which bulbs should be planted varies according to their size. Hyacinths should go in eight inches apart and be covered four inches, though somewhat less is better in stiff soil. Early tulips can also be covered four inches. For mass bedding four inches apart each way will do. The late varieties are better set 4x6 inches. Narcissi, such as Emperor, Victoria, Sir Watkin and other big bulbed sorts, want covering five inches. Smaller sorts, as poeticus, the Leedsis, Barris and some of the other types, can go in three inches over the tops of the bulbs. The distance apart depends upon whether they are to be lifted or not. If lifted each season they should be four to six inches each way, according to variety; if left where they are, and nearly all narcissi flower much better the second season and increase rapidly, 8x12 inches should be allowed large bulbed sorts, with 6x6 for the smaller ones.

Some Good Bedding Tulips.

Tulips still reign supreme as the most popular Dutch bulbs for bedding. Their gorgeous colors have a peculiar charm and are not surpassed by any other spring flowers. Also, by growing an assortment of both the early bedders and the late flowering section, quite a long flowering season is secured. Some of the best bedders are:

Joost Van Vondel is the finest of all early white tulips. Other good whites are White Pottebakker, La Reine, also called Queen Victoria, and White Swan. The last named flowers later than the others. It is really intermediate between the early and late tulips.

In yellows we have Chrysolora, a superb bedder; Golden Queen, a splendid sort, with big flowers; Mon Tresor and Ophir d'Or. Among orange shades Prince of Austria and Thomas Moore are fine and each possesses a delightful odor.

In pink the old Cottage Maid is good, but Queen of the Netherlands, with its large and beautiful satiny pink flowers, Pink Beauty, glowing rose pink, and Flamingo, rosy red on a white ground, are the finest trio in their shade.

Keizerskroon, with its big scarlet and yellow flowers, still is one of the finest of bedding tulips. In scarlets, Vermilion Brilliant, Scarlet Pottebakker and Sir Thomas Lipton are good. Couleur Cardinal and Dusart are the best of the deep crimson scarlets, and Prosperpine of the deep rose varieties. Dark purples, such as Wouwerman and President Lincoln, are not particularly popular; their colors are dull by themselves but in a border with some white and yellow sorts associated they show up well. All the foregoing are the single early tulips.

Solid Colors Are Best.

Beds of mixed tulips look well, while mixtures of hyacinths are just the reverse. Tulips are not of a uniform height and those unacquainted with them should study heights a little when doing any massing or ribbon border work. A bed of scarlet, such as Couleur Cardinal, looks well with a broad band of Chrysolora, yellow, around it. Similarly, the latter used in the center with a scarlet border is in good taste. The high colored varieties should be kept away from the beds of pinks, whites and yellows. A circular bed of scarlet quartered by a band of yellow with a band of yellow around it is effective. Single rows of one color are ineffective. Three, four or more rows should be used, according to the size of the beds.

The following tulips look well together: Chrysolora and Dusart; Yellow Pottebakker and Thomas Moore; White Joost Van Vondel and Sir Thomas Lipton; White Pottebakker and Chrysolora; Prince of Austria and Golden Queen; Keizerskroon bordered with La Reine; La Reine, Vermilion Brilliant and Chrysolora; Couleur Cardinal and White Joost Van Vondel.

Beds of one solid color using such sorts as Thomas Moore, Proserpine, Chrysolora, White Joost Van Vondel, Keizerskroon, Pink Beauty, Queen of the Netherlands, White Swan and Golden Queen are in excellent taste and the most generally satisfactory form of bedding.

Late Tulips Now in Favor.

Year by year late tulips are growing in favor. Five years ago Darwins were almost unobtainable in America except in mixtures. Now every bulb dealer features these and the other late flowering tulips. It is true that those ding than tulips. Their higher price and the fact that they pass more quickly are features against their extended use. They flower before tulips, however, and make a brilliant show. Mixed with other bulbs they do not look well and should be kept in beds by themselves. The single varieties only should be used for bedding. A selection of reliable named sorts is as follows: White and bluish white, Baroness Van Tuyll, Grandeur a Merveille, Mme. Van der Hoop and L'Innocence; rose and pink, Gertrude, Charles Dickens, Gigantea; crimson, Robert Steiger, General Pelissier; blue and purple, King of the Blues, Queen of the Blues, Grand Maitre; yellow, Yellow Hammer, King of the Yellows.

Bedding hyacinths, unnamed, in separate shades of color have a large land rather than in cultivated land, and this season I know of several wealthy amateurs planting from 10,000 to 100,000 in this way, but they make beautiful beds, more graceful even than tulips or hyacinths, and no one of fastidious tastes can object to any of their shades, as all are most pleasing. Solid beds of such sorts as Golden Spur, Empress, Victoria, Emperor, Sir Watkin, Incomparabilis, Figaro and Barrii conspicuus cannot fail to please, while for clumps in bands along shrubberies or perennial borders, the smaller varieties such as Leedsii Mrs. Langtry, Duchess of Brabant and Duchess of Westminster, poeticus ornatus, poeticus poetarum, all the Barrii varieties and most of the Incomparabilis section are splendid. They should not be disturbed until the bulbs become too crowded. Usually they are better lifted every third year.

For naturalizing along the border of lakes and streams, in woodland or in grassland, narcissi are at their best. Never plant them systematically but gather the bulbs in the hand, broadcast them and plant them where they fall, the effort should be to make them look perfectly natural. Here is a field the most fascinating of all for bulb planting, capable of infinite development. Naturalized bulbs in Great Britain are a feature of almost every estate and there is no valid reason why they should not be so here, as their requirements are never exacting and in nearly all cases they increase satisfactorily.

A few of the best naturalizing narcissi are poeticus, poeticus ornatus, Leedsii Mrs. Langtry, Leedsii Duchess of Brabant, Johnstoni Queen of Spain, Pallidus praecox, Burbidgei John Bain, Burbidgei Vanessa, Incomparabilis Cynosure, Incomparabilis Stella, Princeps, Barrii Flora Wilson, Barrii conspicuus and Leedsii Minnie Hume. The two best are poeticus and Leedsii Mrs. Langtry.

Amsterdam, N. Y.—Geo. Hatcher reports having a fine time and doing big business while in Europe.

New Castle, Ind.—Ernest Bender, formerly employed in many of the local greenhouses, but lately of Indianapolis, has accepted a position at the Benthey greenhouses in this city and will soon move here with his family.

Tulip Couleur Cardinal.

in charge of many of our public gardens and parks have not yet risen to their opportunities to show visitors how superb these are. Sooner or later they must follow in the procession and when they do so the demand for late tulips will advance by leaps and bounds. They are taller and more stately than the early tulips, much better for cutting and in the herbaceous borders planted in clumps, they improve in quality if left undisturbed for several years. A selection of excellent Darwin varieties averaging twenty to thirty inches in height is as follows: Clara Butt, soft rosy pink; Mrs. Krelage, soft rose; King Harold, purplish red; Glow, rich vermilion; Dream, soft lilac; La Candeur, white tinged with blush; Farncombe Sanders, orange scarlet; Gretchen, soft blush, fine; Psyche, soft rose; May Queen, rosy pink.

In addition to the Darwins are the beautiful late flowering cottage tulips, flowering from May 10 to June 1 and often in fine shape for Memorial day trade. Some of the best and least expensive of these adaptable for solid beds or clumps in borders are: Picotee, white, pencilled cerise; Shandon Bells (Isabella), rose, edged white; Gesneriana spathulata, brilliant scarlet, bluish black center, superb; Gesneriana lutea, the finest of all late cottage tulips; Bouton d'Or, deep yellow; Inglescombe Pink, rosy pink; Inglescombe Scarlet, rich vermilion; Golden Crown, yellow edged with red; Vitellina, sulphur yellow; May Blossom, white, striped rose; Leghorn Bonnet, primrose yellow.

Hyacinths for Bedding.

Hyacinths are less popular for bedding than tulips. Their higher price and the fact that they pass more quickly are features against their extended use. They flower before tulips, however, and make a brilliant show. Mixed with other bulbs they do not look well and should be kept in beds by themselves. The single varieties only should be used for bedding. A selection of reliable named sorts is as follows: White and bluish white, Baroness Van Tuyll, Grandeur a Merveille, Mme. Van der Hoop and L'Innocence; rose and pink, Gertrude, Charles Dickens, Gigantea; crimson, Robert Steiger, General Pelissier; blue and purple, King of the Blues, Queen of the Blues, Grand Maitre; yellow, Yellow Hammer, King of the Yellows.

Bedding hyacinths, unnamed, in separate shades of color have a large sale and cost considerably less than the named sorts. Except for a slight variation in tints, they are in every way satisfactory.

Hyacinths, tulips and other bulbs all look much better with a groundwork of violas, arabis, myosotis, double daisies or pansies below them, using always a color which will not clash with the color of the flowers of the bulbs.

Narcissi for Naturalizing.

Narcissi as bedding plants are not half appreciated. It is true they are at their best when naturalized in grass

THE HORTICULTURAL OUTLOOK.

[Extracts from an address by J. K. M. L. Farquhar, of Boston, before the New York Florists' Club, October 9, 1911.]

Millionaires are much more numerous now than they were a generation ago. Luxuries then now are necessities, and horticulture has its share in supplying them. To the private gardener I would say: Make yourself master of your calling. If possible specialize in some branch of it; it will distinguish you to do so, just as it distinguishes a physician to specialize in some department of medical science. Like him, you are really a scientific man, your calling makes you one. Yours is a long training; in fact, it is never done; but let not that fact discourage you. Learn all the art of gardening, so far as is possible, and then render to your employer the best service you can and insist upon getting equitable compensation. The demand for men who are gardeners of high grade was never so large as it is now, and such men can command good salaries. The great trouble is that too many important positions are held by incompetent men, who are willing to work for compensation which would not attract a capable man.

You should endeavor to meet the wishes of your employer. Have a clear understanding with him as to what he wishes, then let him know that you must have a free hand in your work for results. Regard your garden and greenhouses as a manufacturer does his mill. Buy enough material to keep your plant running at full capacity, but do not buy anything you do not need. Do not try to return the favor of a nurseryman or seedsman who may have placed you in a position by giving him an order for supplies you do not actually require.

To the florist, I would say: Broaden your business. There is opportunity to do it and you will be obliged to do it to prolong your success. Have you ever tried to add to your customers from among the middle classes? Their trade is solicited when they are in want of funeral pieces, but rarely at any other time. Yet, I believe there are thousands of people of moderate means who would gladly step into a flower store on Saturday and buy a dozen carnations, with a little asparagus foliage, or a few fern fronds, with which to brighten their homes on Sunday and through the week, if such trade were encouraged. Of course it would never do to sell to such people flowers that were about to go to sleep; they would have to be fresh and likely to keep for several days. The feeling that the street vender is the proper person to care for middle class trade will bar progress in this direction.

The florist should endeavor to diversify the attractions he offers; comparatively little is done with flowering plants in pots. Within a decade, or less, you will be furnishing pot-grown fruit trees and vines for dining room decoration. You may even be selling in the spring or early summer the fascinating little cherry tree, in fruit, of the gay Parisian cafes.

Every seedsman should endeavor to educate his customers to the use of high grade seeds and bulbs; he will serve his own best interests in doing this. He should push and encourage the sale of the best varieties, and discourage or discard those that have been superseded.

It is but fair to the seedsman to state that he has had to struggle against adverse conditions. He has been forced to compete with irresponsible dealers, who sold inferior seeds or rubbish. It is safe to say that, on the whole, the seedsman has never received the return he has deserved in this country—nothing like what his brother dealer in Europe has received. Compare the prices of the best European houses with those of any house in this country! Conditions are better than they were a dozen years ago—quality is being appreciated more generally—but many buyers still hesitate to pay a proper price for high grade seeds. This has been especially true of Dutch bulbs. The seedsman cannot do much for the up-building of his business by buying and selling the cheapest, meanest stock to be obtained. In doing this he fools himself, injures his customer, and in the end loses his trade.

What I have said to the private gardener about learning his calling applies still more forcibly to the seedsman. Too many seedsman do not know their business. The Holland bulb men are aware of this and are still taking unfair advantage of the situation. It is well known in Holland that the favorite single blue hyacinth, Charles Dickens, has become so deteriorated by disease that it is no longer fit to be grown. Yet it is listed and sold to this country by the Holland growers, who usually send for it Marie, a cheap, inferior sort. We have seen the beautiful pure white La Grandesse substituted with La Franchise, a blush sort having a purple skinned bulb. Standard Silver and Standard Gold tulips have also deteriorated, yet these are regularly listed by many seedsman, who in most cases receive substitutes such as Cottage Boy, Arms of Leiden, or other inferior sorts.

Nurserymen, as a rule, have been progressive, more so, perhaps, than those engaged in other lines of horticultural industry. Still, there is much for them to do. Too frequently they are more anxious to sell stock than to assure themselves that the stock sold will be well planted, that the ground will be suitably prepared, and that the after-care it receives will be such that the purchasers' success with it will bring the vender future orders. In the long run it would not hurt the nurseryman to inform a client that the cost of preparation of ground and planting, if done properly, will equal or exceed the cost of the stock. Great ignorance prevails as to the conditions under which nursery stock will thrive, especially of the more common shade trees, which are often planted in gravel.

Nurserymen should endeavor to diversify plantations; there is ample material with which to do this and their clients would welcome the variety. Many of the nurserymen are making better terms on their stock, or allowing larger discounts to the, so-called, landscape architects than they do to private gardeners. This practice is to be regretted. New York horticulturists: Yours is the largest opportunity. You have the wealth of the country about you. You have the finest estates within a hundred miles of your doors. It is your duty to so serve those who come to you that they will be encouraged to become larger patrons of horticulture; and if you do this, you will undoubtedly reap the benefit.

You are planning to hold the third National Flower Show in this city. If you make the success of it of which you are capable, it will prove a great stimulus for horticultural trade in New York. To do this you must get to work at once. Your schedule should be out not later than January 1. Get busy at once, gentlemen! This is your opportunity.

STEM-ROT.

We are sending you under separate cover a carnation plant that seems to be affected with some kind of fungous disease. When we first planted, the carnations seemed to take hold nicely, but in about two weeks the lower leaves began to show signs of dying. It seemed to go up the stems until it would kill one stem of the plant and sometimes a whole plant would go. The Victory was the worst. Most of them are growing out of it to some extent. Can you inform me what is the trouble with these plants and a remedy for them? J. J. C. & S.

The disease which is troubling your carnations is the same as was described, in answer to J. D., on page 13 of The Review for September 28. By looking up the remedies suggested there you will find the remedy for your case. I will merely add that you will have your hands full for a while in ridding your stock of this disease.

A. F. J. B.

RED SPIDER.

I am enclosing some of our carnations, which have something the matter with them. Can you tell me what it is and what to do with them? The variety Afterglow is affected the worst. The leaves do not open, but stick together, and the buds, when they come, are dried up. L. S. P.

You have nothing to fear from the curly leaves on your Afterglow. You will find this fully covered on page 14 of The Review for October 5, in answer to a query from W. L. The shoot with the shriveled bud is covered with red spider, and you will want to get after these with might and main right away. Get rid of them before the dark days set in, else you will have trouble from the extra syringing required in fighting them. This summer has been a bad one in many localities, on account of the scarcity of rain. If any plant had spider on it when set out last spring, they were sure to multiply rapidly during the long dry spell. The blasting

STEVENS' GLADIOLUS DISPLAY.

At the recent Industrial Exhibition and Land Show at Saginaw, Mich., the florists found some difficulty in the fact that the affair was of eight days' duration, which necessitated several renewings of exhibits. J. B. Goetz made a good showing of miscellaneous plants and Stevens' Gladioli Co., of which F. H. Stevens and E. J. Hall are proprietors, made a large showing of gladioli, also staging asters and dahlias. The accompanying illustration gives a view of their exhibit, which was completely renewed three times during the run of the exhibition. The display contained about eighty varieties, including a number of promising seedlings.

of the bud may be partly due to the spider, but you will find that some varieties will do this more than others, and mostly when the plants have not become reestablished in their new quarters. When normal growth is resumed there will not likely be any more trouble of that kind. A. F. J. B.

PROPAGATING CARNATIONS.

Will you kindly answer through The Review a few questions on propagating carnation cuttings? At what temperature should they be kept to secure the best results? How long should it take to root them? Shall I keep off all direct sunlight with thin muslin? Should the cuttings be sprayed every day? In taking the cuttings from the plants, should the shank be broken off when put in sand? Any information you can give will be thankfully received, as I want to root 100,000 plants and have had almost no experience in that line. S. H.

It is yet too early to begin propagating carnation cuttings. About the first of November, I will begin a series of articles on carnation culture, in which will be treated the whole calendar, from the taking of the cutting to the cutting of the flower. If you will watch for these weekly articles, you will find all your questions answered, and many other hints which may be of value to you. A. F. J. B.

TOO LATE FOR CARNATIONS.

I am erecting a new greenhouse, 24x60, and expect to have it completed about October 15. Will that be too late to plant carnations of the Enchantress variety in this climate—Schenectady, N. Y.? What would you advise besides carnations for quick money? W. E. J.

October 15 is rather late to plant carnations and to expect good blooms for midwinter. However, if they have not suffered any frost and the plants are lifted carefully, they may give fair results. Your latitude would make this rather improbable, it seems. It seems to me that single violets would feel more at home under this treatment than carnations. If your market would consume the violets, I would advise you to let the carnations alone until next year and plant violets this season. Growers often plant lettuce on benches under similar circumstances. Take into consideration first what your market will consume, then choose your crop. A. F. J. B.

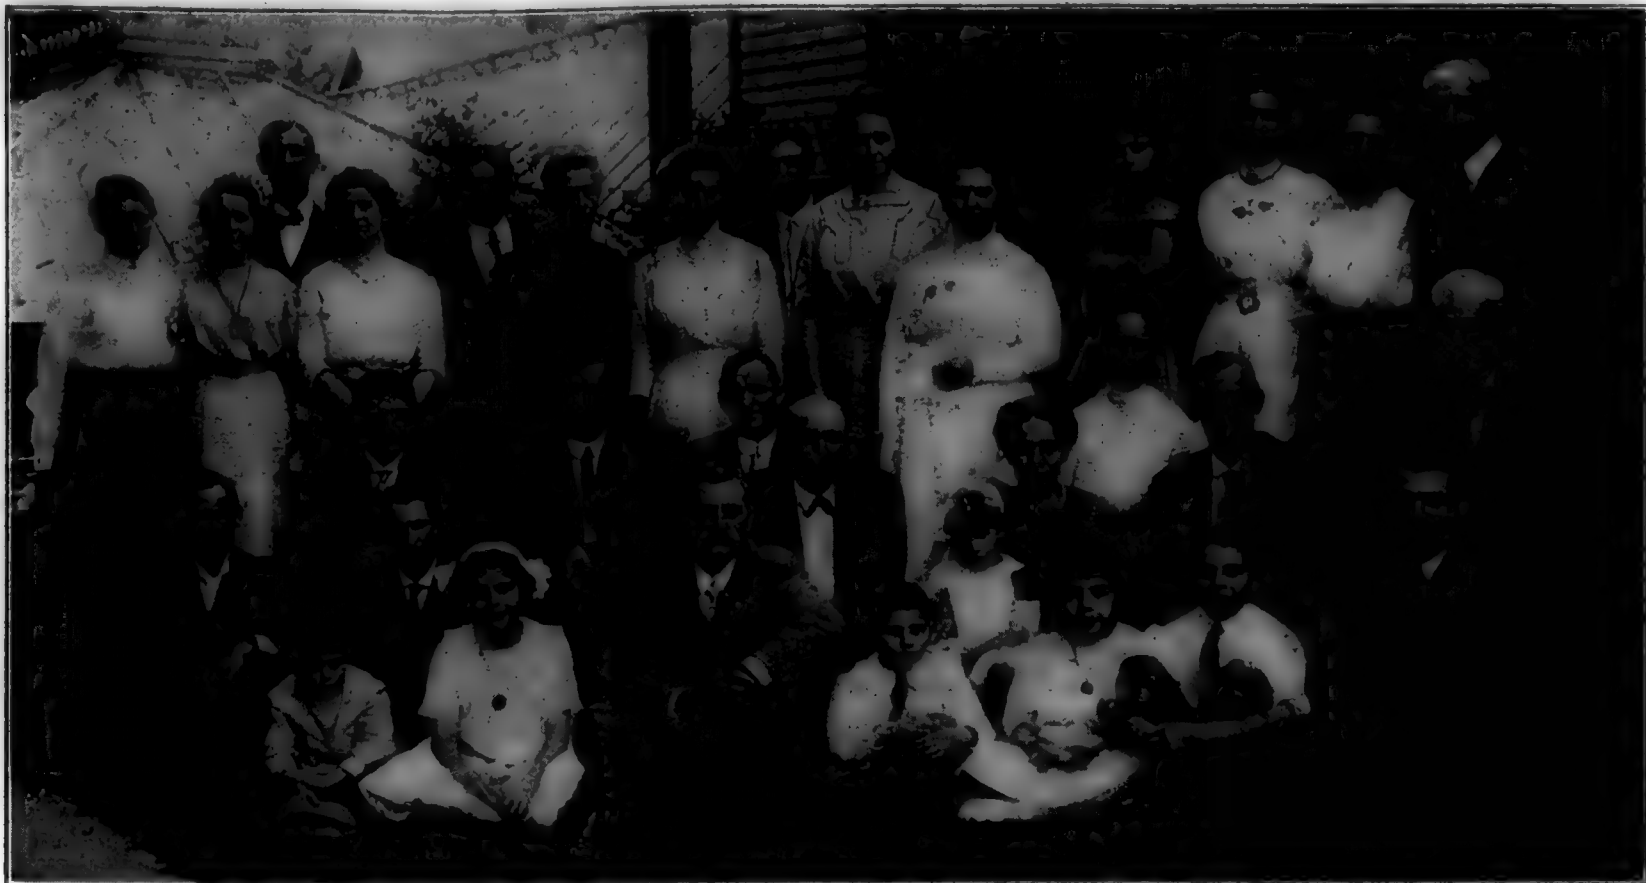

SHEEP MANURE FOR CARNATIONS.

We propose using sheep manure as fertilizer on our carnations. Will you please tell us how strong to make it and how often it should be applied for best results. Our houses were benched July 15 and have made a good growth in rich soil with one-third part of cow manure added. We are now cutting good stock. R. F. C.

If you feel sure that your carnations need feeding at this early date, you will find sheep manure about as good as anything I know of, but use it with discretion, as it is strong in nitrogen and will have a tendency to make your plants soft. To make a liquid that will be quite strong enough for this time of the year, put a half bushel of sheep manure in a bag and hang it in a 50-gallon barrel of water.

After it has soaked for about three days take the liquid and dilute it with water, about one part liquid with three parts water. One application each week will be plenty. The same manure can be left in the barrel about four weeks, when fresh material should be used.

Keep a close watch for a softening of the texture, and the minute you notice it, stop feeding. Most growers do little feeding on field-grown stock before the first of the year. A. F. J. B.

CHICAGO'S SILVER JUBILEE.

October 5, 1911, was a red-letter day in the history of the Chicago Florists' Club—it was the twenty-fifth anniversary of the inception of the organization, now grown to be one of the largest of its kind in the country, with a membership more than local, for on its rolls are those whose place of residence is far afield, though they all feel at home at Chicago. For the proper observance of the occasion invitations were sent to the clubs of other cities, Elmer D. Smith having months ago promised to be present with a seasonable essay. Milwaukee responded with a delegation of twenty-one, while St. Louis, several times as far away, was at least equally as well represented by fourteen. There was bowling for mixed teams at Bensinger's new alleys in the afternoon, club meeting at 7 p. m. and a banquet at 8:30. The visitors were:

From Milwaukee and vicinity—Charles Menger, Richard Leitz, W. A. Kennedy, Nick Zweifel, A. Klokner, W. C. Zimmermann, Arthur Leidiger, August Roesch, Peter Nohos, E. J. Manns, F. H. Holton, H. V. Hunkel, Charles Burmeister, Roy Currie, F. W. Mueller, Gust. C. Mueller, C. C. Pollworth and Mrs. Pollworth, G. H. Hunkel, August Kellner, Eugene Oestreicher.

From St. Louis and vicinity—C. Young and Mrs. Young, Robert Windler and Mrs. Windler, George H. Angermueller, Oscar Heittmann, C. C. Sanders, Frank Gorley, Frank Vennemann, William Osseck, Edward Denker, David Geddis, A. S. Halstead and Mrs. Halstead.

From Adrian, Mich.—Elmer D. Smith.

From Detroit—H. Balsley.

There were 137 at the tables when the jubilee dinner was served, rather overtaking the capacity of the dining room. It was the largest turn-out yet for Chicago florists and there were several ladies. President Philpott introduced F. F. Benthley to act as toastmaster, he being the oldest ex-president present. There were so many notables whom the toastmaster wanted to hear from that many of the visitors and suburban members who had to catch the last train for home had to leave before the speaking fairly had begun. The talk was largely reminiscences, as was appropriate to the occasion, though several speakers had a word to say for the events of the near future—the Milwaukee show next month, the Detroit doings in January and, especially, the Chicago convention, in August, 1912. Those called on for speeches or stories were: J. C. Vaughan; H. V. Hunkel, president of the Milwaukee Florists' Club, who sprung a complete surprise by presenting the Chicago club with a magnificent silver loving cup that was gracefully accepted by President Philpott; George Asmus, president of the S. A. F., who in closing read a letter from Vice-President-elect Poehlmann, who was out of the city; Robert J. Windler, president of the St. Louis Florists' Club; Elmer D. Smith, president of the Chrysanthemum Society of America; W. N. Rudd, Harry Balsley, P. J. Foley, A. C. Kohlbrand, H. N. Bruns, F. H. Holton and others. Toastmaster Benthley read a telegram of congratulation from the New York Florists' Club.

The business session of the club was cut down to the minimum, in order to make time for more generally interesting matters than the details of the local housekeeping. President Philpott, acting in accordance with a resolution adopted at the September meeting, presented a list of committees appointed to handle the local arrangements for the S. A. F. convention of 1912. These are published in another column. A. H. Poehlmann, vice-president of the S. A. F., sent a letter dealing with his plans for convention work. There were three proposals and the following were elected to membership: D. E. Freres, 162 North Wabash avenue; Ignatz Stachowiak, 1304 Marianna street; William Lorman, 1625 Hudson avenue; M. H. Mann, 5504 North Clark street; Paul Amling, William Burhop, Walter Amling, Paul Weiss, Arthur Schmidt, Henry Meyer, Maywood, Ill.

Elmer D. Smith's paper was one of the best ever presented before the club. It will be found on another page. Mr. Smith received a hearty vote of thanks.

There was a notable exhibit, a vase of twenty-five blooms of Chrysanthemum Unaka, brought by Mr. Smith. It is a pink of about the Duckham shade and everyone agreed that so good pink mums never had been seen at so early a date. Mr. Smith said he flowered but 200 plants, all being cut in the first week of October. The variety will shortly be in demand. The same exhibitor showed a vase of Smith's Advance. C. W. Johnson brought three of W. N. Rudd's seedling carnations. The crimson was Mrs. A. McCrea, which took the sweepstakes cup at the last Chicago show. The others were a red and a white, the latter the best of the lot in the opinion of many, but all splendid stock for so early in the season.

Barrington, R. I.—James Crawshaw, formerly of Providence, now has concentrated his efforts here, where he has a large local business as well as his wholesale growing specialties, which are asparagus and marguerites for the Providence market.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

THE MUM SPECIALIST'S NOTES.

The Harvest Season.

Flowers of many varieties are coming in rapidly and by the middle of the month there will be a good selection of varieties in the market. The varieties being cut this week are Gloria, Beatrice May, Rosiere, Yellow Miller and Mrs. J. A. Miller, following on the heels of Monrovia, October Frost and Montmort. So far there has been little damping on the flowers as compared with other seasons, although we are not yet out of the woods by any means.

Growers in the interior do not realize what it means when the sea fogs drive for miles inland and a house of chrysanthemums in full bloom may be rendered almost useless in a night from excessive moisture. In such cases the only remedy is to close the house up nearly tight, leaving just a little ventilation to allow for a current of air, and run a line of steam around the house.

Where there are no heavy fogs and the temperature is low, there should always be a line of steam in the house to keep the atmosphere dry and buoyant.

Chrysanthemums seem to be looking well with the exhibition growers. This is somewhat surprising when we consider the frightfully hot weather most sections were subjected to during the months of July and August.

Careless Packing.

In going through the wholesale market, one is often struck by the carelessness with which the average grower sends in his flowers. After spending four to six months growing a crop it certainly seems the height of folly not to take sufficient care to get the flowers on the market without getting them all bruised up.

Many growers use a deep box, like a shoe box, jam as many flowers as possible into this without using tissue paper between the flowers and then, when the box is full, the top is pressed down as though it were a bale of hay that was being packed and sent into the market. In a few days the grower is using lurid language and exclaiming that "chrysanthemums don't pay!"

It is true the margin of profit is small, sometimes, but it is even smaller in the case of careless growers who do not seem to have learned the first rudiments of packing.

Make a pillow of old newspapers to put under the heads of the bottom layers. Use a small bit of tissue paper between each bloom, so that the petals do not interlace and tear the flowers apart when they are being taken out of the box. Start the second row of flowers just beyond the first row and, while the box should be full, it should not be jammed. Then have a wooden cleat over the foliage to hold the center firm. A box packed in this manner should travel, with ordinary care, 500 or 600 miles without serious damage to the contents. C. H. Totty.

THE MUM AND ITS CULTURE.

[A paper by Elmer D. Smith, Adrian, Mich., read before the Chicago Florists' Club at its silver jubilee, October 5, 1911.]

Although most of those present are directly or indirectly interested in chrysanthemums, I venture the large majority do not consider the volumes that have been written during the last decade treating upon every phase of this important branch of floriculture. The trade papers have from time to time presented excellent cultural notes, and several books have been published by able writers, so that our files are filled with compilations of exceptional merit, and adequate to the needs of this vast country. Confronted by these facts, it would be the height of folly to attempt to offer food for thought along new lines. The tillage has been nearly or quite complete; and, furthermore, this is a complicated subject, when we consider its diversified interests.

For these reasons it would seem wise to present only the more important features, and, presuming the majority of your members are most interested in commercial cut blooms, I will endeavor to give attention to this aspect.

Before discussing cultural methods let us first consider best varieties for our purpose.

The Best Early Varieties.

As the early kinds are first on the market, they are naturally initial in these deliberations. I have some misgivings in mentioning those I consider best for this purpose, as it may appear egotistical, inasmuch as the earliest white, yellow and pink originated with us. Smith's Advance and Golden Glow are the earliest white and yellow and may be had from July onward. Unaka, for October 1, is the earliest large flowering pink.

There has been considerable discussion as to the propriety of having varieties which mature before the latter part of September. This point must be determined by those engaged in this industry. Personally I would not advise growing in large quantities for the wholesale market, unless the crop is controlled so as to bring them in about September 15 and later. The grower who retails his products may, with impunity, provide limited quantities earlier in the season and use them to good advantage. The question is one of supply and demand, which governs the florists' entire output, and as the fall trade does not begin until the latter part of September, it is a natural supposition that large quantities could not be disposed of to advantage before there is a real demand.

For early blooms the most important feature is early planting, and just when this should be done depends upon the date they are to be cut. Smith's Advance and Golden Glow planted the first part of May and buds selected about June 25 should mature in the last half of August. Successive plantings up to early June, securing the first bud, will give a continued crop to late October.

Unaka planted May 1 with buds secured August 5 to 10 should all be ready to cut in the first half of October. As it is a strong grower, with stems four feet, incurved blooms over six inches in diameter, and similar to William Duckham in color, though possibly a little brighter, it has no rival as an early pink.

The Second Earlies.

At the present time October Frost and Donatello are making their appearance. Both are good to follow Smith's Advance and Golden Glow, but should be planted in May or early June to secure best results.

For October 15 to November 1 we would plant Oroba, a white coming in a few days in advance of Ivory, producing larger blooms and of splendid, sturdy, dwarf habit. Chrysolora, for yellow, is unsurpassed for this period, being larger than Col. D. Appleton and fifteen days earlier. It has stronger stem and is of the best incurved form. Gloria would be our choice for pink.

These three, like the earlier kinds, are more satisfactory when planted fairly early, not later than June 15, and buds secured about August 15, which should insure the crop being cut and out of the way before the mid-season or November varieties are ready.

There are so many good midseason kinds to select from it does not seem necessary to mention them, and the above remarks apply to the late flowering section.

Pompons, anemones and singles possess the desired qualities to a degree, and are of special value to those who retail their cut and cater to the best trade. They lend grace and beauty to floral arrangements; in fact, the best effects can not be obtained without them. The singles are more fragile and are not so well adapted for consignments that necessitate rehandling.

Preparation of the Soil.

Soil is the first item to be considered under the head of cultural methods. Old sods, cut thin, from a moderately firm soil and piled with one-fifth to one-sixth their bulk of cow manure, six months in advance, furnish the best material for filling the bench. Some advocate a larger quantity of manure, but we find the plants do not need it in their earlier stages of growth; also, the wood is firmer and ripens better than where nitrogenous matter is abundant. We prefer giving food later, when the plant is strong and the roots active.

Those who wish to utilize old soil will meet with good success by using half new and half old. We prefer placing the new at the bottom of the bench and, if prepared compost is not at hand, fresh cut sods chopped and put through a soil mixer will make an excellent substitute.

Time to Plant.

As previously stated, the early sorts should be planted if possible early in May. We have calls for early varieties for planting late in July, but the fallacy of such a course is apparent when we consider that, instead of planting, the grower should be selecting buds. The midseason and late varieties will do well if planted in June. It is true fairly good results are the outcome when this operation is deferred to the succeeding month, but the flowers are seldom so large and fine in finish as those which have had ample time to develop a strong plant before selecting the buds.

Early planting in only moderately rich soil gives the best stem and foliage for the commercial grower; namely, smaller leaves, on short-jointed and firm-wooded stems. With the foundation constructed thoroughly and complete, the building of the bloom will practically take care of itself.

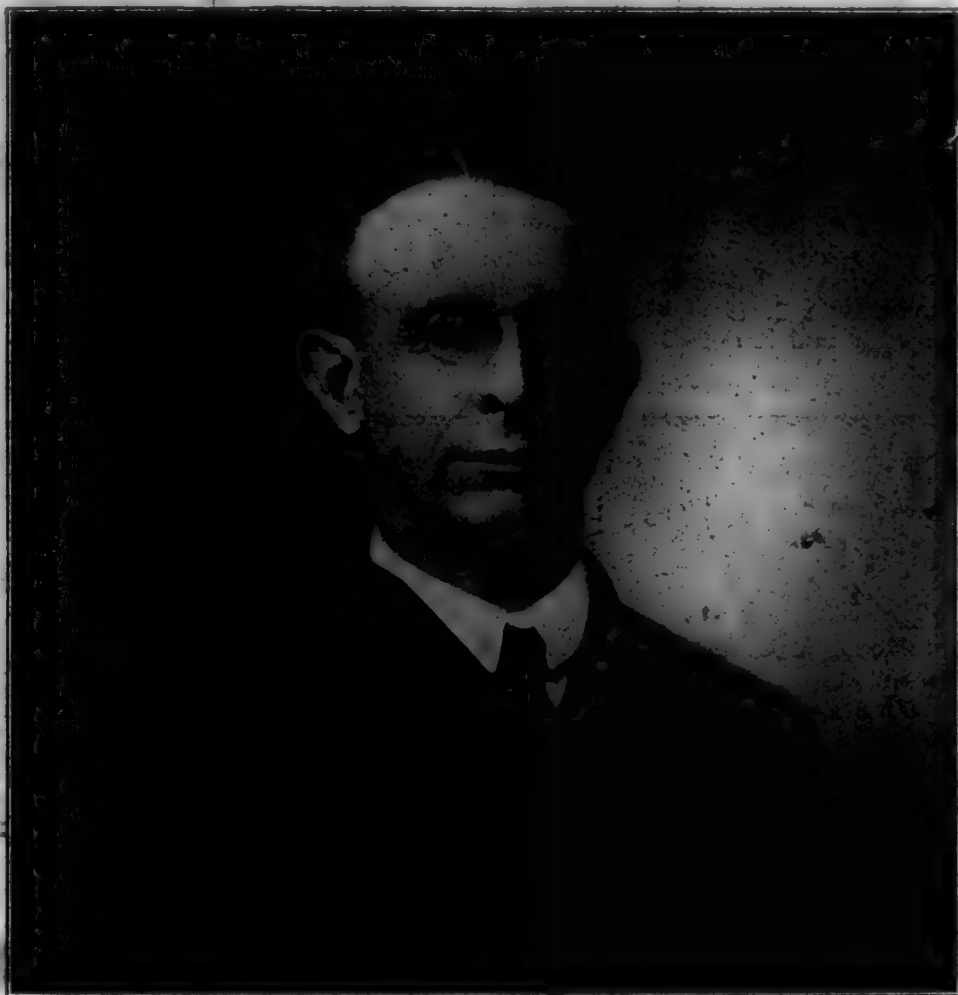

It is unnecessary to go into details in the operation of tying. This work should be done when the plants are a foot in height, or at least before there is danger of their toppling over. From this time until the buds appear weeding and watering are the most urgent matters requiring attention. Less water will be required during the first stages of growth, with increased quantity as the plants gain strength and more foliage.

Taking the Buds.

The date for the buds to appear is governed to a large degree by the climatic conditions. During my visit in California, the state of many climates, I was much impressed by the fact that those portions of the state enjoying a cool air produce the earliest blooms and the late ones are from localities more torrid. At Los Angeles I was told the first in the market come from the growers near the coast, while the late ones come from the foothills of the mountains only twenty miles distant. No fixed dates can be given, as they vary according to the conditions of the weather during July and August. The cooler, the earlier, and the warmer, the later, this change in construction takes place. On one occasion we had W. H. Chadwick immediately follow Ivory and at other times they have been sixty days apart.

With an average season in this section, flowers for September are from buds selected about July 1 to 15; for October, August 1 to 15; for November, August 25 to September 15; for December, September 20 to October 10. The dates given are only approximate at best, as some varieties develop more rapidly than others.

The bulk of chrysanthemums are planted from June 15 to July 15 and those best adapted for this purpose are such as produce perfect blooms from buds selected from August 25 to late September.

Many of the kinds shown at the exhibitions look beautiful but are often misleading to the novice, for, when placed under the conditions which usually prevail on commercial places, they are useless. It is far better to rely upon the judgment of some competent person than to select from the show boards unless you are well versed in these matters.

I am pleased to state that shading is not practiced as much as in former years. Sunlight is a prime factor in producing strong, sturdy growth. A light shading is, however, highly beneficial to all varieties showing color before October, and it is often necessary to continue later, provided bright sun prevails and the temperature rises above normal.

The Best Fertilizer.

What form of nourishment to supply is a topic of considerable importance. Few growers entirely agree on this subject. Bone meal, cow, sheep and, in fact, almost any kind of manure, is beneficial, but the real value depends upon the amount of plant food they contain when considered in ratio to price paid. All or part of those mentioned may be essential in the production of the largest blooms which find their way to the exhibitions, but if my object was solely the production of high grade commercial stock I would prefer a complete concentrated chemical fertilizer, say one containing about fifty per cent plant food. While it costs more per pound than the natural products, it will supply nearly 100 times the amount of the required elements, namely, nitrogen, potash and phosphoric acid.

To make this comparison more comprehensive, one pound of such chemicals is equal to nearly 100 pounds of manure. The first cost would be greater for the chemicals, but we should bear in mind that the entire fifty per cent of plant food is available as soon as put into solution. On the other hand, the manure requires considerable labor to bring it into such a form. In the first place, the chemicals are placed in a tank of water and in a few hours are ready to apply with a hose; in the second case, the material must either be used in the form of top dressing or reduced to a liquid before it is available.

I am frank to admit that there is less danger of injuring a crop with manure than with chemicals, unless the latter are judiciously applied. Most of such materials are used too strong. Ten years ago we were applying at the rate of one ounce to five or six gallons of water; now the ratio is one to twenty. Weak solutions are much safer, affording perfect control.

Varieties of robust constitution, which are usually able to assimilate more food, can be treated at shorter intervals with the soil recommended. Thirty pounds of such concentrated chemicals at a cost of less than $10 is sufficient for 30,000 to 40,000 plants. The labor in preparing manure for such a number would alone far exceed the figures given.

Combating Insect Pests.

There are a few insects which must be kept in check if our plants are to be kept in a healthy condition. Aphids are the most abundant. The last two years we have used hydrocyanic acid gas with most satisfactory results. Its advantages over the various forms of nicotine are that it kills every aphid in the house, and they do not reappear for a month or more. We have fumigated but three times since the middle of May and our stock will be clean into November. A high grade of cyanide is most effective and we prefer the sodium to the potassium form.

W. J. Keimel, Elmhurst, Ill., suggested in one of the trade papers the use of one pound of Paris green to five pounds of brown sugar, using one ounce of this mixture to one gallon of water for thrips. We find this is equally effective in destroying the larvae of the leaf-tyer and it does not discolor the foliage.

The achievements in floriculture are not wrought by any one thing we do, but by the many things given attention at the proper time, and chrysanthemums are no exception to this law. I think all of you will agree with me that superiority in knowledge is not as essential as the ability and energy to attend promptly to every detail which is of vital importance in marking the degree of our success. Nature provides a way and we endeavor to assist.

Sweet Peas

FOR WINTER FLOWERING.

The earliest planting of sweet peas, made late in July, is giving some nice flowers, which are useful now that the outdoor crop has passed. While the demand for sweet peas is not especially vigorous until after the mum season has passed, there are customers who want them the year around and they are now one of the indispensables in the wholesale markets.

Look over the early plants every five or six days and give them the necessary ties. The night temperature for flowering peas should be kept about 50 degrees; a couple of degrees lower is better as winter progresses. Fire heat is now a necessity, but the plants must have free ventilation. Avoid, however, cold draughts, which may result in an attack of mildew, which always must be guarded against.

Sweet peas often are used as a succession crop to follow early chrysanthemums. It would have been an advantage to have started seed in small pots or flats. Quite a little time is thus gained as compared with sowing the seeds in drills. Sweet peas want generous compost to grow in and it does not pay to start them in the partially exhausted chrysanthemum soil without first adding a liberal quantity of cow manure and mixing it in well. Sow the seeds quite thinly. A plant every two or three inches is far better than having a crowded row. The thinner plants will give stronger haulm and finer flower spikes.

It is better to stick to the regular winter-flowering varieties for some time yet and not sow the Spencer types until December and January, when late mums will be all cut.

INDIANA STATE FLORISTS.

The Meeting at New Castle.

The monthly meeting of the State Florists' Association was held at New Castle, October 3, with about fifty members present. The Indianapolis visitors, arriving there at 1 p. m., were met by the New Castle florists and escorted to the Elks' club rooms, where an elegant luncheon was served. Afterward the members gathered on the north lawn and were photographed.

The party then made a tour of the city in automobiles, visiting the different greenhouses. The first stop was at the new place of Peter Weiland. Mr. Weiland has had about all he could do this summer, having erected ten houses, 28x300. These houses are equipped with cement benches and cement gutters. There is still a great amount of work to be done, as the steam plant is not complete yet. However, Mr. Weiland expected to raise steam in a few days.

The next stop was at the establishment of Heller Bros. Co., where we found things in apple-pie order. The Beauties at this place were exceptionally fine, as were the Killarneys and other stock.

Visits were also made to the establishments of P. J. Olinger, F. J. Bentley & Co., William Dittmann and the South Park Floral Co. The stock at all these places was in fine shape.

The business meeting was called at the New Castle club rooms. It was voted, on the invitation of the Richmond florists, that the next meeting be held at that city, on the regular meeting day, the first Tuesday in November.

Among those in attendance from Indianapolis were: John Hartje, Charles Pahud, John Niggel, Jr., George Wiegand, William Langstaff, M. Marer, R. A. Glaubke, Harry Pahud, C. F. Bohne, Robert Ellis, A. Shreiber, Adolph Baur, Sidney Smith, Harry Rieman, R. Rodenbeck, Albert Pettit, Lon Elder, H. L. Wiegand, A. W. Marshall, F. Rieman, H. Junge and C. Sonnenschmidt.

Among the visitors from other cities were: R. A. McKeand, Marion; C. A. Rieman, Connersville; B. F. Hensley, Knightstown; Ira Clark, Greensburg; S. Humfeld, Muncie; E. G. Hill, Joe Hill, George Gause, Charles Jones and Fred Lemon, all of Richmond; M. A. Barrick, Seymour; W. B. Smith, Ernst Rieman and William Roepke, of Indianapolis; W. W. Coles, Kokomo.

H. L. W.

From a Muncie Correspondent.

The writer attended the State Florists' Association's monthly meeting in New Castle, October 3. An unusually large number were present. The weather was ideal for the occasion. That New Castle florists know how to entertain was fully demonstrated. The meeting was a great success in every way.

After a sumptuous dinner at the Elks' club rooms, the visiting florists started on their tour of inspection. Peter Weiland's new place was first visited. The ten new 300-foot houses are almost completed. The stock was in fine shape, considering that the heating plant had not yet been completed. There are four houses in roses, two in carnations and four in sweet peas. Mr. Weiland has an ideal location for his plant. The houses are on an elevation that affords good drainage for his heating plant, which is located about 200 yards from the houses, with a fall of about thirty-five feet. The boilers are near the siding. Coal will be dumped from the cars without hauling, which will be a great saving. Mr.

A. Miller, at Springfield, Ready For His First Flight.

Flower Show at the Illinois State Fair, Springfield, October 2 to 5.

Weiland has certainly rushed the work of construction.

The next stop was made at the new establishment of Heller Bros. Co. The location is fine and the construction seems to be of the best and in every way modern. Considerable soft stock is being worked up for their retail catalogue trade. Their roses are at the Jennings plant and will be moved to their new place as soon as the benches are completed. This range is certainly a good addition to the already large glass area in the City of Roses.

P. J. Olinger's place was our next stop. Here everything was in good shape. The new heating plant, just completed, with Stokes' double steam trap system and pressure valves, insures ample heating capacity. Their carnations were in excellent condition.

F. J. Benthey & Co., as usual, have as fine a block of tea roses as can be found anywhere. Killarneys and Richmonds were in splendid condition.

The establishment of the South Park Floral Co. was never in better shape. The 80,000 Beauties were coming in finely. Some of the early plantings showed ten to twelve shoots, with the foliage clean and down to the ground, and the color good. The prospects here are for the largest cut in years.

William Dittmann's place is located just across the street from the South Park Floral Co. This old American Beauty grower has his stock in fine condition and good cuts are made.

The business meeting at the club rooms ended the program. Next meeting will be held at Richmond. A special invitation was tendered to the Northern Indiana Florists' Association to attend this meeting.

Mr. Heller, who was in charge of the entertaining, certainly was equal to the occasion. S. H.

Geraniums

GERANIUMS FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

Will you please publish in the next issue of The Review when to start geraniums for Memorial day, and will the cuttings be all right to start them in 2-inch pots, and when should these be shifted to 4-inch pots? I am a beginner and I want to grow geraniums for Memorial day. The reason I am asking for information now, I would like to grow two crops of lettuce before starting my geraniums if I can, and I will be much pleased with all the information I can get on raising geraniums. J. H. N.

Cuttings should be inserted sometime during October if you want first-class 4-inch pot geraniums at Memorial day. You can place them singly in 2-inch pots of sandy loam, or, if you want to economize space, use flats three inches deep, with good drainage and filled with sharp sand. Water the sand well and then cut lines with a piece of thin steel or a mason's trowel and place the cuttings in at the rate of 125 to 150 to each flat 24x12x3. Trim the leaves off the cuttings quite closely. If they are sappy let them lie and dry over night before placing in the sand. Stand the flats on a shelf. Give them the full sun and water quite moderately after the first soaking, just enough to prevent shriveling. These cuttings will make a mass of fibrous roots and can be put in 3-inch pots in January and later shifted to 4-inch pots. If you decide to place them singly in 2-inch pots, it is better to shift first to 3-inch and later to 4-inch. Large shifts do not pay.

You can put in additional geranium cuttings as late as February and these will make nice 3-inch stock by Memorial day, but will not be so large as the fall propagated plants. C. W.

SPOT ON KENTIAS.

I am enclosing a leaf of seedling Kentia Belmoreana which are becoming infested with what appears to be a fungous disease of a bad character. The plants are growing in the open shade, planted in rich leaf-mold soil and well watered. I shall esteem a suggestion as to the remedy and hope it will be useful to others growing palms in southern countries. J. A. M.

The kentia leaf in question is affected with spot, a fungoid disease that is occasionally found on the members of this genus, and one that is encouraged by an excess of moisture both at the root and overhead. Spraying with a solution of sulphide of potassium, commonly known as liver of sulphur, will probably check this fungus, the solution to consist of half an ounce of the sulphide dissolved in one gallon of water.

The plants being outdoors, it is not quite so easy to regulate the amount of moisture, but I would try keeping them somewhat drier or else water them earlier in the day, so that they would keep drier at night. W. H. T.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The cold wave has passed. It brought snow up state, and some frost near us, but no special damage was done. Even the dahlias escaped and are still arriving in large shipments. Now we have the Indian summer.

Before the present week ends it is expected the chrysanthemum flood will begin, but the week opened with a comparative scarcity of flowers of nearly every variety and prices of roses and carnations are firmer. American Beauties now are in constant demand and the price for the best stock is more encouraging to growers. There should be no further necessity for cleaning up at the ridiculously low prices that have prevailed for many weeks for all the older varieties of roses. The novelties have sold well at good figures, 10 cents for some of the favorites being readily obtainable.

The best carnations have sold up to 3 cents and $1 per hundred is as low as any stock now brings, even in quantity. This will force the department store rates to more respectable levels.

There is a sufficient supply of all the popular seasonable varieties of orchids. Prices have improved a little and they no longer are cheapened by street offerings. The quality is beyond criticism. Valley and lilies have both advanced.

Some grand chrysanthemum stock is here. The finest of them are held at 40 cents to 50 cents each, as usual. There is already an abundance of the medium and smaller flowers and for these the prices retrograde rapidly. A great flood of these is inevitable.

Violets are improving in quality, but prices remain below 50 cents for the specials. The left-overs are many and the street merchants absorb them at their own offer. About 100 boxes are now arriving from Rhinebeck daily.

Asters and gladioli have passed and the dahlia soon will follow.

Smilax is down and asparagus is overabundant.

Club Meeting.

The meeting of the New York Florists' Club October 9 brought out only seventy-five members, but proved to be one of the most interesting in the history of the club. Emil Schloss, W. E. Cook and E. E. Bates were elected to membership. The resignations of M. C. Wright and W. F. Shea were accepted with regret. The outing committee reported a deficit of only $48.95, with total expenditures of $1,131.95.

A letter from President Asmus announced the appointment of the National Flower Show committee. Charles Lenker gave a talk on the Baltimore convention and Messrs. Farquhar, Totty, Nugent and Manda took part in the discussion. John Young spoke appreciatively of the loyalty of the club at Baltimore.

Messrs. Shaw, Miller and Manda were appointed to draw up resolutions on the death of I. L. Powell. An appropriation of $50 was made for the bowlers. Charles Schenck and P. O'Mara gave interesting reports of their European travels this summer.

C. H. Totty exhibited a splendid vase of Sunburst roses, which scored eighty-nine points. Mr. Totty and the E. G. Hill Co. will disseminate the variety in 1912. Charles Lenker showed dahlia Ernst Glasse and received the club's thanks. Wm. Tricker, Arlington, N. J., showed a dozen varieties of outdoor roses, receiving the thanks of the club. H. F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, showed fine dahlias, for which thanks were accorded. Special mention was awarded Manda's seedling dahlias.

The lecture of the evening was by J. K. M. L. Farquhar, of Boston, on "The Horticultural Outlook."

The meeting November 13 will be ladies' night and J. Otto Thilow, president of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, will deliver an illustrated lecture.

Some remarkable prices were realized for large kentias at the MacNiff auction rooms on Vesey street last week, the Rosery paying as high as $170 for some specimens. Among the prominent retail New Yorkers represented were Alex. McConnell, Myer and Stumpp. Phillips, Abrahams and Hanig, of Brooklyn, also were heavy buyers. There were also some fine palms offered at Elliott's.

On the S. S. President Grant, from Hamburg, October 2, the Greek-American Florists' Supply Co. received, according to the manifest, "ten packages plant parts."

NEW YORK'S SHOW CHAIRMAN.

Charles H. Totty, who has been named as chairman of the committee to have charge of the third national flower show, at New York, in 1913, is a resident of Madison, N. J., but to all intents and purposes he is a New Yorker, for Madison, floriculturally, is counted a part of New York, for it is the greatest city's greatest rose growing center. Mr. Totty is an ex-president of the New York Florists' Club and one of the most active workers in it, as he is in all trade affairs. He has had wide experience as an exhibitor and his selection as head of the organization that is to undertake to push yet higher the market at Boston was a most happy one, and one that augurs well for the successful consummation of the big undertaking.

Charles H. Totty.

This is a young man's age, and Mr. Totty is only 38 years old, having been born in Shropshire, England, in 1873. Although none of his family ever was connected with our trade, his chief delight, even as a boy, was work in the garden. At the age of 13 years, having absorbed a good part of the education afforded by the common schools of Shropshire, the lad went to work in the gardens of a Mr. Sheringham, where he stayed three years, in accordance with the recognized apprenticeship system. Then a year in the nurseries of Messrs. Dickson, of Chester, was supposed to provide sufficient horticultural knowledge to launch him as a full-fledged journeyman gardener. After a year at Norris Green, a noted fruit-growing establishment near Liverpool, he came to America in 1893. A year and a half was spent on the estate of Mrs. Thompson, at Canandaigua, N. Y., after which the young man located at Madison, having found employment on the H. McKay Twombly estate, under the superintendency of Arthur Herrington, to whose precept he says he owes much for the direction given his thoughts and desires. After eight years there he left to go into business for himself as a wholesale cut flower and plant grower and bought the James Hart greenhouses at Madison, which he since has remodeled, enlarged and made one of the noted places of the town. After six years here he added by lease the Twombly place over which he had presided as foreman.

While Mr. Totty was acquiring an all-round knowledge of the business, he specialized on chrysanthemums, and, while from his place now come some of the best roses and other stock reaching the New York market, still it is for his success with chrysanthemums that he is most widely known. Almost from the start of his business he has made a feature of the trial of all new sorts and the dissemination of such novelties as he approved. The sorts sent out number scores. He has handled in America the Wells-Pockett sets of recent years, as well as many good American sorts. For a number of years Mr. Totty has contributed Chrysanthemum Notes to the columns of The Review, certainly the most widely read notes on this flower which have appeared in America and probably in any other country, for skilled growers everywhere recognize that they are among the most important contributions in the whole history of the somewhat voluminous literature of the chrysanthemum.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Not for some months has there been so good a market as at present. Outdoor flowers are practically gone; the few arriving lack quality and cut little figure. A sharp frost October 7 put an end to dahlias, which, for a week or two, had been made considerable use of in window displays. Roses are not quite so abundant. Some large growers are off crop. Such as are coming in bring a little better price all around, and the continued cool weather is improving their quality. The color of Killarney is as noteworthy as its increased size, and the flowers of the two champion yellows, Mrs. Aaron Ward and Lady Hillingdon, are well up to midwinter quality. Carnations

GERANIUMS FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

Will you please publish in the next issue of The Review when to start geraniums for Memorial day, and will the cuttings be all right to start them in 2-inch pots, and when should these be shifted to 4-inch pots? I am a beginner and I want to grow geraniums for Memorial day. The reason I am asking for information now, I would like to grow two crops of lettuce before starting my geraniums if I can, and I will be much pleased with all the information I can get on raising geraniums.

J. H. N.

Cuttings should be inserted sometime during October if you want first-class 4-inch pot geraniums at Memorial day. You can place them singly in 2-inch pots of sandy loam, or, if you want to economize space, use flats three inches deep, with good drainage and filled with sharp sand. Water the sand well, and then cut lines with a piece of thin steel or a mason's trowel and place the cuttings in at the rate of 125 to 150 to each flat 24x12x3. Trim the leaves off the cuttings quite closely. If they are sappy let them lie and dry over night before placing in the sand. Stand the flats on a shelf. Give them the full sun and water quite moderately after the first soaking, just enough to prevent shriveling. These cuttings will make a mass of fibrous roots and can be put in 3-inch pots in January and later shifted to 4-inch pots. If you decide to place them singly in 2-inch pots, it is better to shift first to 3-inch and later to 4-inch. Large shifts do not pay.

You can put in additional geranium cuttings as late as February and these will make nice 3-inch stock by Memorial day, but will not be so large as the fall propagated plants.

SPOT ON KENTIAS.

I am enclosing a leaf of seedling Kentia Belmoreana which are becoming infested with what appears to be a fungous disease of a bad character. The plants are growing in the open shade, planted in rich leaf-mold soil and well watered. I shall esteem a suggestion as to the remedy and hope it will be useful to others growing palms in southern countries.

J. A. M.

The kentia leaf in question is affected with spot, a fungoid disease that is occasionally found on the members of this genus, and one that is encouraged by an excess of moisture both at the root and overhead. Spraying with a solution of sulphide of potassium, commonly known as liver of sulphur, will probably check this fungus, the solution to consist of half an ounce of the sulphide dissolved in one gallon of water.

The plants being outdoors, it is not quite so easy to regulate the amount of moisture, but I would try keeping them somewhat drier or else water them earlier in the day, so that they would keep drier at night.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The cold wave has passed. It brought snow up state, and some frost near us, but no special damage was done. Even the dahlias escaped and are still arriving in large shipments. Now we have the Indian summer.

Before the present week ends it is expected the chrysanthemum flood will begin, but the week opened with a comparative scarcity of flowers of nearly every variety and prices of roses and carnations are firmer. American Beauties now are in constant demand and the price for the best stock is more encouraging to growers. There should be no further necessity for cleaning up at the ridiculously low prices that have prevailed for many weeks for all the older varieties of roses. The novelties have sold well at good figures, 10 cents for some of the favorites being readily obtainable.

The best carnations have sold up to 3 cents and $1 per hundred is as low as any stock now brings, even in quantity. This will force the department store rates to more respectable levels.

There is a sufficient supply of all the popular seasonable varieties of orchids. Prices have improved a little and they no longer are cheapened by street offerings. The quality is beyond criticism. Valley and lilies have both advanced.

Some grand chrysanthemum stock is here. The finest of them are held at 40 cents to 50 cents each, as usual. There is already an abundance of the medium and smaller flowers and for these the prices retrograde rapidly. A great flood of these is inevitable.

Violets are improving in quality, but prices remain below 50 cents for the specials. The left-overs are many and the street merchants absorb them at their own offer. About 100 boxes are now arriving from Rhinebeck daily.

Asters and gladioli have passed and the dahlia soon will follow.

Smilax is down and asparagus is overabundant.

Club Meeting.

The meeting of the New York Florists' Club October 9 brought out only seventy-five members, but proved to be one of the most interesting in the history of the club. Emil Schloss, W. E. Cook and E. E. Bates were elected to membership. The resignations of M. C. Wright and W. F. Shea were accepted with regret. The outing committee reported a deficit of only $48.95, with total expenditures of $1,131.95.

A letter from President Asmus announced the appointment of the National Flower Show committee. Charles Lenker gave a talk on the Baltimore convention and Messrs. Farquhar, Totty, Nugent and Manda took part in the discussion. John Young spoke appreciatively of the loyalty of the club at Baltimore.

Messrs. Shaw, Miller and Manda were appointed to draw up resolutions on the death of I. L. Powell. An appropriation of $50 was made for the bowlers. Charles Schenck and P. O'Mara gave interesting reports of their European travels this summer.

C. H. Totty exhibited a splendid vase of Sunburst roses, which scored eighty-nine points. Mr. Totty and the E. G. Hill Co. will disseminate the variety in 1912. Charles Lenker showed dahlia Ernst Glasse and received the club's thanks. Wm. Tricker, Arlington, N. J., showed a dozen varieties of outdoor roses, receiving the thanks of the club. H. F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, showed fine dahlias, for which thanks were accorded. Special mention was awarded Manda's seedling dahlias.

The lecture of the evening was by J. K. M. L. Farquhar, of Boston, on "The Horticultural Outlook."

The meeting November 13 will be ladies' night and J. Otto Thilow, president of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, will deliver an illustrated lecture.

The color of Killarney is as noteworthy as its increased size, and the flowers of the two champion yellows, Mrs. Aaron Ward and Lady Hillingdon, are well up to midwinter quality. Carnations are quite aggressive and are making unusually high prices for October, which will fall as the supply of chrysanthemums increases.

Chrysanthemums are rather more plentiful and selling well. Among varieties in evidence are Pacific, Polly Rose, G. S. Kalb, Halliday, October Frost, Marquis de Montmort and Donatello. Violets are getting much more numerous. The cool weather has made them flower earlier. The growers are just starting to house the single varieties. For lily of the valley, the demand has improved. Lilies also are selling well. Cattleya labiata is now obtainable in quantity and is featured in every up-to-date florist's windows, along with Oncidium Rogersii, Vanda carulea and phalenopsis. The demand for asparagus and adiantum has improved. Pot plant trade might be better. A sharp frost or two will galvanize more life into it. There are now quite a number of well flowered chrysanthemums in pots procurable.

Various Notes.

October 9 William Sim started housing his big stock of single violets. He is picking quantities of fine flowers outdoors, averaging 10,000 daily. He has just started picking from a large house of sweet peas. The varieties are Christmas Pink and Mont Blanc. He has this season two long sash houses of pansies, which he has not grown before. He has started to pick from these.

Remember the club meeting October 17. There will be talks on bulbs for forcing by William Patterson, bulbs for bedding by Robert Cameron, bulbs for naturalizing by John G. Duguid and others, and other business in plenty.

Harland H. Rogers, of South Sudbury, has finished his season with asters and is now busy among his carnations. Some of his leading sorts are Enchantress, White Perfection and Beacon.

T. F. Galvin had a large and unique floral design October 7, made for the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Co., of Boston, to be placed on the confederate soldiers' monument at Atlanta, Ga.

The Halifax Gardens Co. is sending in large and excellent shipments of chrysanthemums, including October Frost, G. S. Kalb, Glory of Pacific, and Donatello, the latter a fine yellow.

John McFarland, of North Easton, showed a strikingly handsome brasso-cattleya hybrid of unrecorded parentage at Horticultural hall October 7; petals, sepals and lower part of lip, rich pink; center of lip, pale yellow. It was awarded a silver medal.

Edward Wood, of Lexington, is cutting good G. S. Kalb and Halliday mums. He follows these with sweet peas. Mr. Wood lost nearly his entire crop of outdoor asters during the freeze of September 14.

A. A. Reed, the Whitman orchid specialist, has just installed a new Kroe-schell boiler that is doing its work well.

William R. Nicholson, the well known Framingham carnationist, was married to Miss J. G. Harrington at York Harbor, Me., on September 30, and has been enjoying his honeymoon in the Maine wilds. He has the good wishes of a host of friends.

At the late Brockton fair, Waban Rose Conservatories secured first and second premiums for fifty roses with five vases of Killarney and the new yellow, Lady Hillingdon. The Blue Hill Nurseries had a fine display of choice evergreens.

William H. Elliott, in addition to his usual fine line of roses, has the market to himself just now with pot chrysanthemums, of which he has a fine assortment, well flowered.

V. Fenmia, of South Sudbury, J. Leach & Son, North Easton, and J. W. Simpson, of Woburn, are shipping good carnations to J. M. Cohen. Mr. Cohen is also handling a grand lot of violets and mums from the Mishawum Flower Co., of Woburn.

W. W. Edgar & Co. are this week busy unpacking big importations of azaleas. They are cutting Polly Rose and Golden Glow mums in quantity.

T. J. Gray lectured before the North Shore Horticultural Society October 6 on his recent European trip and was given a rousing reception.

Local bulb dealers have this season had heavy losses on some varieties of narcissi. That fine variety, Victoria, has arrived in bad condition, in some cases a total loss. Other sorts which have come to hand soft are poeticus ornatus, Emperor, Ard Righ and Hors-

The Beacon Flower Store, 2 Beacon street, is displaying its customary enterprise in securing an opening into Houghton & Dutton's department store, thus giving an opportunity for the customers to pass freely from one store to another without the inconvenience of going into the street.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Cooler weather last week brought with it a slight revival of retail business, but the aggregate trade is somewhat behind what it was a year ago. However, there are an unusual number of early social functions scheduled for this month, which will undoubtedly bring the month as a whole up to a good average. The supply is improving as well as the quality, and a slight advance in prices has occurred.

Various Notes.

W. B. Lake, of Philadelphia, was a visitor in the city the early part of the week.

John Horn, of Westerly, was here last week looking for a location for a retail store. He has been a landscape gardener at Westerly for a number of years.

John G. Gardner, son of Richard Gardner, who for several years has been employed under his father in the greenhouses at the James J. Van Allen estate at Newport, left last week for Los Angeles, where he has accepted a position in an orchid growing establishment.

Mr. Welch, of Welch Bros., Boston, was a recent visitor here.

Charles H. Hunt is completing the last of his new houses. He has also finished benching 75,000 bulbs.

Wadley & Smythe, of New York city, will close their branch store at Newport October 15.

J. J. Kelley, of Valley Falls, is to begin setting out trees for the town of Cumberland in a few days, the town having made an appropriation of $300 for this purpose.

Frederick B. Luther has announced the closing of his greenhouses on Atlantic avenue, after fifteen years. It is understood that he contemplates erecting a range of houses at his new country home in Norton, Mass.

Timothy O'Connor had two wedding decorations last week. He has been busy recently on funeral and general work.

A. T. Bunyard, of the A. T. Bunyard Floral Co., New York city, has closed his Newport store.

Arthur Zirkman, of M. Rice & Co., of Philadelphia, visited the trade in this city last week.

Frederick Hoffman, Mr. Moss and J. J. Kelley were the judges at the recent flower show held by the Central Falls Field Naturalists' Society.

Monday, October 16, is set as the opening date for the new wholesale flower market. Arrangements have been made for twenty-eight stalls to be rented at a flat price of $1 per week each, payable yearly in advance. At the auction for choice of stalls, held a few days ago, William E. Chappell officiating as auctioneer, $116 was received in premiums. O. H. Williams made the highest bid, $21 on two stalls; the second highest bid being $20 on two stalls. Those purchasing stalls so far include O. H. Williams & Son, William Hoffman, F. Macrae & Sons, Walter S. Nichol, Joseph Kopelman, Elmer E. King, George Jansen, Burke Rose Co., Inc., G. H. Cushing, H. A. Burlingame, Albert Holscher and John A. Macrae. There have already been half a dozen applicants for the position of manager or superintendent. It has been voted to keep the market open from 7 a. m. until 5 p. m. daily.

W. H. M.

The Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island held a special meeting September 30 to discuss plans for the coming fall show. The Rhode Island Horticultural Society, in a communication to the Florists' Club, offered the sum of $150 to be used in premiums, as an incentive to have the florists take part as exhibitors. The letter was accepted and a committee consisting of William Hill, Alexander Macrae and E. A. Appleton was appointed to confer with the Horticultural Society, and if satisfactory arrangements can be made between the two organizations in the matter of distribution of premiums, it was the consensus of opinion that the florists should do all in their power to further the best interests of the show.

The special committee will report at the regular meeting of the club, which will take place October 20.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Last week was quite a busy one for Detroit florists. With the exception of two rainy days, business was pretty brisk. This week opened up with a good day on Monday.

Chrysanthemums are coming in fairly good supply now in white, pink and yellow. October Frost and Kalb are the white varieties. Rosiere and Unaka, the latter being one of Elmer D. Smith's new kinds, have opened up the season in pink. Some early pompons are also available.

Roses are not lacking in supply and the quality is good. Carnations are becoming longer stemmed as the season advances. The dark colored varieties are almost too plentiful, while the lighter shades and white are not equal to the demand. Easter lilies are not nearly equal to the demand. A few gladioli are still straying into the market.

Various Notes.

A special meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club was called for Thursday evening, October 12, and held at the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange. This was in order to meet with A. F. J. Baur, Benjamin Hammond, F. R. Pierson and other officers of the American Rose and American Carnation societies to go carefully over the ground and make some definite arrangements for the joint convention to be held in Detroit next January.

"Rackham Florist" is the inscription on the sign of the new flower store opened up at 422 Woodward avenue October 5. Harry Rackham, who for some years has been engaged in the retail florists' business in the west, will be in full charge of the store, and this fact alone is enough to insure the success of the undertaking.

Bulletin No. 1 was issued by the exhibition committee of the Detroit Florists' Club last week, advising the members that arrangements for the show to be held this fall are well under way. Chairman Frank Danzer and his staff are sparing no effort to make this show a splendid success.

B. Schroeter's new store and conservatory is rapidly nearing completion and will be ready for occupancy about October 20. This firm has been busy decorating some of the large retail stores for their fall openings. In one instance over 1,000 Beauties were used in connection with baskets and palms.

The name of Farmer street was recently changed to Library avenue; consequently E. A. Fetter's address is now 114 Library avenue, instead of 114 Farmer street. Mr. Fetter's delivery auto was struck by a street car October 7 and damaged to the extent of about $75, but the driver was not injured.

Harry Breitmeyer, son of Philip Breitmeyer, and Miss Marie Bamlet were married October 10. They will spend their honeymoon touring in the east. Harry Breitmeyer is associated in business with his father and was manager of the Breitmeyer building until its sale recently. Breitmeyer's new store was opened to the public October 7.

W. B. Brown now rides about in a five-passenger Overland touring car, which he purchased recently. Business has been good with Mr. Brown, as is evidenced by the above.

A large force of men has been busy for the last month undermining J. F. Sullivan's store. When the work is completed Mr. Sullivan will have a deep, spacious basement, which will give him much additional room. The rear of the store will also be rebuilt to give more daylight and the whole store is being redecorated.

The Winton Motor Car Co. recently delivered to Frank Holznagle one of its 1912 six-cylinder cars, finished in a beautiful deep shade of blue.

Mrs. Albert Stahelin may be seen almost any day driving in from Redford, bringing the morning's cut of carnations, mums and greens to the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, per automobile. This gives her a pleasant morning's outing and saves one man's time. Even when her hubby is along Mrs. Stahelin, who is a good driver, runs the car.

A handsome new electric delivery car bearing the name "John Breitmeyer's Sons, The House of Flowers," appeared on the streets of this city last week. This is the first electric auto used by a retail florist in this city.

SEDALIA, MO.

Archias Floral Co. had the decoration, September 30, for the dinner given President Taft and as the guests left the club little Marian Archias presented the President with a large bouquet of Mrs. Taft roses. At the state fair September 30 to October 6, Archias Floral Co., Chas. I. Pfeiffer and Andrew Dygard, the latter of Nevada, were the principal exhibitors, capturing the premiums.

OBITUARY.

Clement Denaiffe.

Clement Denaiffe, head of Denaiffe & Son, engaged in seed growing for the wholesale trade at Carignan, Northern France, died August 31, aged 76 years. His ancestors before him for two generations had been seed growers, but it was under the administration of Clement that the Denaiffe plant grew to the proportions it holds today.

Clement came of a family of thirteen children. His father was a hard working man, and owing to the necessities of a then modest business all the children were obliged to hustle and assist in the fields and otherwise. Clement obtained a good education at the College of Metz, graduating at the age of 18. After considerable time spent in traveling over Europe, studying the methods of other seed growers and in acquiring a knowledge of the seed business proper as conducted by the large city seed stores, he entered his father's establishment. In 1889 he fell into sole ownership, at which time he owned a fine farm of 200 acres at Carignan and had some twenty experienced workmen. Four years later, in 1893, he erected warehouses at the railroad station at Carignan and purchased more land, the splendid farm of 400 acres at Presles, near Carignan, to provide for increasing business. Subsequently, from time to time, he increased his acreage and the capacity of his warehouses, and at his death there were engaged in the office alone forty-five clerks, and in the different warehouses some eighty-five other employees. He paid great attention to improving varieties and originated a number of excellence. One of these, a certain lettuce named the Denaiffe, has attained great popularity in America under the title of All Seasons.

In 1893, Clement Denaiffe was created Chevalier du Merite Agricole, and in 1897 the French government made him Chevalier of the Legion of Honor, a distinction rarely conferred on an agriculturist or horticulturist. In 1890, the National Board of Trade of France was attracted to him by the reputation of his productions and gave him an order to supply about 1,500 agricultural associations throughout the French republic with their requirements, which order was repeated regularly every year thereafter.

Mr. Denaiffe was a man of charming personality, correct and straightforward in his business methods, and a tireless worker. He was hard at work in his office all day only three days before the sudden illness which culminated in his demise. The funeral was the largest ever held in that part of France, being attended by many individuals in every walk of life. Henry, a son, succeeds him as the head of the house, and Maurice, a grandson, as junior.

J. A. McKee.

J. A. McKee, a prominent nurseryman of King's Mountain, Ky., was claimed by death at the age of 82 years. The body was taken to Cynthiana, Ky., and interred in Battle Grove cemetery October 4. One son, John B. McKee, and a daughter, Mrs. Annie Burris, of Georgia, survive.

Des Moines, Ia.—Three new greenhouses, containing 12,000 square feet of glass, have just been completed at J. S. Wilson's range on Thirty-fifth street, making a total of 65,000 square feet for the entire establishment. Mr. Wilson has spent $25,000 in improving his plant in the last two years and now has a range to be proud of.

The Review brings results.

COLLECTIONS have been extremely slow this summer, but have improved a little in the last week or ten days.

ENGLISH growers, like those in America, found the sweet pea one of the most profitable crops under glass last season and there will be a large increase in the output for next spring.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

National Show Committee.

I have appointed Charles Totty, chairman; W. A. Manda, W. N. Rudd, Thomas Roland, W. P. Craig and J. A. Valentine members of the National Flower Show Committee.

George Asmus, President.

Department of Registration.

Public notice is hereby given that Henry A. Dreer, Inc., of Philadelphia, Pa., offer for registration the althaea described below. Any person objecting to the registration or to the use of the proposed name is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Althaea Wm. R. Smith—A new single white variety, an improvement on Althaea totus albus, with flowers nearly double the size of this last named sort. It is a seedling raised by John Clark, assistant superintendent of the United States Botanic Gardens at Washington, D. C.

Public notice is hereby given that S. J. Reuter & Son, Inc., of Westerly, R. I., offer for registration the rose described below. Any person objecting to the registration or to the use of the proposed name is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Double Improved White Killarney—A pure white sport from the Waban strain of White Killarney. Much larger bud, double the size of the ordinary White Killarney. Stronger and more vigorous growth, making a large plant, with heavy, deep colored foliage. An excellent summer white, also having the necessary body, with good keeping qualities and pure white color. Being an improvement over the ordinary White Killarney in growth, vigor and size, it is the ideal white for winter.

HE IS FROM MISSOURI.

A good many florists have been shown—by Review Classified Ads—how they can get away from the limitations of a local field and have the whole of America for a market. This is how:

You will have to discontinue our advertising on all items; have more orders now than we can fill. We shall devote more space to growing stock for sale through The Review.—The Englemann greenhouses, per Alfred Englemann, Maryville, Mo., October 2, 1911.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

Market conditions are improving. Both in wholesale and retail circles the feeling is better and an actual shortage in several lines was reported Monday of this week, but the supply was humping to overtake the demand, and by Tuesday everyone was able to get practically as much as he wanted of anything. Mums are strong, good roses brisk, valley moving well, and lilies in good demand. Cosmos is coming in well. The yellow and white mums are in fair supply and they make a fine showing. Dahlias are plentiful and perfect as to condition.

Various Notes.

S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. gives an optimistic statement of the outlook and reports better demand all along the line. The prospects for a good season, it is stated, never were better.

At the Florists' Exchange business is declared to be excellent and improving every day. A big run is expected by this house on table ferns this fall.

Z. D. Blackstone's store will have a splendid show window space. It will probably be ready to open by November 10. Mr. Blackstone reports a particularly good trade last week, due to a number of out-of-town weddings, the Admiral Schley and Wm. E. Curtis funerals, and some openings, especially that of a big grocery house, which was almost filled with huge floral offerings from many friends. Besides this, Blackstone supplied the firm with Killarney roses, and one was given to every lady calling at the store on the opening day.

At Marche's there is a spick and span appearance. A new floor has been laid and a lattice built around the store room. Mr. Marche, who still limps, on account of the injury to his knee sustained when his auto skidded, says that he has been enjoying a fine trade. The prospects he regards as excellent. This week he has a special sale on of palms and ferns, which has opened well.

At Small's the arrangement of the show window is admired by the pedestrians, although on analysis it is proven to be simple.

The store of Gude Bros. Co. is one of the sights of fashionable F street. The roses and arrangement of baskets always attract attention to the windows.

F. J. D.

A movement has been started to have the grave of Nicholas Studer, a pioneer florist of the district, suitably marked through the erection of a monument. The subject has been brought to the attention of the florists of the district by Charles A. Stevens, of Anacostia, who has received assurances of their cooperation. It is pointed out that Mr. Studer, whose plant was located on Good Hope road, taught many of the leading florists of the city the flower-growing business. Mr. Studer died about twelve years ago, and it is stated his body lies in an unmarked grave.

houses will get a run of telegrams while others are idle, so that it is difficult to make any specific statement with regard to market conditions which will fit all cases. One point, however, on which practically all the wholesalers are agreed is that the local demand is light and that the retailers are unwilling to buy except from hand to mouth; they do not care to put in stock in anticipation of possible sales, feeling sure that anything needed can be had at short notice.

Weather conditions have served to reduce the supply a little on some items since last report, but the reduction has not been sufficient to cause any appreciable effect except perhaps on carnations, which are bringing better money than heretofore this season. Carnations were exceptionally early this year, and many of them exceptionally good, but they sold at exceptionally low prices so long as the outdoor flowers lasted. Now that the asters are gone there has been an increase in the calls for carnations which, within the last week, has served to stiffen prices, though it is doubtful if they are yet up to the prices of this date last year. The supply still is fully equal to the demand.

There has been a relapse in the Beauty market. Last week the cut was on the down grade and prices were hardening. But there came a quick turn in the other direction, cuts increasing and prices doing well to hold their own. Roses are by some said to be less abundant than they were, due to a few dark days more than to any passing of crops, so that an increase is likely on short notice. The quality of the roses continues fine. Short stock still is selling cheaply in thousand lots, but the grower who wants roses with 3-foot stems can be accommodated, and at prices that are low for such fine flowers.

Chrysanthemums are coming in more heavily. Golden Glow and October Frost still predominate, but Crocus, a splendid yellow, and Monrovia, the old standby early yellow, now are seen. Virginia Poehlmann, a fine white, and Tousey are arriving, with a few pinks. The pinks have commanded some extra money when good, but in general the prices of chrysanthemums are low. There will be no scarcity during the next two months.

Cattleyas are fairly abundant but are being held at better prices, as the locally-grown stock now coming in is of superlative quality. Gardenias are scarce and bringing excellent prices. Violets are not nearly so plentiful as at this time last year. There are all grades, single and double, but the demand even for the best is not strong. Sweet peas from under glass are beginning to appear. Valley is abundant, but the call is so erratic that it is difficult to handle. Easter lilies, while still plentiful, are bringing a little better prices. A few asters and gladioli still come in, but there is little sale for them. Dahlias are doing fairly well, but are not an important item. There is some antirrhinum, but the quality does not appeal to the buyers. Daisies are more than plentiful.

There is an abundance of everything in the green goods line. Wild smilax is now regularly in stock and new boxwood of fine quality is arriving. Bronze galax is not so scarce as was predicted earlier in the season.

L. Hoechener has bought the F. C. Struvy store at 1515 Clybourn avenue, taking possession October 12. He has leased the building, which has been used for a flower store, he says, for thirty years. Mr. Hoechener is proprietor of the Avenue Floral Co., on Grand avenue. He has been employed by Peter Reinberg and will remain there for a time, but intends as soon as possible to devote his entire time to the new venture.

Gus Alles, who is N. J. Wietor's right hand man in the store, went through the greenhouses of Wietor Bros., October 8, and says he never saw the place look as well as now.

As an instance of what the reduction in express rates means to growers, Hoerber Bros. say their express bill has averaged about $3.50 per day, which is cut twenty per cent, or a saving of 70 cents for every day in the year, or over $250.

John Zech says Zech & Mann have no reason to complain of business—it is running ahead of any previous year.

DAYTON, O.

The Market.

As October put in its appearance, a gradual improvement was noticed in the condition of trade. The weather became cooler and outside stock, though as yet not affected by frost, would not bear much inspection. Asters, dahlias and other outdoor flowers have had their day for 1911, and no one is sorry to see them disappear, as the indoor stock is coming along finely. Business prospects are brightening and stock moves nicely. Carnations are a little scarce. Beauties are cropping well and the market keeps up splendidly on them. Aaron Ward is being grown by some of the florists and is fast becoming a favorite among the customers; other varieties of roses are good also. There are just enough lilies in the market to compete with the demand. Green goods are scarce.

Various Notes.

The Dayton Florists' Club held its first monthly meeting of the season October 2, at J. F. Young's establishment, on East Fifth street. One of the features of the meeting was a talk by George Bartholomew, who gave a brief outline of his recent European trip.

The Miami Floral Co. had a good season in field-grown carnation plants, having sold out the entire stock, besides turning down several large orders. They are exceedingly busy at present, getting their heating system and boilers in good shape for winter. They are installing the Armstrong shaker grate in two of their 100 horse-power boilers. Their stock is in splendid condition; the supply is abundant and the demand encouraging. They report business to be increasing steadily.

This week was a big week in Dayton, as the Knights Templar had their conclave here, with 10,000 members present. The business section of town was handsomely decorated with flags and bunting, while the large arc lights along Main street were heavily festooned with wild smilax and other decorative greens.

The Dayton Floral Co. furnished sixty cases of wild smilax for the Knights Templar decorations. They report trade to be exceedingly good. They are cutting some fine chrysanthemums.

The Advance Floral Co. reports that business is quite satisfactory and prospects bright. They are still cutting gladioli and snapdragons from the field. They are also cutting some nice chrysanthemums and orchids and report good sales on them.

Miss Ruby Bartholomew is back at the office of the Miami Floral Co., after a two weeks' vacation.

H. H. Rifter says that while the summer trade was quiet, prospects at present are brightening wonderfully.

The Heiss Co. has recently remodeled its store on South Main street, by put-

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The tone of the cut flower market shows decided improvement. The demand is better, while the quality of the stock keeps pace, aided by favorable weather. Early chrysanthemums are the leading feature. Many of the flowers are ordered before they arrive. All are sold soon after they are received, at good prices. The varieties named last week, Golden Glow (Early Gold), Smith's Advance, Polly Rose, Early Snow and Montmort, are in larger supply. To these have been added Monrovia, October Frost, Glory of Pacific and Mrs. George W. Kalb, affording a good range of color. The general stock of early varieties is not in yet, only a few growers having commenced cutting.

The keeping qualities of the dahlia have improved considerably in the last week. Cool nights and bright days are ideal for dahlias. The market has absorbed a larger quantity than in any six days of the season. Roses have shortened in supply and improved in quality. Beauties continue in demand. The long-stemmed flowers are plentiful—not so the mediums and shorts. White roses are in brisk demand. Richmonds are less plentiful than a fortnight ago. Carnations show a big improvement. They sell well at good prices, but are not overabundant. Indoor sweet peas are arriving, both pink and white, good in color but small as yet. Single violets are nice, doubles hardly in form. Cattleyas are plentiful, gardenias scarce. Supply and demand are well balanced in valley. Easter lilies are excellent stock. Bouvardia has come in all the colors; also snapdragons and yellow and white daisies. There still are a few asters. Greens sell moderately, ferns particularly well. There is some demand for wild smilax.

rists' Club last week would have been an impossibility, not because of expense, for a banquet given at that time would probably have been as costly, but because of the taste displayed. Every detail was carefully planned and executed. The arrangement of the guests, the decorations, the speeches, the music, the singing, the dinner itself, and above all the presence of the ladies combined to make an entertainment of which any organization in the land might well be proud; surely we have progressed in twenty-five years. Good fellowship, always an important element in our busy lives, is as prominent now as then. There was nothing lost and much gained. Great credit is due the committee: Thomas W. Logan, John F. Sibson, J. Otto Thilow, George Burton and Robert Kift.

J. William Colflesh's Sons.

There is an unwritten law among florists that you may go through the greenhouses of a brother florist without his company, a little matter of courtesy as rigidly observed in this profession as were the laws of the Medes and Persians in olden time. So when accepting the invitation of the Messrs. Colflesh to "drop in on us as you did on father," a search was commenced in the roomy shed and carried on from house to house throughout the entire establishment. A quiet looking individual encountered in the shed said Mr. Colflesh was about. A man engaged in cultural work in one of the houses corroborated this statement, but somehow the round was completed without the desired meeting. Time forbade waiting, so I can only say that the mantle of this great grower has fallen

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

The flower trade in general is greatly improved over last week, and business is picking up once more. Most of the retailers say the bulk of the business is for funeral work. Carnations are excellent, roses are better and violets are unusually good. Some fine Beauties are now coming into the market, while gladioli are poor and few in number.

Dahlias are rather scarce, but yellow chrysanthemums are in splendid condition for so early in the year. Cat-tleas are more plentiful and in greater demand, and Richmond roses are much better than usual.

There is great demand for Asparagus plumosus and Sprenger, smilax, leucothoe, ferns and other greens, and the supply is abundant.

Various Notes.

George Bennett is cutting a fine fall crop of carnations.

The Rochester Floral Co. is growing some fine Lorraine begonias.

The retail florists have been keeping their stores open evenings since October 1, but little business is done after 6 p. m.

Mrs. Robert Woodhall, of Webster, N. Y., is growing some of the best dahlias seen in this vicinity this season.

Trade has been quiet for the last few weeks. Carnations are none too plentiful. They retail at 60 cents per dozen, with a few at 75 cents. Roses sell at $1 and $1.50 per dozen. Violets are making their appearance. Gladioli are about gone. Ferns sell well. Funeral work has been poor of late. All outdoor flowers are still blooming.

R. H. Woodhouse and family arrived home last week after an extended trip to the old country.

Fall planting is being done, the cool, wet weather being fine for this.

STORING HARDY CUT FERNS.

What is the best way to keep hardy cut ferns during the winter? I wish to store about 50,000. Are public cold storage houses all right? H. J. H.

Kindly let me know about keeping fern leaves in cold storage. Are certain kinds used and how are they prepared before going into storage? J. J. F.

One without experience in storing hardy cut ferns would be unwise to go into it heavily. Practically all the ferns are stored in public warehouses and in several cities the quantity of ferns stored is so great that the warehouse people give this business special attention. There is, however, much loss in an average season, so much, in fact, that some wholesalers who use hundreds of thousands a month now prefer to trust to getting weekly shipments from the first hands rather than to take the chance of putting large quantities in storage. The big dealers carry their stock in public warehouses and themselves suffer more or less loss every season. Of course their prices usually advance as the season progresses, because cost increases, but sometimes the supply is sufficiently large in the latter part of the season to hold prices to a point where those who bought quantities in the autumn, and warehoused them, find little profit is left after figuring waste.

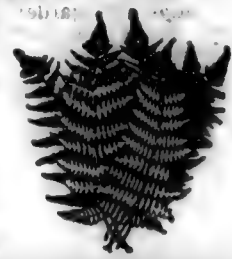

The ferns always are tied with twenty-five in a bunch, care being taken that all the ferns in a bunch are of about the same size. Then identical bunches are packed in ordinary strong wood boxes, usually 5,000 ferns to a box. This accounts for some cases containing larger ferns than others. Moss is placed in the bottom of the box and also around the sides and over the top when filled; also a little is scattered between the layers of ferns. Tight cases are not desirable. It is important to get the ferns into storage without heating, so shipment usually is made by express or in refrigerator cars. All sorts of temperatures have been tried, but the results have not been uniform under any temperature, the spoilage

The Market.

There was some good business in the first part of last week and a great deal of good stock was used, but the trade in cut flowers, as a whole, was not what was expected. Plenty of good stock is being consigned to this market at present, but the demand is not heavy enough to consume all of it. The prices are seasonable. A great deal of outdoor stock is still coming in from local growers, including Cochet roses, dahlias, cosmos and tuberoses, which seem to sell well.

Beauties have been plentiful in all grades; so, also, have Killarneys, Richmonds and Marylands. Carnations, too, are coming in heavily and are of good quality. Chrysanthemums, both yellow and white, clean up when of good quality. A few violets are coming in, but are of poor quality; the weather is still too warm for them. Colder weather, with frost, will put the market on edge for better prices.

and American Beauties were given away to all who presented invitations. The Ostertag brothers and the Ostertag sisters were kept busy receiving congratulations from their long list of friends and customers. The store and show rooms were handsomely decorated for the occasion.

A. Tomaszewski, retail florist at 1232 Noble street, Chicago, spent last week in this city.

Henry Young & Sons' new store, on Maryland avenue, is elegantly fitted up. During their opening last week the store and their large show house were splendidly decorated and the place was crowded each day with visitors.

B. Lipman, of Columbia City, Ind., formerly with Heller Bros., of New Castle, Ind., will be in fine shape this season with roses, carnations and chrysanthemums; so it is reported by Henry Berning, who visited Mr. Lipman recently.

Heller Bros., of New Castle, Ind., are consigning to this market quite a lot of extra good Beauties and other roses. Geo. H. Angermueller is handling the consignments.

WHEN the 1912 catalogues come out it probably will be found that the retail prices of seeds are not so high as reports of crops would now indicate. The average catalogue house is slow to push prices up.

"AFTER two wet seasons, we are this year having the other extreme," says Gustav Schott, the Bavarian grass seed merchant, in a recent letter to the trade. "All kinds of crops have been hastened to maturity by the fine summer, but, as was to be expected, the drought has had in many cases the effect of checking the development while hastening to maturity. The effect has been most felt in America."

SPEAKING of orchard grass, in a recent report A. Le Coq, of Darmstadt, says: "New Zealand has such a small crop of Dactylis glomerata that they have little or no seed for export. Our home crop and the Danish seed, which as regards quality and quantity are good, will be mostly used to cover the home demand. America had an average crop, but most of the seed will be consumed by their own farmers, in consequence of the small crops of other grasses. Lower prices for this grass are expected."

GRASS SEEDS IN NEW ZEALAND.

Under the heading, "Seed Trade in New Zealand," the Daily Consular and Trade Reports, issued by the U. S. Department of Commerce and Labor, publishes a long report from Vice-Consul General Henry D. Baker, on special service in New Zealand.

"The seed business of New Zealand is of considerable importance," says the report, "over $600,000 worth of grass, clover, and other seeds being exported from the Dominion in 1910, and about $500,000 imported. During the next few months the New Zealand seed market should possess an exceptional interest for American seed growers and dealers, as owing to the recent drought seeds are now very scarce and are selling for prices about forty per cent higher than a year ago."

Important New Sweet Peas For 1912

New Spencer, Vermilion Brilliant

"The most brilliant, iridescent scarlet Spencer yet produced."

This genuine novelty, which has been much admired both at our Fordhook Farms in Pennsylvania and Floradale Farm in California, as well as in Great Britain, originated with our friend, Mr. Hugh Dickson, of Newtownards, County Down, Ireland, who wrote: "After most careful, critical comparison with every scarlet Spencer we could procure, including several new seedlings and selections not yet introduced, Vermilion Brilliant stood out so prominently that we offer it with every confidence of confirmation by all Sweet Pea planters as the most brilliant, iridescent scarlet Spencer yet produced."

Vermilion Brilliant produces vines that are strong, short jointed and very floriferous, bearing on stout stems, twelve to fifteen inches in length, three and four artistically placed flowers. When well grown the plants are noteworthy in that, unlike all other scarlet Spencers, the stems frequently produce fours.

The flowers are of perfect form. The bold, erect standard is well waved and fluted in true Spencer style, of large size, beautifully rounded and finishing well below the keel. The wings are of the same intense, pure scarlet as the standard, making a uniform self-color throughout and absolutely sunproof. For exhibition or garden decoration we are confident that this sterling novelty will take a prominent and lasting place in the esteem of all lovers, growers and exhibitors of Sweet Peas.

In sealed packets containing twelve seeds each, per pkt., 15c; $1.00 per dozen pkts.; $7.00 per 100 pkts. In lots of 500 packets or more, $6.25 per 100 pkts. (Cable word, Vermilion.)

In sealed packets containing twenty-five seeds each, per pkt., 25c; $2.00 per dozen pkts.; $13.75 per 100 pkts. In lots of 500 packets or more, $12.50 per 100 pkts. (Cable word, Brilliant.)

Vermilion Brilliant was awarded the Silver Cup given by the Philadelphia North American, at the National Sweet Pea Society's Show in Philadelphia, June 29 and 30, 1911, for the best variety not yet in commerce.

Pearl-Gray Spencer Pearl-Gray is truly a descriptive name. The nearest to this same color that has existed heretofore is the Grand flora Lady Nina Balfour. It is certainly a most lovely and distinct shade that might be described as a pearl or dove-gray, suffused with light rose, showing a trifle more of the delicate rose shading in the standard. The flowers, borne in clusters of three and four, are of the largest size and uniformly of true Spencer type, being well waved in both standard and wings. In sealed packets of same sizes and at same prices as Vermilion Brilliant.

Irish Belle or Dream A superbly beautiful variety that shows quite a new shade in Sweet Peas. The coloring is uniform in both standard and wings—a lovely rich lilac, flushed with pink, which gives a very distinct and soft tone throughout the entire flower. Of finest Spencer type, waved in both standard and wings, the flowers are of large size and well placed on long stems. Throughout the season, even during the extreme heat and drought of July, the flowers came invariably three and four to a stem. Many Sweet Pea enthusiasts pronounced this—next to Vermilion Brilliant—to be the finest novelty in our trials at Fordhook Farms the past season. It was certificated by the National Sweet Pea Society of America, June 29 1911. In sealed packets of same sizes and at same prices as Vermilion Brilliant.

Captivation Spencer This is a really giant-flowered Sweet Pea of true Spencer type, both standard and wings being well frilled and waved. The beautiful self-colored flowers are of a rich rosy wine-red throughout. The plant is robust and very floriferous, bearing three and four of the extra large flowers well placed on long, strong stems. In sealed packets of same sizes and at same prices as Vermilion Brilliant.

A Distinct Type of Sweet Peas for 1912.

The New Duplex Spencer Sweet Pea

The "Best of All" Pink Sweet Peas for Bouquets.

Duplex This is different from former so-called double Sweet Peas. It has persisted for four years in giving a large percentage of fine double-standard flowers. They are produced on almost every plant—four-bloom sprays giving two and sometimes three of the flowers double, and smaller sprays in same proportion. The twin or triple standards are well placed, so that the flowers have no appearance of coarseness. The color is a rich cream-pink. When bunched it is most effective, the effectiveness being enhanced by the bright lemon-keel appearing to great advantage. It is an extra strong grower and we are certain it will take rank at the very top as a market variety, besides being fit for any first prize stand. Messrs. Lowe & Shawyer, Ltd., of Uxbridge, England, who had an advance trial, say it is "the best pink Sweet Pea we have yet grown on our place."—Description of Messrs. Dobbie & Co., with whom this sterling novelty originated.

In sealed packets containing fifteen seeds each, per pkt., 15c; $1.00 per dozen pkts.; $7.00 per 100 pkts. In lots of 500 pkts. or more, $6.25 per 100 pkts. (Cable word, Duplex.)

In sealed packets containing thirty seeds each, per pkt., 25c; $2.00 per dozen pkts.; $13.75 per 100 pkts. In lots of 500 pkts. or more, $12.50 per 100 pkts. (Cable word, Double.)

New Sweet Pea, Rainbow Spencer

In this striking novelty we have a great advance in the striped section. The flowers are of giant proportions, generally produced three and four on a stem. They are nicely placed, with wings coming well up in front of the standard; in fact, the flower proportions are perfect. The ground color is ivory-white, flaked and lightly streaked with rose. The flowers are magnificently waved, and the variety, which originated with our friends, Messrs. C. C. Morse & Co., has proven thoroughly fixed, both in California and in our trials at Fordhook. It has rightly been pronounced "a glorious Spencer." In sealed packets of same sizes and at same prices as Duplex Spencer.

LILIUM HARRISII

LET US SUPPLY YOUR WANTS IN LILIES THIS SEASON

We think we can make it to your advantage to do so, as regards both quality and price.

The stock that we offer is not gathered indiscriminately from all kinds of sources, but is grown for us by a few selected growers whose stocks have been worked up from the true, original stock. In order to insure the health of the product, the bulbs are not grown on the same field oftener than one season, other crops being grown on the field the preceding year. The ground is thoroughly manured when the previous crop is grown, leaving it in a high state of cultivation, and when the lily bulbs are planted no fresh manure is used; this prevents disease and insures a crop of strong, healthy bulbs.

In addition to this, we do not dig our bulbs as early as they are usually dug, but leave them in the ground until they are thoroughly ripened and matured. When Harrisii is good it leaves little to be desired. There is very little, if any, stock obtainable as good as the stock that we are offering. We are supplying only this one grade of selected stock and when this is disposed of we shall have no more to offer.

While the quality of the stock that we offer is of the highest, our prices are as low as, or lower than, the prices of those who offer the ordinary stock gathered from indiscriminate sources. We are sure buyers will find our stock very satisfactory, and much more so than the Japan-grown Longiflorum, which has badly deteriorated in recent years.

Bear in mind that we were the original introducers of Harrisii in Bermuda, and that we have exceptional facilities for obtaining our present supplies. Also take note that the smallest bulbs that we offer are 6-7 inch bulbs, not 5-7 inch, as usually offered.

6-7 inch bulbs, 335 to the case, $15.00 per case; full thousand lots, $ 40.00 per 1000
7-9 inch bulbs, 200 to the case, 16.00 per case; full thousand lots, 75.00 per 1000
9-11 inch bulbs, 100 to the case, 18.00 per case; full thousand lots, 175.00 per 1000

FERNS

We have an exceptionally nice lot of ferns in the following varieties—good, bushy, well-grown plants that will please the most critical buyers. Plants have been grown in pots and are thoroughly well established and nicely finished.

Nephrolepis Bostoniensis and Piersoni, 6-inch pots $0.50 each
Nephrolepis Elegantissima, Piersoni, Bostoniensis and Harrisii, heavy 8-inch plants . $1.00 to 1.50 each

The total imports in 1910 of grass and clover seeds amounted to 21,840 hundredweight, and the total value of all kinds of seeds imported was $487,190. During the preceding year the total imports were valued at $604,526. The value of the imports of seeds from the United States in 1910 was $30,956.

"New Zealand takes from the United States, in about the order named, cow grass and red clover, white clover, timothy, Poa pratensis and alsike. Some lucerne is imported from the United States and also from England and Australia. Its particular advantages are just beginning to be appreciated in New Zealand, and imports are likely to increase."

DANISH SEED CROPS.

It has been understood that Denmark has the best seed crops in Europe this year, but reports now coming to hand from that country are less bright, nor do the growers of cabbage seed see anything in prospect for 1912 but a small acreage and high prices. Writing under date of September 25 Hjalmar Hartmann & Co. say:

"Denmark has to meet a large demand for cabbage heads this year, as German customers pay 2 cents per pound for the same, or 10 cents per head. To produce one pound of seeds requires ten heads on the average. Consequently the stock for growing seeds for the 1912 crop figures at about $1

Nothing is more subject to mistake and disappointment than anticipated judgment concerning the easiness or difficulty of any undertaking, whether your opinion be formed from the performance of others or from abstracted contemplation of the thing to be attempted. Whatever is done skillfully appears to be done with ease; and art, when it is once matured to habit, vanishes from observation.

Lily growers who have an idea that it's a snap to grow lilies properly will do well to consider what they really know about it. It is easy enough for those who already know, because they have acquired that skill through careful study and experience. After you have acquired the same ability, of course, it is easy, and habit will take the place of art; but don't think just because your neighbor knows that you do, too. The far-off fields always look green, but when you reach them they are the same old brown that you find around home on a hot summer day. The wise thing to do, then, is to be careful—be attentive, work, use your reasoning faculties and above all have good tools to work with. The principal tool in the lily business is a good bulb—it's an absolutely essential tool, and no grower, no matter how good, can do without it. Horseshoe Brand Giganteum will eclipse anything on the market for productiveness and all-round satisfactory service. Try them.

the weather had not been continually dry in July and August the crop would have been abundant. As to cabbage, white and red, the prospects are for a fair crop. Wintering was favorable, owing to the mild weather and practical absence of frost, so that only five to ten per cent of the late cabbages and about twenty per cent of the early cabbages were lost. The fine spring and good weather in April and May contributed to this favorable result and except in some places where green lice infested the flowering in May, the growth until the ripening was good. Copenhagen Market only proves to be a poor yielder, as owing to its smoothness and fine quality of heads these are inclined to rot. The general condition of heads for planting for 1912 crop is middle. The plants have suffered through drought and attacks of worms. Turnip and swedes are a good crop. The mangold crop is middling, but prices are exceedingly high, owing to a failure in Germany. Carrots are a short crop. Grass seeds, particularly Dactylis glomerata, Festuca pratensis and Poa trivialis, are a good crop and fine qualities, but prices are high."

WESTERLY, R. I.

The Market.

September marked its close by passing out about the best sample of weather yet offered. It was one of those rare days which rival the kind that made June famous. Business has been all that could be expected. Weddings are the thing just at present; in fact, October weddings are becoming as popular as those of June. There is plenty of stock on hand. Carnations are running much better, also roses, and there seems to be a demand for ferns. Funeral work has created a good demand for roses, carnations, etc. The hydrangeas which outlived the frost are growing pink as the days become cooler.

Various Notes.

The marriage of Louis J. Reuter and Miss Alice M. Lewis was celebrated October 2. Mr. Reuter is one of the members of the firm of S. J. Reuter & Son, Inc.

George L. Stillman, while strolling about his dahlia farm, came across a big turtle sunning itself on the banks of a pond. He secured it and found engraved on its shell the initials of his grandfather, Adam Stillman, 1865, and on further examination disclosed the name of another Adam Stillman, his great-grandfather, engraved 1808, and the name of Paul Maxon, carved in 1792.

S. J. Reuter and family have returned to their home on Beach street, after having spent the summer at Pleasant View.

Conrad Schultz has some fine houses of carnations.

G. L. Stillman has raised some exceptionally fine dahlias this season. He received several prizes at the exhibitions of the American Institute in New York and of the New England Dahlia Society, in Boston.

PACIFIC COAST.

Spokane, Wash.—H. A. White will build a greenhouse in the near future at E4214 East Cleveland avenue.

San Francisco, Cal.—The shipping trade in cut flowers is steadily increasing as the number of florists grows. George K. Uno, of the California Floral Supply Co., says that the shipping radius also is increasing, orders recently having been received from as far as Canada and Colorado. Chrysanthemums are quite abundant in the market at this season. Queen, Louis Sievers, Golden Harvest, Bright Rose, Canary and other outdoor chrysanthemums are at their prime from early October until cold weather approaches. Orders came from leading florists of the western cities for decorations for banquets which were given in honor of President Taft, now coming to this city. The orders were for the choice chrysanthemums mostly.

town in good shape. Asters are practically over for the year, and their place is being rapidly taken by mums. We have had to rely almost entirely on inside stock for the last few weeks, but from this time onward there will be less trouble in getting cheap stock.

Orchids are scarce and valley is not plentiful. Japanese lilies are over for the year. Violets are not numerous yet, but the long nights are in their favor and they will soon be in their glory. Sweet peas and all other sorts of hardy stock are past their prime, and we now have to depend on what we get from the greenhouses.

Various Notes.

V. Podesta, of Podesta & Baldocchi, has returned from a two weeks' trip to Los Angeles and vicinity.

Ferrari Bros. are cutting some extra fine Beauties at the present time.

C. C. Morse & Co. expect to move into their new Market street store in a few days. This will be the best appointed and largest store of its kind in town.

Charles Matraia recently returned from a six months' trip through Europe.

Charles Stoppenbeck, of the American Floral Co., is the latest retailer to agree to the half-day Sunday closing. This leaves but one firm in town that remains open all day.

J. P. Reddy, recently with the Sievers-Cornwell Co., is now with Serveau Bros. at their Fillmore street store.

A visit to the houses of G. W. Simmons, at Elmhurst, shows plenty of good stock coming on. The showing of Beauties is fine at this time.

The California Retail Florists' Association held a regular meeting at Eagles' hall, October 4.

M. H. Morse, of Piedmont, will remove his Piedmont avenue nursery from its present location in a few weeks, the ground having been sold for other purposes. He will retain, however, that portion at the cemetery gate on which he has conducted a retail flower and seed store for many years.

John Evans, of the Trumbull Seed Co., has returned from a trip to Los Angeles, and is in the harness again.

Fred Grunewald, of Fruitvale, while driving recently, was struck by an electric car. His wagon was completely demolished and he received a fractured leg and several minor bruises, which necessitated his removal to a hospital.

George C. Pape, the greenhouse builder of Berkeley, is at Santa Cruz as a delegate to the Odd Fellows' convention at present being held in that town.

PORTLAND, ORE.

Market conditions are slightly improved, yet there is a lack of life to the demand. Outdoor flowers are passing rapidly. What are left are hardly usable. A slight frost would be welcomed, to clean out all outdoor stock, which would create a demand along all lines. Carnations are coming in nicely, but are rather short in stem. Roses also are producing nicely. Mums are scarce and move rapidly. Auratums are holding out remarkably and serve a useful purpose for funeral arrangements. Violets, valley and orchids are scarce, especially the latter. E. R. C.

MOORE'S EARLY grape is proving a good seller, for the crop has steadily realized a good price.

DAVID HILL, of the Hill Nursery Co., Dundee, Ill., returned recently from England, where he spent two months visiting relatives.

THE death of J. A. McKee, nurseryman at King's Mountain, Ky., is recorded in the obituary column on another page of this issue.

THE Northwest Nursery Co., Valley City, N. D., has sold 17,500 shade trees to the city of Moose Jaw, in Assiniboia, to be used in a "city beautiful" plan.

THE apple crop of western New York was badly damaged by a wind storm October 4. It is estimated by some that the loss will approximate forty per cent.

W. N. SCHARFF, New Carlisle, O., has been exhibiting nursery stock at the Ohio state fair at Columbus and at the county fair at Dayton and did a nice business at both places.

THE Farmer Seed & Nursery Co., of Faribault, Minn., had a fine exhibit at the Corn Palace at Mitchell, S. D. The display occupied a conspicuous position, with a frontage of thirty feet facing the front doors. Edward Kiekenapp and Martin Bieter had charge of the exhibit.

FRANK HAMMOND, superintendent of J. G. Harrison & Sons' nurseries at Berlin, Md., was severely injured Sunday, October 1, by sixteen Italian employees, who attacked him. The Italians were arrested, charged with assault with intent to kill, and are being held without bail, awaiting the result of Mr. Hammond's injuries. He is reported to be in a critical condition.

season is closed they will disappear and remain away from this section until next spring, when nearly every one of them will be here once more with a request for work during the shipping season. The winter will be spent either in the large cities or on farms in the warm sections of the south, to which many of the men will drift in the course of events. Most of the men spend the money they secure at the nurseries about town while here, but a few have bank accounts here and in other places and consequently have a small sum on hand at all seasons. A majority of them are sober and industrious, but have the "wanderlust" fever and travel rather than remain in one position for any length of time.

Vegetable Forcing.

CARBON AND LETTUCE.

Can I use carbon bisulphid in soil in the house with lettuce and not spoil the lettuce for table use? Is it poisonous to persons, if used in the soil for any vegetables? H. E. B.

Carbon bisulphid can be safely used in the soil lettuce is growing in, or, in fact, for practically any other crop. If the liquid should be dropped on the foliage, it would render any such plants unsalable for a few days, but the fumes soon pass away and there would be little danger of poisoning. Bore holes in the soil with a sharp stick, preferably when the soil is damp, as the fumes are then more penetrating. Pour a teaspoonful into each hole, immediately covering each with soil. Make the holes twelve to eighteen inches apart each way and the carbon will kill any worms, larvae or insects which may chance to be in the soil.

Do not use any naked lights while applying the carbon, as it is highly explosive in its nature.

The only case where I have found carbon injurious to plant life was when applied to plants in pots. In such a case only a few drops must be given or harm will be done. It is otherwise with crops grown in beds or benches, where the fumes are not confined within a small area. C. W.

The Market.

There is a great deal more life in the cut flower line than we have had for a long time and, while the larger social functions will be later in starting, there is a tone to the general trade that is at least encouraging.

The supply of flowers of all kinds is quite satisfactory, at least to the wholesalers, as they manage to clean up nicely and still take care of all demands, excepting possibly white carnations, which seem slow in coming in. Mums are coming in slowly and it will be two weeks before there is any great quantity.

Various Notes.

Mrs. E. A. Williams had a number of large funeral orders last week which called for quantities of the best stock, and these, with some social affairs, kept her force busy every day and all of one night.

Randolph & McClements were busy with a number of social affairs and report their regular store trade improving every day.

The A. W. Smith Co. is making quite a display of bulbs for fall planting.

E. C. Ludwig says things are coming all right and he anticipates a good season, and that means a good deal, for his store is open day and night, 168 hours a week.

A small but enthusiastic crowd of twenty-five braved the rain and wind to attend the Florists' Club meeting at the Fort Pitt hotel Tuesday evening, October 3. An exhibit of outdoor stock which had evidently suffered from the dry summer came from R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., White Marsh, Md. The new rose, Sunburst, which is well thought of here, and Carnation Wodenethe, from Charles Totty, were the only flowers of importance, but a pleasant evening was spent by those who were there and a special invitation is extended to those who only come occasionally to attend the next meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Lustick, of Washington, Pa., have closed their houses and are going to spend the winter in California, but will reopen their range on their return. "All work and no play" is not their motto.

George Crissman, of the Crissman Greenhouse Co., Punxsutawney, is a visitor and reports the big flood last week the worst ever experienced in that country, but fortunately they were not damaged in any way.

AZALEAS ARE IN Start Them Now For Christmas...

We have received our first car of Belgian Azaleas, fine plants, personally picked and selected in Ghent by a member of our Company; re-assorted here, and none delivered to our customers that do not come up to the highest standard of excellence—shapely, well balanced, abundantly budded plants.

Mr. W. A. Saltford, of "The Saltford Flower Shop" (whom we quote by permission), said last year:

"The Azaleas we bought from Jackson & Perkins Company were the finest lot we ever forced, and we have given them a duplicate order for four hundred plants this year." (And Mr. Saltford was so well pleased with THAT lot that he gave us another large order for Azaleas THIS year.)

VARIETIES:—This list, and a few more, and while they last at these prices:

Apollo. Double; dark red; late.
Bernard Andreas Alba. Double; pure white; late.

Deutsche Perle. Double; pure white; one of the best.

Doctor Moore. Double; deep rose; fine; late.
Empereur Du Bresil. Double; soft rose; extra fine; late.

Empress of India. Double; rich, rosy, salmon; late.

Ernest Eckhaupte. Double; brilliant red.
Madame Petrick. Semi-double; deep rose; very early.

Madame Van der Cruyssen. Semi-double; bright red; early.

Niobe. Fine; double white; late.

Prof. Wolters. Single; rose, bordered with white; early.

Simon Mardner. Double pink; early.
Vervaeuana. Double; rosy salmon; white margin; early.

Vervaeuana Alba. New, very desirable early kind.

"The Azaleas you shipped me this fall are certainly fine; the Madame Petrick were brought into bloom for Christmas without forcing. We had the best Azaleas in Worcester for the holidays, and I can assure you of my order for next season." Chas. D. Mackie, Worcester, Mass., Dec. 31, 1910.

"The car of plants made record-breaking time and came through in fine shape; the Azaleas and Rhododendrons were very fine, in fact, beyond criticism." T. R. Hopkins, Seattle, Washington, Jan. 11, 1911.

Prompt orders are invited, while the assortment is complete, and while the plants are fresh and perfect; get them started for the holidays; nothing easier to bring into bloom and nothing more salable or more profitable than these handsome plants when in bloom.

Chrysanthemums

Having disposed of our surplus stock plants of ADVANCE, we are now in position to take orders for young plants for January or February delivery of the three following:

SMITH'S ADVANCE—The earliest large flowering white, a fine companion of Golden Glow. Can be had from July onward according to date of planting and selecting buds. Being more dwarf and flowers more double than October Frost, is a decided improvement on that variety. It was so well received by all purchasers this season, we predict a very heavy demand. Price, $1.20 per 10; $10.00 per 100.

UNAKA—This variety has sustained our last year's description. Being a strong grower, with perfect stem and foliage, a fine incurved bloom of a pleasing shade of pink and maturing the first week of October, places it foremost among early pinks. In fact, there is no other good pink to compete with it at this date. Price, $1.20 per 10; $10.00 per 100.

CHRYSOLOBA—This variety is about 15 days earlier than Col. D. Appleton, is of larger size, stronger stem, not as tall, in color is intermediate between this variety and Major Bonaffon. This with its excellent keeping qualities places it in the front ranks of the commercial sorts. Price, $3.00 per 10; $25.00 per 100.

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

Trade has been quite brisk lately, with stock plentiful in most lines. Roses are in good crop and the quality is about all that could be desired. Carnations are more plentiful and are about equal to the demand. Their quality is up to the standard at this date and another week or two will see the stems much longer. There have been a few of the early mums on the market, but no great quantity at any time, and the weather has been such as to create but little demand for them, as it requires a little frost in the air to give the people the habit. The supply of Beauties has been rather light, but about equal to the demand. Smilax is quite scarce and will be so for several weeks.

Various Notes.

The Fulton Flower Shop opened for business October 7, in the Fulton market stand. Fred C. Vearick is proprietor and he has with him Robert Speers. Both Mr. Vearick and Mr. Speers have been with the Livingston Seed Co. up to a short time ago. They have a good location, for that line of stock will go nicely with the general fancy merchandise handled by the Fulton Market.

The Columbus Floral Co. reports things coming along nicely and will soon be cutting quantities of carnations. The firm grows quite a few mums, all of the later varieties.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. is cutting heavily in roses and carnations and is just starting to cut a few early mums. The company is about ready to connect the new boiler at the Fifth avenue plant. J. M.

SOUTHINGTON, CONN.

The Market.

Business has certainly picked up this week. There has been great demand for funeral work, and it seemed almost impossible to get stock, particularly carnations. The frost killed nearly all the outside flowers, and few dahlias are in the market. Roses are coming in fine. Wedding decorations were plentiful last week. The cool weather has pushed business right along.

Various Notes.

William Fischer has completed his new houses on Buckland street.

Earl S. Bavier, of Marion, was in Cromwell last week.

Olson & Lunden were kept busy last week with funeral work. S.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

The cold, damp weather has about cleaned up the outdoor stock. A few gladioli are still on the market, but the other stock, such as dahlias, are all shipped in and we can say they never were better. Carnations have improved wonderfully and are now one of the chief factors on the market. Roses are plentiful, especially the short stemmed ones. Lilies are scarce and valley is cleaned up every day. We have not yet had a good frost, but steady, cool dampness has had nearly the same effect.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club sprung into prominence at the meeting last week. The attendance was large, due perhaps to the announcement that lunch would be served, but be that as it may, they came and were ready for business. Everybody was keyed up and a good program for the winter is started. The several committees were given instructions and will act accordingly. Joe Streit has started things along the bowling line and lost no time while at the meeting in organizing the teams which will bowl every week.

The social committee has arranged a debate to be held at the meeting November 3; subject: "Resolved, that more skill is required in the arrangement and disposal of flowers than in their production." This, no doubt, will bring out a good discussion from the growers and retailers and it is just for this reason that the debates are brought about. Most of the members who were dissatisfied with the decision of the club not to hold a fall flower show, have aroused enough spirit to bring about a small show just for our own amusement and information. The date was moved forward a few weeks and particulars will be given later.

The Market.

The florists here have experienced an unusually busy week with decorations or funeral work. Stock is coming in fast and in good shape, but it is being used up quickly, and in some instances there has been a shortage of some special colored rose or carnation. The funeral work was of the better class.

The supply of cut flowers is growing larger daily, and we are enjoying Indian summer weather. Carnations are coming in fine now. Potted plants are not plentiful, yet there is a big demand for them.

Various Notes.

An effort is being made by the Hartford Market Gardeners' Association to organize a State Vegetable Growers' Association.

E. H. Moore reports that the first week in October was one of the busiest of the season.

Champion & Co. have had a busy week with funeral work and decorations.

HELENA, MONT.

The second annual meeting of the Florists' and Nurserymen's Association of Montana was held in this city September 28 and was a great success, the membership being nearly doubled. The association will try to make arrangements with the officers of the state fair to offer inducements to florists and nurserymen so that they can make a creditable showing at the fair.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, T. E. Mills, Helena; vice-president, D. J. Tighe, Billings; secretary-treasurer, E. A. Calmettes, Helena.

After the meeting the company was entertained at luncheon by Mr. Mills, of the State Nursery, who also provided automobiles to take the party to the state fair.

Alexandria, Va.—Mr. Shaffer, of C. A. Shaffer & Co., has purchased a farm nearby, which he will devote to the growing of outdoor flowers and the raising of choice poultry. He expects to remove to the farm about November 1 and will leave O. R. Hedges in charge of the business here.

Fresh and Green.

We have them by the thousands—front, sides, back, everywhere.

No one can beat us in this line.

WARNING.

DON'T BE DECEIVED! Now, as well as for the last 25 years, we hold the ground as leaders in the importing, growing and shipping of our specialty, the Araucaria.

IN HONOR OF

Our 25th Anniversary

Since we began the importing, growing and shipping of our specialty, the Araucaria, we—look—give our customers a bargain by cutting the prices just one-half—for a few weeks only.

Our so well-known Christmas Begonia, Exfordii, a constant bloomer for the fall holidays, and during the whole winter is never without a flower; in light pink, pink, dark pink and turning gradually into a bright red (big trusses of flowers), 2½-in. pots, $5.00; 3-in., 8c; 4-in., 12c.

NOTICE!

AZALEA INDICA, new crop—first consignment per Steamer Marquette from Belgium just received, and are in excellent condition. Start in now for Christmas forcing! We have the usual 4 best Christmas varieties, well known to every florist as the earliest of all and easy to force. Deutsche Perle, pure double white; Simon Mardner and Mme. Petrick, double pink; and Veraneana, double rose variegated, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00. Easter varieties: Mme. Vander Cruyssen, Niobe, Empress of India, Apollo, Helene Tholemann, Prof. Wolters, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. We have only a limited quantity of 50c and 60c sizes; larger sizes must be taken in addition to small ones. Why? Azaleas are very scarce this year in Belgium, even spot cash cannot buy all we need.

SMITH'S ADVANCE

is the earliest large-flowered white Chrysanthemum. Like Golden Glow, it will produce good blooms at any season of the year following an active period of growth. Buds selected June 10 were cut July 25, 5 1/2 inches in diameter, with excellent stem, foliage and remarkable substance. The later buds, for August and September, gave larger and finer flowers, carried on stems 3 to 3 1/2 feet long. We offer stock plants for immediate or later delivery, from one of the most celebrated growers, at 40c each, $4.50 per doz., $35.00 per 100.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.EARLIEST WHITE.

Smith's Advance is the earliest large flowered white chrysanthemum. Like Golden Glow, it will produce good blooms at any season of the year following an active period of growth. Buds selected June 10 were cut July 25, 5 1/2 inches in diameter, with excellent stem, foliage and remarkable substance. The later buds, for August and September, gave larger and finer flowers carried on stems 3 to 3 1/2 feet long. We offer stock plants at 40c each, $4.50 per doz., $35.00 per 100.

PANSIES.

HOME OF PANSIES.

Our growing crops of pansies for seed were greatly admired by all florists who saw them this last summer. All said they were grand—some said they were the best they had ever seen. We reserved over 50,000 of our best for seed growing and they certainly were a pretty sight. We are improving on them annually, and have a fine lot of red, red shades and other crosses of our own origin and nearly all colors and shades found in pansies. We started a few for a test very early and they have surprised us as to coloring and size of flowers; showing improvement over parent stock. You cannot go wrong if you place your order with us. If, upon blooming, you are not perfectly satisfied I will return every cent you paid for them. I made this same offer last year and had not a kick and I am better prepared to make it now than I was then. $2.50 per 1000; 5000 for $10.00. Our collection contains no black, unless so ordered. We have a good stock of black which we keep separate. We can also supply, separate, Masterpiece, Giant Mme. Perret and Giant Prize Trimardeau; also blood red and Golden Queen, separate. All at the same price.
E. Rawlings, Wholesale Grower, OLEAN, N. Y.

PANSY PARK PERFECTION is the most thoroughbred strain of giant show and fancy pansies, the flowers of largest size and most perfect form. I have made growing of pansy seeds and plants a specialty for nearly 40 years and it is the result of many years of breeding and selection. It also contains every variety introduced by foreign growers up to date. Two of many reports: "Send me $10.00 worth of your best pansy seed. If as good in colors and size as they were last year I will need double the amount next year." G. H. Toepke, Detroit, Mich. "The pansy plants I ordered from you were received in first-class condition, and I am very much pleased with them. Plants I received from others often came in very bad condition. They did not seem to know how to pack them to carry safely such a long distance." C. H. Ward & Son, Winter Park, Fla. An immense stock of fine field-grown plants from seed sown thinly, broadcast, so that each plant has plenty of room to grow stocky and strong, with extra good roots. Over 75 varieties mixed, the reds, bronzes and best fancy sorts in large proportion, 1000, $3.00; 500, $1.75; 5000, $14.00; 10,000, $27.00. Cash.

We intend opening a store in a neighboring town and will build a house of sash for plants, twenty-four feet long, ten feet six inches wide, four feet six inches high at the gutter and seven feet six inches high at the ridge. We intend heating it by running one 1½-inch flow pipe along each side wall, then looping at the rear and connecting with three 1¼-inch returns under each bench, the house to contain two benches. Would this be sufficient radiation to heat it to about 50 degrees and would a tank heater rated at 160 square feet of radiation and capable of supplying 200 gallons of hot water do the work? W. H.

As only seventy-five square feet of radiation will be required to heat the house described, the heater should be amply large for the purpose. If the heater can be placed below the level of the returns one 1½-inch overhead flow and six 1¼-inch returns should be ample to maintain a temperature of 50 degrees.

TWO ILLINOIS HOUSES.

We are building two greenhouses each 28x150 feet, running east and west, on a slope toward the south. The north wall will be six feet high, of solid concrete blocks. The south wall will have three feet of concrete blocks and thirty inches of glass. The dividing wall will be of wood and an iron gutter will be used. The elevation from the south wall of the lower house to the north wall of the upper house is seventeen feet in fifty-six feet, as the houses will be connected. The lower house will have solid beds and the upper house raised benches. Both gables will have glass. The houses will be heated by a Furman boiler rated to heat 11,500 square feet. Hot water will be the heating medium. The boiler shed will be located on the southwest corner. The maximum temperature required will be 60 degrees in zero weather for both houses and we would like to know the best way to pipe the

Gentlemen:-

I should like to make a little inquiry with regard to the Chicago Pump Co.'s Automatic Electric Condensation Pump.

Has it given satisfaction?

Do you think it has saved any on the amount of coal consumed?

About how much is your electric bill per month to run it?

Is it more economical than a trap?

Thanking you in advance for your reply.

Respectfully,

Wm Swinbank

We use it on 240,000 feet of glass. Costs about $5.00 to $8.00 per month for electricity. Makes more even heat, on lower pressure than traps and takes 40% less boiler capacity. It's a success.

The Users Of The.... Hughson Regulating Valve

are all satisfied with the results it has given, and many duplicate orders is the proof. This Valve will maintain a steady pressure on the low side, no matter how the initial pressure fluctuates. By carrying 40 or 50 pounds pressure on the boiler and setting the valve to carry 5 or 10 pounds on the line, you always have a reserve to fall back on in case of a sudden drop in temperature. Our new catalogue is just out and if you contemplate making any changes you had better get one—it is yours for the asking.

houses to obtain the desired temperature, also the number of flows and returns. Soft coal will be used. C. W.

To heat the houses described to 60 degrees it will be well to use three 3-inch pipes in the lower house, as flows, with fifteen 2-inch return pipes. One flow can be under the ridge and the others on the walls. Five or six of the returns can be on each of the walls, with the others along the sides of the beds or on the posts.

In the upper house use five 2½-inch flow pipes and twelve 2-inch returns. Place a flow pipe on each wall and the others along the roof or on posts, according to the construction of the

CINCINNATI.

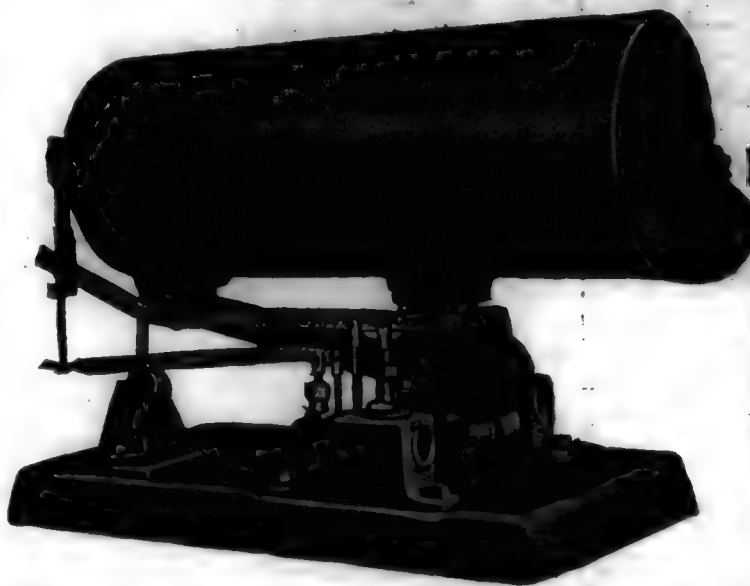

The Gateway to the South.

In the first part of this week business started with a vigor that augured well for the future. The supply was scarcely equal to the demand in most lines. This, however, was due principally to the fact that on Monday incoming shipments were about normal, while the call was large, owing to a general replenishing by the retailers. Still, judging from advance orders, this general condition bids fair to last throughout the next fortnight, until the mum season is on strongly, and if the mums keep on cleaning up as they are doing now, this tightness will keep up for some time. The quality of stock is everything that a buyer can possibly wish it to be at this time of the year, and the prices are fair.

The rose offerings are good in number and have little trouble in cleaning up. Last week they were a trifle slow at times, but all worth while were moved in the end, and not to the ash barrel, either. The condition of all stock in this line is such that it is hard to pick out any one or a few varieties and say they are best. Carnations present quite a variety in length of stems, ranging from long ones, good for any purpose, to very short ones, useful only for work. The blooms on all are good. The white and lighter shades predominate in numbers. Other lines include the following: Chrysanthemums in large, medium and choice white and yellow; lilies, which are finding a good market; cosmos, the late crop of which is so far advanced that unless there is a frost there is little danger of a shortage; dahlias, which are selling fairly well; New York double violets, lily of the valley and orchids.

The green goods supply is ample, meeting requests with excellent stock.

THE NEW "Detroit" RETURN TRAPS

are devoid of all unnecessary mechanism.

Every part designed, manufactured and assembled with the idea of permanence foremost.

haus, of C. E. Critchell's force, and Charles Witterstaetter.

Of course the fall exhibition, November 13 to 18, was the principal topic for discussion. The report of the secretary of the executive committee stated that all advertising matter would be distributed within a few days, that nothing but the mere mechanical work of staging is left to do, and that when the show opens all will be ready. Communications from probable exhibitors show that quite a number will be on hand at the appointed time. Cups have been donated by the following: J. M. McCullough's Sons, R. Witterstaetter and J. Chas. Murphy, for carnations, chrysanthemums and roses, respectively. Irwin Bertermann, of Indianapolis, Otto Koenig, of St. Louis, and Phil Breitmeyer, of Detroit, will act as judges. C. E. Critchell, P. J. Olinger and Chas. H. Hoffmeister were appointed a committee to bring plans for the entertainment of visiting florists during the show.

Alex Ostendarp and A. C. Heckman, Jr., presented an invitation to hold the meeting November 11 at their wholesale place, the Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange; the invitation was accepted. A special meeting will also be held at the club rooms October 23.

E. G. Hill, of Richmond, was a guest at the club meeting. He showed a large vase of his new yellow rose, Sunburst. The roses had long, stiff stems, pretty pointed buds and good foliage.

Various Notes.

The bowling club will hold its first biweekly meeting at Mielert's, on Vine street near Fifteenth street, October 16. All desiring to attend are requested to be on hand promptly at 8 p. m., when the teams will be selected.

William Murphy has returned from the Chenux Islands, where he has been for the last two months. Hay fever, however, ambushed him and took him prisoner immediately after his return. CHRISTMAS PRESENT

GET ONE FOR YOUR BOILER

Heating System Never Worked so Well Before

We have just gone through a rough cold spell for California, and the two Kroeschell Generators, No. 5 and No. 11, have done fine work. We are very much pleased with the results of both of them, and would not be without your Generator on any account. In half an hour we can get the pipes very hot to the far end of our last house, which is over 280 feet from the boiler. We have never had our heating system work so well before, and believe it is due to the Generators.

The Market.

Trade has improved somewhat in the last week. However, it will require a cold snap to improve matters a great deal. Stock is plentiful. Some good mums are being brought to this market. Easter lilies find a ready call. Dahlias are still to be had in large quantities. Beauties and Killarneys are in steady demand. Some few orchids are to be had, but they are not in heavy demand. Carnations are improving in quality and are plentiful.

Various Notes.

Homer Wiegand spent several days in Chicago last week.

B. F. Hensley, of Knightstown, has been shipping some good mums and carnations into this market.

The Smith & Young Co. has leased store rooms at the corner of Wabash and Alabama streets for their new wholesale house. They expect to occupy them about October 15.

91-93 CHAMBERS ST. NEW YORK

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet.
An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

The Market.

Business fell off considerably during the last ten days, compared with what it was just preceding. If it hadn't been for the large number of stores having their fall openings, business would have been almost at a standstill. Mums are coming in a little more, and will soon be in full crop.

Roses have improved since firing began and are in fair demand, with about enough for all. Carnations are quite plentiful, but the stems are rather short. The vegetable growers are still bringing in bouquets of outdoor flowers and selling them at their stands in the market place.

Various Notes.

Karl Zeidler has about completed a new boiler room, in which has been placed a sixty horse-power steam boiler, and there is room for another if needed. He will not use it this winter, but next year will build new houses just back of the old ones, and heat them from this boiler. The old place is heated by hot water, but he hopes to have better service from steam heat. He has a large patch of cosmos which are full of blooms and these come handy for cemetery bouquets. The mums are looking nice and the carnations are coming good. September 9 he started out to gather up all the house plants that his customers want him to keep through the winter.

The Wm. Blackman Floral Co. has had an out-of-town wedding decoration nearly every day for some time. This company has also had a number of decorations for fall openings, with plenty of stock to take care of them.

Julius Niednagel & Sons also had a number of decorations for fall openings. Their roses, carnations and mums are in fine condition.

Nellie Goodge is still on the sick list.

Royston & Fenton will soon have a large crop of roses. E. L. F.

It's every way practical, because, first and foremost it is a U-Bar house. That tells its own story of a carefully planned plan—a perfect arrangement of the heating—ample ventilation and the innumerable little things that go with a thoroughly thought out and liberally constructed house. A splendid piece of workmanship it is from start to finish. No skimping done. U-Bar houses are not built that way.

MILWAUKEE.The Market.

Business is picking up nicely. Weddings and other social functions are the order of the day, and in nearly all lines there is enough stock to go around. Good carnations are still shy; more could be disposed of at a good margin. The last of last week and on Monday of this week Easter lilies were completely cleaned up.

Various Notes.

All of the local boys, twenty in number, who attended the silver jubilee of the Chicago Florists' Club October 5, agree that they had "some time," which again proves that it takes the Chicago boys to do it up brown. Instead of going in a body, they went at various times. Some of the earlier ones participated in the bowling, which took place at the new Bensinger alleys. From there they went to the meeting of the Chicago club, after which the rest of the evening was spent at the jubilee celebration. President Hunkel and Fred Holton, of the Milwaukee club, voiced the visitors' feelings when they said: "We extend the glad hand, wishing them many more years of prosperity, and hope that good fellowship between the Milwaukee and Chicago club members shall likewise be promoted and prove part of the success." "All's well that ends well" is a German proverb which came to the writer's mind on the trip home, for it was indeed a jolly party who made merry till the wee hours of the morning.

J. M. Fox & Son report a busy week, engaged mainly with wedding decorations, including one in Racine, Wis.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

SUPPRESSING THE BIZARRE.

In The Review for April 20 there was a reproduction of a photograph of a funeral design in flowers representing a structural steel workers' derrick with the glove of the deceased hanging on the book. The Review tried to point out the undesirableness of such designs. The note fell under the eye of the editor of Popular Mechanics, who published the following comment, which has been widely copied into newspapers of general circulation:

FLORAL DESIGN IS CONDEMNED.

"Florists throughout the country are commenting adversely on a floral design recently made in Indianapolis for a workman who was killed on a new building. They generally condemn the design as being entirely too vivid a reminder of the manner in which he came to his death.

"The man was a structural iron worker. One of his gloves caught in the hook of the derrick just as the engine started. He called 'Slack down' to the engineer, but was raised thirty feet in the air before his cries were heard, and then his hand slipped from the glove and he fell to the ground, receiving injuries from which he died.

"An organization of which he was a member ordered a floral piece for his funeral made in exact representation of the derrick and required the florist to place an empty glove in the hook, as the glove was found after the accident. The words 'Slack down,' which the engineer failed to hear, were worked into the base of the design."

THE EVOLUTION OF RETAILING.

Flower Selling Undergoing Change.

That the methods of merchandising cut flowers are undergoing a permanent change is a fact that is given too little consideration by the majority of retailers. Perhaps it is because he does not comprehend the direction of the current that the average man who feels the effect of the new methods is inclined to inveigh against "price cutting" rather than plan moves by which he can hold his place in the retail field. That changing conditions demand some change in methods will be apparent to anyone who gives thought to the subject.

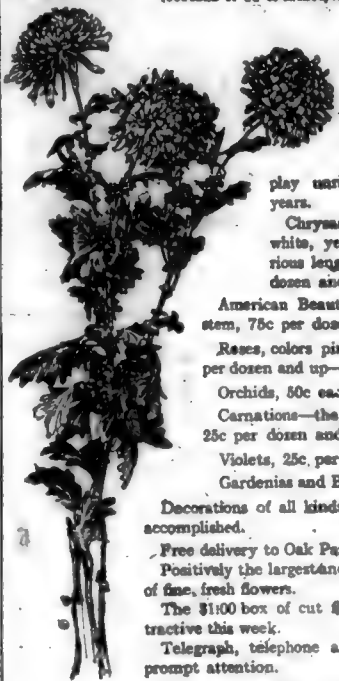

The retailer of yesterday looked upon himself as an artist rather than as a merchant, and he conducted his business on a basis to correspond with his estimate of its character. Some of the most successful flower stores in the country today still are managed along the old lines, but they cater only to the excessively rich, or they mostly are in the cities that do not have large local supplies of cut flowers, or are located outside the business districts, where the trade is of a neighborhood nature. In either case it is more than likely that they are beginning to feel the pressure of the new order of flower selling.

Competition Grows Keener.

There is, of course, more or less keen competition between the flower stores in every city, but the competition is almost sure to grow sharper rather than the reverse. The man with a nice establishment in a high class residence district of a good sized city has been looked upon as having all the best of it; his overhead expenses were usually much lighter than they would have been downtown and he did not have to do so large a business to make an equal profit. With the advent of the cheaper class of downtown stores that have become so numerous in the last few years, the high class downtown store has felt the need of a change in method, and, making that change, the effect has then been felt with augmented force by the stores in the residence districts, which are not, as a rule, in position to avail themselves of the same methods that succeed downtown. No matter how fine a man's flowers are, or how perfect his service; no matter how certain he may be that his wealthy customers will come to him when they want to be sure of getting just the right thing in every particular, it is not pleasant to see in the current past the windows those same customers carrying home or wearing the flowers bought at the store that has adopted more or less of the department store plan of retailing.

How to meet the new form of competition is something that every retailer must figure out for himself, but of this much he may be sure: While good service never will cease to be a factor, the store that merely rests on its reputation will do well to maintain its volume of business; the natural increase will go to the stores that adopt the progressive policy.

The Department Store Principles.

The new order of flower selling does not involve so much price cutting as at first sight might be supposed. It involves price cutting, yes, if one compares the prices with those previously charged, but the man who thinks he must have the old 100 per cent differential between wholesale and retail prices should stop to consider that, if he sells, of a Saturday, ten dozens of Beauties at a profit of $1.50 per dozen he has made more money than if he had asked $3 a dozen profit and had sold only two dozens, or three dozens, or even four dozens. To put it another way, there comes a time in the growth of the business that the retailer can well afford to sell on a margin much less than was considered essential for success in the days when the volume of sales was small. Still, the new method depends most on buying right.

The modern method employs the principle of the department store not only in that the retailer makes liberal use of the advertising columns of his leading daily paper, but also in that he keeps in close touch with his wholesale market and uses the paper to tell his public of the conditions he finds there. Like the department store, the florist who employs the new methods prices his merchandise from day to day in accordance with what he pays. If he is able to pick up, of an afternoon, 500 36-inch Beauties at two-thirds the price he would have to pay if he were buying only one or two selected dozens of the longest stems, he takes his risk of bad weather and offers his purchase at corresponding prices in his advertisement. The old way was to hold retail prices at about a certain level, regardless of fluctuations in the wholesale market price. It doubtless was a good way in the days when flowers were scarce ten months in the year, but it presents manifest difficulties now that stock of one kind or another is plentiful ten months of every twelve and there stand enterprising gentlemen ready to take advantage of every opportunity.

Some of the best stores in America practice the new principles of flower merchandising, stores that give good service. These stores may, as the manager of one of them says he does, "throw in the art," and he is one of those who once thought the art should be charged for, but if there is any doubt that the present method is succeeding that doubt will be dispelled by a few words with the wholesalers who supply the stock; the quantity of stock handled not only is large, but it increases steadily.

The Spirit of Enterprise.

The retailer who does not fully comprehend the fact that volume is what now must be sought in flower selling is inclined to feel, when he sees the operation of the newer method, that the advertising florist has in some manner been given an unfair advantage; the chances are that the volume of purchases and sales of the advertising store, and its expenses, are not correctly estimated. The retailer who handles the big quantity has, of course, an advantage under present conditions, but they are advantages of his own creation; there is nothing unfair about them, and any competitor can obtain for himself the same advantages in exactly the same way, if he chooses. All that he need do is to put himself in position to use stock in quantity.

The big buyer's greatest advantage lies in his own disposition to push for business. It takes more than courage and sagacity to lead a man to assume the responsibilities that go with the high rental of a downtown store; the average man lets well enough alone, up to the point that it is borne in on him that he isn't keeping up with the procession. It takes capital, also, to finance a big store, for where one's purchases run into thousands of dollars per month, bills must be met promptly or even the strongest credit soon is exhausted. Given the ability to move stock in quantity, and the ability to pay promptly, all buyers are on the same basis. It is an advantage to be able to visit the market in person, but the man at a distance finds wholesalers quick to wire whenever in position to make offers of stock the buyer is known to be able to use in quantity. The big buyer, wherever he is, is the man the wholesaler wants, for the wholesaler, too, must have volume; the daily receipts of stock now are far too heavy to be moved by sales of dozens, or even hundreds, in most lines.

way downtown stores are multiplying, especially in the smaller cities. A few years ago the florist was content to retail from his greenhouses, but now, for one reason or another, he finds it expedient to get into a location that is accessible to a larger part of the people, so he opens a downtown store. Then more than ever the need is felt for volume of sales, and work begins to get them. It is work that puts upon the other florists of the town the necessity of defending their trade. It is a problem which, in the end, resolves itself into the question of creating new flower buyers more rapidly than they would be produced in the natural order of things.

M. JH. PERNET-DUCHER.

The accompanying reproduction of a recent photograph gives the readers of The Review a glimpse of the kindly face of the greatest rosarian the world has yet produced. The writer believes that this statement will not be contradicted. The new roses that he has produced stand out preëminent; he has enriched our lists with more varieties of sterling value than any other hybridist, and still he works on, a modest and keenly intelligent rose grower.

M. Jh. Pernet-Ducher has given us the following sorts: Soleil d'Or, Prince de Bulgarie, Mme. Ravary, Souvenir du President Carnot, Mme. Caroline Testout, l'Innocence, Mme. Abel Chatenay, Gustave Regis, Mme. Pernet-Ducher, Antoine Rivoire, Marquise de Salisbury, Le Progres, Monsieur Joseph Hill, Etoile de France, Marquis de Sinety, Mme. Melanie Soupert, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Mme. Maurice de Luze, Laurent Carle, Lyon-Rose, Beaute Inconstante, Marie van Houtte, William Allen Richardson, Baronne de Rothschild, Chateau des Clos Vougeot.

Several of these varieties have been grown by the tens of thousands annually in various parts of the world. About 50,000 Mme. Caroline Testout are planted each year on the Pacific slope of our own country, to say nothing of the number used in Europe. Probably this is at present the most popular of the Pernet varieties.

A visit to his nurseries is always intensely interesting, especially in June, when most of his trial seedlings are in bloom. He certainly seems to have the breeding of roses down to a science. Whether under the Mendellian theory or not, I do not know, but I am sure that he is working by a well defined and successful plan; his seedlings show it. His yearly offerings of his new roses run in number from one to four in variety, seldom over three sorts, and this very fact inspires confidence in their value. Too many new sorts are annually placed on the market, to the bewilderment of those who would enjoy the testing of the year's novelties. If the Pernet plan were established as a precedent it would certainly work to the advantage of the rose trade in general.

A visit to the Bagatelle gardens at Paris reveals unmistakably the standing of Pernet. The records show that he has captured the gold medal offered by the city of Paris on three if not four different occasions for the best new rose of the year. He has also been presented with the medal of honor of the National Horticultural Society of France.

A day spent with Mr. Pernet impresses one with his enthusiasm, his passionate love for the rose, as well as his utter modesty, which does not at all prevent his appreciation of the value of the seedlings that he has been able to add to the lists. A visitor to his place has a great pleasure vouchsafed him, and Mr. Pernet spares no pains in making the visit of lasting interest. Several times during the last fifteen years has the writer enjoyed his hospitality and more his keenly accurate estimate of the values of the whole catalogue of roses, new and old. The addition of the splendid family of hybrid teas, which numbered but a few sorts when he began his work, has wrought a complete revolution in that time in the cultivation of roses.

Looking down into the heart of a Lyons rose, a Caroline Testout or a Clos Vougeot makes one exclaim, "What more can even Pernet give us?" As a present culmination, however, he has produced the grandest yellow rose extant, which will be disseminated simultaneously in Europe and America in the spring of 1912, under the name of Sunburst. It is a big rose, large in growth and foliage, wonderfully long in bud, and the color is of such intense shades of orange and yellow that words fail to describe it. The sepals are prominent and of a high shade of green. What is of most interest to the rose grower is the fact that it is a grand forcer under our American conditions, easy to manage, free, and a fine keeper.

E. G. Hill.

ROSES IN CUBA.

Nothing so delights Benj. Hammond, secretary of the American Rose Society, as to have some one in a far corner write to him about roses—it is the evidence of widespread interest that pleases the secretary. Here is a letter he received the other day:

Dear Mr. Hammond: I am much interested in roses, but I find it hard to take the descriptions of the American rose firms and make them all give the results desired. I have the following kinds which have done well for me in Cuba, and I should be glad if you would suggest some additions, and where they can be secured, and I shall be glad to try them out. I bud them all on a non-blooming stock we have here in Cuba. It is easily rooted, and a vigorous grower, and one that, if it would stand the cold, I believe would be a magnificent stock for the American rose grower. There is small demand among the Americans for roses here. But the Cubans are great flower lovers and all the patios are small gardens of flowers.

This is the list mentioned: American Beauty, Paul Neyron, Killarney, Maman Cochet, White Marechal Niel, Perle des Jardins, Helen Gould, Kaiserin Augusta Victoria and a few others, the names of which I have missed, but they have nothing striking about them. The Cubans like the roses with color. T. R. Towns.

HARDY HERBACEOUS PLANTS.

Time for Replanting.

With the exception of a few Japanese anemones, helianthus, asters, pompon chrysanthemums and other late flowering subjects, the herbaceous borders are now getting bare of bloom and there could be no better time than the present to do any replanting required. Peonies can still be planted, although both these and German iris would have been better set out early in September, but with a few exceptions, such as Anemone Japonica, incarvilleas, pompon chrysanthemums and Lobelia cardinalis, the last half of October and the early part of November is the best season of the year for replanting.

It does not pay to leave herbaceous plants too long undivided. With the extremely robust varieties, such as helianthus, heleniums, rudbeckias, doronicums, silphiums, veronias, lythrums and physostegias, it is a good plan to divide and replant every second year. In the case of Phlox paniculata, delphiniums, Pyrethrum roseum, veronicas, aconitums, platycodons, campanulas, Iris Germanica and Kämpferi, asters, centaureas, Boltonias and some others, it pays to separate them and give them new ground every third year. In fact, with the exception of peonies, dictamnus, hemerocallis, Anemone Japonica and a few other sorts which are slow in establishing themselves, perennials do vastly better replanted at least every third or fourth year.

How to Plant.

Over a great part of the country rainfalls have been copious of late and the ground is in an ideal condition for the work of replanting. Practically all perennials, it need hardly be said, like a deep soil liberally manured and, given such, they withstand an astonishing amount of dry weather without suffering. For cutting purposes nursery rows are, of course, the best, allowing sufficient space between the rows for horse or hand cultivation.

Well planted perennial borders are a great attraction and we know one or two country florists who have such and they prove a good advertisement. The different subjects are planted in good sized masses, not in single plants, and large labels are attached to each. Dutch bulbs and annuals are dotted among them to cover up any bare spots in the late summer and fall, and there is not a week from the last part of March until early November when these borders are without flowers.

Varieties for Florists.

The Review receives many inquiries as to the best sorts of perennials to grow for cut flower purposes. Such lists often have been given, but each year the number of those growing herbaceous plants increases and another list may not be inopportune. All varieties named are reliably hardy:

Delphinium hybridum and Chinensis, peonies in variety, Phlox suffruticosa

M. Jh. Pernet-Ducher.

Miss Lingard, Phlox paniculata in variety, Clematis recta, Dictamnus Fraxinella, Aquilegia corulea, chrysantha and mixed hybrids; asters or Michaelmas daisies in variety, Boltonia latifolia and asteroides, Achillea Ptarmica The Pearl, Hemerocallis flava, Thunbergii and Middendorffii; Lathyrus latifolius or everlasting pea, pink and white; Lobelia cardinalis, Anemone Japonica in variety, Helianthus Miss Mollish, multiflorus plenus and Maximiliani; Helenium autumnale superbum, grandiflorum and striatum; Lychnis Viscaria splendens, Convallaria majalis, Lupinus polyphyllus in variety, Aconitum Napellus, Pyrethrum roseum and uliginosum, Veronica longifolia subsessilis, Stokesia cyanea, Physostegia Virginica, Rudbeckia Golden Glow and purpurea, Spiraea Gladstone, aruncus, palmata and Davidi; Penstemon barbatus Torreyi, Liatris pycnostachya, Heuchera sanguinea, Campanula persicifolia in variety, Chrysanthemum maximum, Gypsophila paniculata and Euphorbia corollata.

Added to these should be the following, which cannot be depended upon to winter outdoors in the more northerly states and are better carried over in coldframes and planted out in spring: Digitalis gloxiniaeflora, Campanula Medium, Coreopsis grandiflora and Gaillardia grandiflora.

Added to these should be the various lilliums, of which candidum, speciosum, album and Melpomene, tigrinum, Henryi, auratum and Hansonii are specially valuable for cutting. Then there are the montbretias, hardy if given a little protection in well drained land, and Hyacinthus candicans, the latter being one of the best bulbous subjects for the hardy garden.

THREE FINE DREER PLACES.

James C. Clark met the incoming Riverton train on a perfect October afternoon just before frost. "Mr. Eisele is waiting in the car," he said. It was a pleasure to see that this tremendous worker had at last found a recreation that was congenial; lawn tennis had lasted but a brief season, bicycling a still shorter time, but here was something that would give variety from hard work, something that would come naturally with the addition of Locust Farm and Riverview to the cares of the large plant at Riverton. Mr. Eisele is a clever motorist. "The car knows the way," he said. The run from Riverton to Locust Farm via Palmyra was quickly and pleasantly made.

Locust Farm embraces seventy acres of well drained, fertile land about three miles from Riverton. It was not naturally well drained or fertile. Here lies the secret of its success. The powers that be spent their vacation study-

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Cyclamens.

There is always a good demand for cyclamens at both Thanksgiving and Christmas. For the former holiday it is hardly possible to have the plants heavily flowered, but, provided they have good foliage, they will sell well with even half a dozen blooms open. In order to have them in nice shape for the last of November, plants should now be removed from coldframes and given a bench in a house kept at 50 degrees to 52 degrees at night. Do not use any more heat than that, as it only will mean drawn and spindling plants. A carnation temperature suits them nicely and it is sometimes possible to arrange, in a carnation house, narrow shelves with edges to hold in some coarse sand on which to stand the plants.

The weather has now become sufficiently cool so that the plants will not require any further shading except, perhaps, during a spell of exceptional warmth, in which case a little cheesecloth may be hung to break the direct rays of the sun rather than shade the glass at this late date. Free ventilation they like at all times and, with the pots full of roots, use weak liquid manure twice a week. A little Clay's fertilizer once a fortnight also will be found helpful. Do not allow thrips or green aphids to get a foothold on the plants. Fumigation or spraying with a nicotine extract will keep them clean. Plants which it is desired to hold back for spring flowering can be kept in coldframes for some time yet and later given a house with a minimum of 38 degrees to 42 degrees, in which they will winter perfectly.

Look after the seedlings intended for flowering a year or more hence. Keep the surface soil in the pots or pans frequently loosened. When the plants have made two or three leaves, transplant them into flats containing three inches of light compost. One containing one-half or more of half-rotted leaf-mold, with the addition of some loam and sand, is suitable. These seedlings should have a warmer house than the plants which are about to flower; 58 degrees to 60 degrees at night is about right. The little seedlings should be kept on a shelf well up to the glass. Any who have omitted sowing cyclamens have still time to get nice plants for Christmas, 1912, but the seed should be started at once.

Azaleas.

Azaleas now are arriving. Before potting them, soak the balls thoroughly in a tub of water. The soil not infrequently gets badly dried up in transit, particularly if the cases chance to be stored too near the boilers. If potted dry it will take many waterings to soak the balls, with the likelihood increased of some of the plants dying. After potting stand the plants in a pit or light cellar where they will be just clear of freezing. Coldframes with necessary head room will answer nicely for some weeks. Deutsche Perle is sometimes shading color when received and often is bloomed for Thanksgiving. If wanted this early give the plants 60 degrees to 65 degrees at night in a moist house and spray them freely.

Freesias.

Any freesia bulbs not yet potted should be started right away. It does not pay to keep them any later than this. The results are disappointing, as the spikes on late started bulbs never are at all equal in length or strength to the early planted ones.

At Christmas a few bunches of freesias always are a welcome addition to the stock. In order to flower them this early, the pans, pots or flats should now be placed on a shelf in a house kept about 55 degrees at night. Saucers under the pans or pots are an advantage. Freesias are quite thirsty subjects and, once their receptacles are full of roots, want as much water as chrysanthemums, with weak liquid manure, in addition, every third or fourth watering.

Pansies.

If there should be a shortage of violet plants to fill any of the beds or benches, or if any house is at disposal which is not of the most modern construction, it can be utilized for pansy culture. Pansies want much the same treatment as violets. They like a rich soil and a similar temperature, but can, of course, be planted much more closely. Pansies have come to be a recognized flower in the market now. As midwinter bloomers they do not equal violets, but with lengthening days they give an increasingly heavy pick, which continues long after violets have passed. If midwinter flowers are not especially wanted the house containing them can be run cold, even letting occasional frost in during December and January, and the house kept warmer from the beginning of February onward. Pansies from the open ground should be lifted with a nice ball and planted as soon as possible in benches where they are intended to flower.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

THREE MUM TROUBLES.

I am having some serious mum troubles and turn to The Review for advice.

First: The same larva, or worm, that infests the ear of sweet corn is in many of my mum buds, usually developing as the bud does, so that about the time the bud opens up it goes all around it and eats the petals off at the base. I have sprayed with nicotine extract, but it seems immune.

Second: About two weeks ago a strong north wind brought millions of leaf-hoppers from the fields into town and for two nights they swarmed in countless numbers about every street light, but the second night they seemed to starve to death and were to be found on the pavement under the street light, often an inch or more deep. But in the greenhouses they have thrived, and no ordinary means avails against them. Nicotine they seem to like. Kerosene emulsion has bested them in the lettuce houses, but the mums are three and one-half to six feet high and they always light on the under side of the leaf. My Golden Glows are in full bloom and the others are opening, but the bloom seems to be smaller than it should be.

The insect is about one-quarter inch long, green in color, and jumps and flies, invariably lighting on the under side of the leaf. They are not thrips, for they do not throw up the tail as if to sting.

Third: Many of my Golden Glow blooms are rotting at the heart as they open. This is usually on one side only, but spoils the blooms. They are in solid beds. I hesitate about using hydro-cyanic acid gas against the larvae and leaf-hoppers because the Golden Glow mums are in bloom. I fear I may not have watered just right and that this brought on the rotting in the center of the mums, but the plants seem perfectly healthy, the foliage being heavy and dark green. The blooms have not been wet since opening. H. S. M.

I know of no method to eradicate the worms, save hand-picking at night, with a lantern. This worm is, I think, called the army worm. In any case, it gets busy just around the time the flower is developing and goes merrily on from flower to flower so long as the going is good. It is almost impossible to poison this worm, because it seems to eat nothing much except the embryonic seed pod, which naturally cuts off the petals.

The leaf-hoppers I am not acquainted with, but if they feed on the leaves it would seem to me that Paris green as recommended in the case of F. W. F., in this issue, should be effective.

I am unable to state why the Golden Glow should be rotting at the heart, since H. S. M. says the blooms have not been wet since opening.

Generally speaking, this trouble can be traced to spraying and the water lodging in the bud. The only other reason I can suggest is overfeeding. H. S. M. will be more familiar than I am with what feeding he has been giving his plants. If they have had none of the chemicals, nor any strong dose of natural fertilizers, it would be hard to say why the buds are rotting. Brilliant sunlight will sometimes do it, but we have now advanced to the time of year when this would have no bearing on the case. C. H. T.

MILDEW ON MUMS.

Will you kindly inform me what causes mildew on mum plants, and the remedy for it? H. J. H.

Mildew is often caused by a cold draft striking the plants when the foliage is wet. It is also caused by lack of air and it will often be noticed that mildew comes on the center of the bench, where the air cannot possibly circulate, owing to the crowded condition of the leaves.

One remedy for mildew is to run a little sulphur along the steam pipes and the fumes from the sulphur, when the pipes are turned on at night, will kill the spores.

If H. J. H. has no heat on his houses, he can spray the plants with Fungine in the proportion as recommended by the introducers. This preparation is an extract of liver of sulphur or sulphur of potassium, the difference being that where the liver of sulphur leaves quite considerable marks on the foliage, the other preparation leaves none at all and is consequently more desirable. C. H. T.

WORMS ON MUMS.

Will you please tell me what to use on my mums? Two different kinds of worms, one green, the other green and black striped, are eating the leaves and buds. We have used nicotine, Aphine and arsenate of lead and have smoked the house about every second or third night. Please state what will kill the worms and not injure the plants. F. W. F.

I am at a loss to understand why the arsenate of lead was not effective in the case of worms. It is readily understood that nicotine or Aphine are not of much use unless the worms are sprayed directly with the preparation, which is a difficult thing to do, but the arsenate of lead, which is a poison, if applied in sufficient strength, should certainly have cleaned out the worms.

I would suggest that the best remedy of all is Paris green, but this must be used carefully; just enough to color the water is plenty. A small teaspoonful in four gallons of water is plenty strong enough of most brands. This can be used in a good sprayer and the under side of the leaves sprayed as well as the top side, and thoroughly covered.

Paris green varies so much that what is enough of one brand would be too much of another. The best way would be for F. W. F. to test the strength before using it extensively; then he will not be bothered with burning of the foliage. C. H. T.

CANADIAN GLADIOLI.

When the big annual national exhibition was held at Toronto this year A. Gilchrist, of that city, was awarded a gold medal for the display of gladioli shown in the accompanying illustration, which was said to be the largest and finest collection of the flower ever staged in Canada. Mr. Gilchrist, who also is seen in the picture, is planning to show his stock at Chicago next August, when the American Gladiolus Society holds its exhibition in conjunction with the convention of the S. A. F., but he says he does not hope to capture any sweepstakes in such fast company as will be found at that time.

A feature of the Toronto exhibition was the showing of Gladiolus Panama, sent by Frank Banning, Kinsman, O. Mr. Gilchrist says the box of flowers was four days on the road, including the delay in the custom-house, but that the blooms arrived in fine condition and stood a week in the exhibition. The judges recommended that a certificate of merit be awarded Mr. Banning.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

If Billy Sunday were in Washington now it might be suspected that a revival had swept the ranks of the florists, but the suspicion would hardly be warranted, although they are as godly a set of men as one will find in any line of business. The fact is that the supplications arising from them are for a frost to kill off the outdoor stock and make a decent market for the finer stock, which is at present almost going a-begging for buyers.

Business is really dull, with a bright spot here and there to save it from the utter anathema of the trade. The first frost will give it a good boost. Meantime an occasional wedding helps to create a demand for stock, and this week there are several funerals, notably that of Justice Harlan, who was much beloved and who has many sincere mourners. There are two funerals of firemen, also, who died in the discharge of their duty, and the death of a prominent man in Richmond made a call on Washington florists. Things are decidedly better, on the whole, than they were, but there is room for a lot of improvement yet.

Various Notes.

The S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. had a man through the south last week and he brought back optimistic reports of the condition of trade in that region.

The Washington Florists' Exchange is doing an excellent business and the manager, Albert Schnell, says it keeps him busy filling orders.

The Washington Florists' Club is meeting in the greenhouse back of the F street store of Gude Bros. Co., but there is more or less agitation all the time over securing a permanent hall to meet in. As there is seldom a score of members in attendance and it takes something extraordinary to bring them out, it may be that the club will delay leasing a meeting place—at least as long as Gude Bros. Co. is such an accommodating landlord. Plans are being made already for the annual election and dinner. Of late years this has included the ladies, and it has grown to be a pleasant social event.

The Washington Florists Co. opened its uptown branch at R and Fourteenth streets, northwest, October 16. There was an excellent display of stock from the concern's own greenhouses.

Z. D. Blackistone is an enthusiastic baseball fan and he is taking in the world's series. October 16 he went to Philadelphia to see the game and while there bought some supplies for his store, the reconstruction work on which is proceeding rapidly.

Sidney Holland has reopened his store at Eighteenth and Columbia road. He closed his place during the summer.

George Cook is not down and out, as was reported recently. He suffered blood poisoning in his hand, it is true, as a result of a thorn prick, but he is attending to his business just as if nothing had happened.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. F. Gude celebrated their fifteenth wedding anniversary October 14. The house, of course, was filled with flowers, and there was a large number of friends there, most of whom presented their hosts with tokens in remembrance of the day. F. J. D.

CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

Business is good. Large quantities of stock come in and practically all goes out. The prices realized are satisfactory and will undoubtedly be more so as soon as Jack Frost takes away the outdoor blooms that have helped so materially to keep the market in an easy condition.

Roses tend toward the short side, especially pink, even though the supply of all kinds is large. The various varieties, from American Beauty through the list, are good without exception. Carnations are usually sufficient for calls, but now and then they run short. The white and lighter shades form the majority of the offerings. The red and deep pink are just beginning to arrive.

Large numbers of chrysanthemums are being sold, but the large offerings of outdoor stock hold the price of mums down to within easy reach of the buyers. Among other offerings are Easter lilies, valley and orchids. Home-grown Princess of Wales violets, as well as New York doubles, help round out the line of corsage blooms. The green goods market is amply supplied.

Various Notes.

The Cincinnati Florists' Society will hold a special meeting October 23, at the flower market. The executive and entertainment committees of the flower show will have full reports for consideration of the society. The writer wishes to correct a mistake he inadvertently made in the letter of last week. J. Chas. McCullough was the donor of the silver cup for the rose exhibit at the show.

Mr. Corbett, successor to Graser & Humphreys, Mt. Sterling, Ky., was in town last week, placing orders among the wholesalers.

Miss Lena Olinger, of Aurora, Ill., is visiting Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Olinger at their Bellevue home.

Fred Bruggemann one day last week caught about seventy-five blue-gills at Ellis lake, near Hamilton. He forgot, however, to bring back with him a story of the "big one" that got away.

C. E. Critchell reports a good call for valley and orchids and says his shipping business this fall is the best he ever has had at this season of the year.

Invitations tell that Jos. Maunder, the popular Newport florist, will become a benedict December 6. His good fortune won for him Miss Marie Sebartine. They were childhood sweethearts.

Wm. Murphy and J. M. McCullough Sons Co. are even in the race for the first in the market to offer single violets this year, their first ones arriving the same day.

L. H. Kyrk reports a good call for some splendid My Maryland roses he has been receiving.

William Gardner, manager of P. J. Olinger's plant at New Castle, deserves congratulations for the good, clean stock he is shipping into the market.

Callers include Sydney Wertheimer, New York city; C. E. Ruch and Chas. Knopf, Richmond, Ind.; O. C. Heber-ling, Georgetown, Ky.; Fred Rupp, Lawrenceburg, Ind., and Louis D. Singer, Frankfort, Ky.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

Cool, damp fall weather has set in earlier than usual this year. There have been several frosts and outdoor stock that had not been protected was put out of commission. Cold rains have also affected outdoor flowers. Chrysanthemums have come into the market in great quantities this week and there is a good market for them. Carnations are much better, but the stems are still short. Violets continue to sell well and keep getting better all the time.

Killarneys are excellent, and a few Radiance are coming in. Beauties are fine in all grades and Taft roses are in splendid condition and are among the best sellers. Ward roses are in great favor, but the supply is light and the stems are short. Richmonds are just fair and are not going well, and Kaiserins are quite scarce at this writing.

Valley is not quite up to grade, but is still in great demand. Gardenias are few, but cattleyas are fine and sell well. Dahlias, cosmos, anemones and marigolds are the few garden flowers that are selling this week, but a few good gladioli are still on the market. Primula obconica and potted chrysanthemums have come to fill the great demand for blooming plants, and are sold in advance.

Various Notes.

The Maurer-Haap Co. is doing a thriving business in the seed department, handling bulbs, conifers and box trees for fall planting.

Geo. J. Keller is growing some excellent white chrysanthemums.

Wilson D. Oviatt died suddenly at his home in Highland avenue, October 9. While he had been in poor health for some time, his family did not expect that the end was so near. Mr. Oviatt had been in the growing business for a number of years. Surviving him are his wife and three sons.

Walter Salmon, of Brighton, is sending in Kaiserins and Pink Killarney roses of good quality.

Charles Sharp, of Irondequoit, N. Y., has resumed his duties with H. E. Wilson for the winter.

Mrs. Maud Hallauer is no longer in the employ of H. E. Wilson.

Mrs. Felix Alberts will leave soon for Colorado, where she will spend the winter because of ill health.

J. B. Keller Sons recently received a large importation of fancy cut flower baskets.

Miss Lillian Wheeler has discontinued her vocal studies because of the business rush.

Miss Helen Bishop was on the sick list last week.

E. C. Campbell has restocked his North street store with new palms from his greenhouse for the winter trade.

Salter Bros. have put up their display of bulbs for fall planting.

Fay Kennell, of Gates, N. Y., is cutting a late crop of gladioli which is fine stock.

S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., of Philadelphia, is shipping good cosmos and single dahlias to this city. E. C. A.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

The demand last week was "steady by jerks"; one day business would be dull, while the next it would use up all good stock on short notice. Carnations are coming in more freely and the supply of mums is large enough so that they cut some figure now. The demand for Beauties was brisk. In all other lines the supply is fully equal to all demands.

Various Notes.

A pretty wedding took place October 14 at the Calvary Presbyterian church, when Miss Alice M. Currie, daughter of James Currie, was united in wedlock to Harold W. Drew, of Kenosha, Wis. After a short wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Drew will make their home in Kenosha.

The Florists' Bowling League rolled its second game of the season last week at Haas' place, Eleventh and Prairie streets. The following officers for this season were elected: Captain, Roy Currie; secretary and treasurer, Walter Halliday. Quite a few new members were on hand.

Fred C. Kesting, of West Bend, Wis., was a caller last week.

The executive committee of the fall flower show was in session till midnight October 12. Plans as submitted by the A. F. Kellner Co. were thought of favorably by all present and accepted. C. Dallwig reported that more advertising would be done than last year, especially in the line of large bill posters. From present indications it is going to be the biggest show ever held here.

A visit to the H. W. Koerner place, in Wauwatosa, October 15, was quite a treat, for it does one good to get away from the everyday run of stock, especially when the stock he sees is worth while. Besides the decorative, show, cactus and century dahlias, Mr. Koerner has a collection of about 150 seedling varieties, which include some fine specimens which will be disseminated in due time. A giant white, averaging four inches in diameter, of the century type, is named Snow Storm, and is worth while considering. Another, tan in color, attains five inches in diameter and is called Autumn Glory. It is a fine specimen of the show varieties. Still another, light crimson in color, as yet unnamed, looks good. These will be put on the market in 1912. Besides dahlias, Mr. Koerner grows a large batch of gladioli, which in the past have carried off first honors more than once.

One seedling, formerly called Venus, has been changed to Early Bird, because it is fully three weeks earlier than any other variety. American Giant, which is of a deep wine color, will be disseminated in 1912. American Wonder, similar to the original America in color and form, but larger in size, will hold its own almost anywhere. Further, he has some good seedlings of hardy phlox; a dark red, which has been named Mrs. Koerner, being a beauty. Last, but not least, he has added the peony to his stock.

The American Beauties from the Holton & Hunkel Co. greenhouses are of extra fine quality, and if this holds out till the fall shows, some first prizes should certainly be landed by them.

E. O.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business among the retailers has not been so good. They say they have some funeral work almost daily, but other kinds of work as yet make but little showing. The west end florists are all making pretty displays of cosmos, chrysanthemums and dahlias in their windows.

The wholesalers say that, while they have not been able to clean up their consignments, they have disposed of considerable quantities of stock daily. Chrysanthemums are coming in more freely; still, there are not any too many of the first-class grades. Beauties are plentiful in all grades, but the bulk of them are of poor quality and sell at low prices. Carnations are in splendid crop and sell well. There are a great many Killarney, Richmond and Maryland roses on the market; these, too, sell below the usual average prices at this season. Other flowers, such as lilies, valley, cosmos and dahlias, are most plentiful. Some really cold weather is all that is needed to tone up the market from now on.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its monthly meeting Thursday afternoon, October 12, in its meeting rooms in Odd Fellows' hall. The attendance was not large, only twenty members being present. President-elect Windler, who arrived early, was duly installed in office by ex-President Fillmore and then opened the meeting and proceeded like a veteran.

A letter was read from the San Francisco florists, saying that they were about to organize a club and would like to receive a copy of the St. Louis club's by-laws. The secretary was instructed to send a copy.

Chas. C. Young, J. E. Muldoon and George Madsen were elected as members of the club.

It was decided to have at least two essays read at each of the meetings in the future and the trustees were ordered to make arrangements for them.

It was also decided to entertain, with a banquet at one of the leading hotels, all visiting florists who will be in the city during the week of the flower show, the banquet to take place after the next meeting of the club, November 9.

The chair called upon David Geddes for an account of the recent Chicago trip. His narrative was quite interesting, especially in its references to the funny side of the trip.

The question box brought out quite a big discussion on several important questions, which made things quite interesting in the closing hour.

Before adjournment, President Windler made a forcible talk, saying, among other things, that he was proud to be president of the club, and that, with the assistance of the members, he would do all in his power to uphold the high standard the club has maintained during the last twenty-five years.

Various Notes.

E. Fancourt, of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, and R. Karlstrom, representing W. A. Manda, of South Orange, N. J., called on the trade last week, with good success.

Grimm & Gorly are out this week with their large White automobile delivery car. Mr. Gorly says they have been exceedingly busy of late with large funeral designs and good transient trade.

The executive committee of the St. Louis Horticultural Society will meet this week to make arrangements for the fall flower show, which will be held in the Coliseum building November 7 to 11.

M. F. Widmer, who has places in Highland, Ill., and East St. Louis, Ill., says that trade has been fairly good so far this season.

M. M. Ayres is making a fine display of fancy cut chrysanthemums and orchids. This firm also has a handsome new delivery wagon.

Wm. Schray & Sons will have a grand lot of cut and pot chrysanthemums this year, which will be ready for the flower show next month.

Young & Sons Co., the St. Louis Seed Co. and the Schisler-Corneli Seed Co. say that business in bulbs has been good of late and they expect this to be one of their best seasons.

Peter Bisset, of Washington, D. C., was here last week in conference with Park Commissioner Davis regarding the best trees for planting in parks.

Max J. Rotter has removed his store from North Broadway to Fifteenth and North Market streets, where he has a large store and a good location. He will install a new McCray refrigerator.

The Ladies' Home Circle will hold a social meeting on the evening of October 17, which the men are invited to attend. Mrs. Theo. Miller has charge of the affair.

Miss Annie Bova, sister of D. Bova, of the Red Bud Floral Co., was married October 15. Quite a number of invitations were received by the local trade.

On visiting the greenhouse plant of Alfred and Hugo Werner, at Clayton, we found them busy glazing a new house, which, they say, will give them, in all, 32,000 feet of glass, under which roses, carnations and callas are grown. George Schmidt, their rose grower, has the rose stock in fine shape. Richmond, Killarney and White Killarney are grown here. The carnations grown are Beacon, Enchantress and White Enchantress. These, too, are in fine condition. They are having some trouble with stem-rot. They say they will hardly be in crop to make an exhibition at the fall flower show.

The Alexander Floral Co., which is near the Werner establishment, was next visited, and Mr. Wunderli and a force of men were found busy completing a new house. Their large rose house is in splendid shape for a good cut this winter. Mr. Wunderli says the new house will be used for pot roses only. They will also grow Paper Whites and violets for the market this year and they say that more glass will be added next summer. J. J. B.

BOSTON.

The Market.

We have enjoyed ten days of magnificent, clear, fall weather, in marked contrast to what we experienced for six weeks previously. Flowers, as a consequence, are much more abundant and prices have been lowered all around. Chrysanthemums are now seen on every hand and in a few days more will, to a large extent, demoralize market conditions as they do annually. Those arriving now include Pacific Supreme, Glory of Pacific, Monrovia, Haliday, Polly Rose, G. S. Kalb, Early Snow and the ever present Golden Glow. Prices have dropped and only a few extra good flowers now make $2 per dozen. Roses steadily improve in quality and so far are selling well. Arrivals are heavier than a week ago. Some good Red Killarney is now seen, in addition to the pink and white forms. Mrs. Aaron Ward and Lady Hillingdon are prime favorites. Among red roses, some excellent Rhea Reid are seen, in addition to Richmond.

Carnations are arriving in much greater numbers and have slumped in price; $1 to $3 are now outside prices. The quality steadily grows better. Double as well as single violets are now at hand. Rarely have violets been more abundant or of better quality this early in the season. Sweet peas are coming from several growers, averaging 50 cents per hundred. Of lilies there is an adequate supply of both longiflorum and speciosum. Lily of the valley continues in oversupply. Some nice antirrhinum comes from several growers. The pink shades are in the best request. Dahlias are nearly done, but cosmos is quite abundant. Tuberoses are in little demand, as is candy-tuft. Asters are still seen, but of poor quality.

Among choicer cut flowers, gardenias are still scarce and high in price. Quite a few cypripediums are included in orchid shipments. Cattleya labiata is lower in price, as all growers of this popular fall orchid are now cutting it. Oncidiums are abundant. The demand for adiantum and asparagus shows little change and there is not so much activity in the plant trade as growers would like to see.

Club Meeting.

There was an attendance of 175 at the club meeting October 17, four new members being elected at the session. Papers on bulbs for forcing, bedding and naturalizing were read by Messrs. Patterson, Cameron and Duguid and were followed by interesting discussions participated in by W. N. Craig, John and Kenneth Finlayson and others, including E. O. Orpet, who is here from Lake Forest, Ill. J. K. M. L. Farquhar reported for the committee on Amherst Agricultural College. A large number joined the landscape classes.

Reports of merit were awarded White Wonder and Gloriosa carnations exhibited by S. J. Goddard, who also showed White Perfection and Pink Delight. Wm. Downs was awarded a report of superior merit for Celosia Thompsoni pyramidalis. From R. & J. Farquhar & Co. came Viola cornuta purpurea, awarded a report of superior merit. The same exhibitor also showed Lady Hillingdon, Radiance, Prince de Bulgarie and Mrs. Ward roses. W. W. Edgar Co. was awarded a report of merit for Chrysanthemum Early Snow, also showing other varieties. James Wheeler exhibited Enchantress carnation.

Various Notes.

Frank J. Dolansky, of Lynn, has returned from a ten weeks' visit to Europe on the President Grant's last trip, most of his time being spent in Germany, which he found drought-stricken, there being only one shower while he was there. Mr. Dolansky recently entered the commercial orchid field and now has three houses of cattleyas, Trianae predominating. His labiatae are not yet opening. One house of poinsettias in pans is in grand shape, as is a house of gardenias. He also has five houses of roses and three of carnations, all in first-class shape. He is not growing sweet peas this season.

John McFarland, of North Easton, has a nice house of poinsettias for Christmas, in pans and pots; also some in benches. A large house of chrysanthemums is chiefly Eaton and Bonnaffon for late cutting, to be followed by mignonette, now in pots. One house is devoted to gardenias, of which a few flowers are still being cut. There is a fine bench also of Cypripedium insigne, bristling with spikes.

The annual meeting of the Boston Co-operative Flower Market will be held October 23 and that of the Boston Flower Exchange October 28.

Andrew Christensen, of Stoneham, is picking from 3,000 to 4,500 carnations daily. He grows more Queen than any other sort and finds it the most profitable of all. Other favorites are Fenn, Beacon, White Enchantress and Enchantress. None of the newer introductions has as yet displaced these sorts in Mr. Christensen's affections.

October 10 Welch Bros. rounded out thirty-four years as wholesalers in Boston. They were the pioneers in New England and their success has been earned by honest dealing and strict attention to business. October business has so far been excellent.

John Barr, of Natick, has dropped the culture of both cyclamens and hydrangeas, for which he has been noted since going into business. He now grows nothing but carnations and purposes sticking to them. All his houses are in grand crop. His new variegated seedling, Mrs. B. P. Cheney, is in splendid shape.

The Boston Flower Growers Co. has fitted up a case for the display of sundries of all kinds at the back of the Boston Flower Exchange market, where H. M. Robinson & Co. formerly had a stand. They purpose dealing in all kinds of miscellaneous florists' supplies.

W. B. Goodenow, of Stoughton, and L. E. Small, of Tewksbury, are the first in the local markets with excellent double violets. A. F. Anderson and Mishawum Greenhouses are consigning splendid Princess of Wales to J. W. Cohen.

From S. J. Reuter, Westerly, R. I., and W. W. Edgar Co., good flowers of the pure white chrysanthemum, Early Snow, are coming in. This variety takes well.

Noted in N. R. Comley's window October 14 were some fine sprays of Lapageria alba and rosea. Fall business here is good.

Mrs. E. M. Gill, octogenarian florist of Medford, made one of the most charming designs for the funeral of the late General Lawrence. It was in the form of an arch forty inches high, with a scroll bearing the words, "From Employees."

W. H. Elliott is cutting a grand lot of Rhea Reid, with long stems. This is superior to Richmond as grown by Mr. Elliott. The new pink, Christy Miller, is in good shape, while the standard sorts are fine. Mrs. Aaron Ward is being more heavily grown than ever this season.

F. H. Houghton's new store on Park street is now in good running order. Park street will soon become a veritable florists' row. It now contains three wholesale markets and three up-to-date retail stores.

Yellow marguerites have made their appearance again in the market, D. J. Horrigan, of East Foxboro, and J. W. Simpson, of Woburn, being the first shippers.

Penn, on Bromfield street, has one window entirely devoted to mums in pots and on long stems in vases. In another window, violets are once more a great specialty, but cattleyas and all other choice flowers are well represented. The enlarged store has already brought an excellent increase in business.

Robert Montgomery, of Natick, has the best roses seen this season. His varieties are the Killarneys, Richmond and Mrs. Aaron Ward. A new pink sport of Killarney is proving unsatisfactory with him, proving a weak grower.

Aubrey A. Pembroke, who is one of the largest local growers of high grade carnations, is in the market with sweet peas, including Mont Blanc, Florence Denzer and Watchung. He has a 400-foot house devoted to these for early winter blooming.

Preliminary schedules for the mid-winter and spring shows of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society in 1912 are ready and may be had from the secretary, at 300 Massachusetts avenue.

Local bulb dealers report an active demand. There is a specially strong call for late tulips and narcissi, while bedding hyacinths have moved well.

Arnold & Petros, on Boylston street, are devoting their big show window to chrysanthemums, using autumn foliage with them to good advantage. They have an excellent line of pot plants and are well pleased with business up to date.

The big fruit show to be held in Horticultural hall October 23 to 28 under the auspices of the Boston Chamber of Commerce promises to be the finest ever seen in the east. Apples are this year of superb quality in New England and growers from Washington who are now here state that they have seen much finer fruit here than in the noted Wenatchee valley.

H. P. Hodgkins, for five years with W. W. Rawson Co., and for six years with R. & J. Farquhar & Co., is now New England representative of the Moore Seed Co., of Philadelphia.

H. M. Robinson & Co. are receiving fine roses of all the leading sorts from their growers, Beauties, Aaron Wards and Lady Hillingdons being noteworthy. They now have a fine lot of cattleyas and other orchids. Business in their sundries department is brisk. W. N. Craig.

GLEN COVE, L. I.

The annual dahlia show of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held October 11 and brought out a fine display. The silver cup donated by Henry A. Dreer for best collection was won by James Duthie, gardener to Mrs. E. M. Townsend. Other leading exhibitors and prize winners were: Mrs. W. J. Bucknall, Geo. Barton, gardener; Mrs. Benj. Stein, James Kirby, P. D. Handy, J. O'Brien, gardener; Emmett Queen, Geo. Ashworth, gardener; Mrs. D. F. Bush, Ernest Westlake, gardener; Mrs. H. L. Pratt, H. Gaut, gardener; Mrs. F. S. Smithers, V. Cleres, gardener; J. Ingram, Mrs. D. F. Bush, E. A. Reidenbach and Capt. Delemay, R. Marshall, gardener. Among the honorable mentions was one to Julius Roehrs Co., for collection of orchids.

At the regular monthly meeting of the society John McMillan and Guiseppe Marmorale were elected to active membership and Mrs. F. N. Doubleday, of Locust Valley, to honorary membership. J. W. Everitt, James McDonald and Paul Reul were appointed judges of the monthly exhibits, which were this time from Jos. Robinson and F. Petrocia. James Duthie was presented with the Dreer and Stein silver cups. Julius Roehrs offered $10 for competition at the fall show and a letter was read from Vaughan's Seed Store offering a prize for the fall show. The donors were accorded a vote of thanks. The society's prize in November will be for chrysanthemums, twelve white, pink and yellow.

OBITUARY.

W. D. Oviatt.

Wilson D. Oviatt, for many years a grower at Rochester, N. Y., died suddenly at his home on Highland avenue in that city, October 9. Mr. Oviatt had been in poor health for some time, but his family did not expect that the end would come so soon. He is survived by his wife and three sons.

William Spatz.

William Spatz, one of the oldest retired florists of Brooklyn, N. Y., who for the last twelve years had been an inmate of the German Evangelical Home for the Aged, on Moffat street, died in that institution October 6, from heart trouble, brought on by old age. He was born in Germany eighty-five years ago, and was forty odd years a resident of Astoria before settling in Brooklyn many years ago. He is survived by a grandson, William Spatz, and a granddaughter, Mrs. Cecilia Muldoon.

John Fraser.

John Fraser, of East Quogue, N. Y., committed suicide October 8, by shooting himself in the head. Death was instantaneous. He was 60 years of age. He was a professional florist and landscape gardener and did work for the wealthy summer residents. His wife died three years ago and he had been exceedingly despondent of late. He leaves several grown children.

NEWS, NOTES, AND COMMENTS

READERS ARE INVITED TO CONTRIBUTE ITEMS FOR THIS DEPARTMENT.

Iola, Kan.—Mr. Ecklen has erected a greenhouse on the Drake place and will grow flowers for the market.

Waltham, Mass.—M. F. Ruane, of 121 Moody street, was recently disabled for a time by a broken leg, caused by a fall.

Ishpeming, Mich.—Trebilecock Bros., of the Ishpeming Greenhouses, have almost completed the large addition to their range.

Springfield, O.—Mrs. Nettie Jacobs and Mrs. Bessie Ackerman-Rightmire have opened a flower store at 15 South Mountain avenue.

West Somerville, Mass.—George T. Rand is slowly regaining his health after his recent severe illness and has reopened his store on Highland avenue.

Denver, Colo.—Mrs. L. A. Dunsmore says that she looks for a fair business this season, as demand is increasing steadily. Stock has been below the average in quality during the summer.

Washington, Kan.—Mrs. M. L. Penwell says that trade has been excellent right along, but that of late it has been especially good because of a heavy run of funeral work. Stock looks well and her best season is in prospect.

Hudson, N. Y.—R. W. Allen has not yet received any satisfaction from the cement company which is burying his plant by slow degrees. It has become almost an impossibility to grow flowering stock, for which Mr. Allen has had an excellent reputation.

New Castle, Ind.—P. J. Lynch has moved the offices of the Heller Bros. Co. from South Main street to a building at the old New Castle canning plant, in the west part of the city, where a big greenhouse range will be doing business in the near future.

Nevada, Mo.—F. R. Roe, of the Volcano Greenhouses, has just completed the erection of an addition containing about 26,000 square feet of glass. He now has a total of 45,000 square feet of glass in his range. His principal crops are roses, carnations, mums and violets, besides greens for the wholesale trade. At present he is at Palisades, Colo., where he has a commercial orchard of peach, apple and pear trees.

Davenport, Ia.—Ewoldt Bros., of the Floral Hill Gardens, are erecting another greenhouse. It is of Moninger construction and will cover 3,000 square feet of ground. The firm has also made many other improvements during the summer, including the installation of a new water plant and heating system, besides the construction of a brick smokestack, concrete walls and floors and a room for the storage of a large quantity of coal.

Rockford, Ill.—W. H. Burrows is using Foley material for a new greenhouse rapidly nearing completion.

Marion, Ind.—Material is being delivered for the construction of two additional greenhouses for Joseph Shane and work will be commenced at once.

Wilmington, Del.—H. P. Potter recently received a shipment of 27,250 tulip, hyacinth and narcissus bulbs from Holland.

Mitchell, S. D.—Wm. Dethlefs, 731 South Montana street, has been in business only a little more than a year, but already has a good trade. He has just issued a catalogue.

Rice Lake, Wis.—C. A. Hannemann has contracted with the park board to remove the plants in the city park, take care of them during the winter, and set them out next spring.

Wyomissing, Pa.—Heck Bros. have added a new carnation house and installed a boiler capable of heating the entire place. Chrysanthemums are their leading specialty and are in fine condition.

Oyster Bay, N. Y.—John Ingram is the first florist on the island to go into orchid growing extensively. He has a big house of cattleyas in fine condition and is planning to devote another house to this line next season. The demand is highly encouraging.

Freeport, Ill.—Business in cut flowers is opening favorably considering that all outdoor stock is yet unharmed by frost and in full bloom. The Freeport Floral Co. force is busily engaged in the construction of a violet house. Everything points to a promising season with the company.

Racine, Wis.—J. Bourgaize has opened a downtown store in charge of Mrs. Fulsinger, from Chicago. Holton & Hunkel Co., Milwaukee, sent a horseshoe of flowers for the opening. About ten years ago Mr. Bourgaize started in business, growing lettuce, radishes, plants, etc., distributing them in a hand basket, but now his business has increased so that a store is necessary.

Hartford, Conn.—Quite a party of dahlia enthusiasts from this city recently paid a visit to the fields of John H. Slocombe at New Haven. Mr. Slocombe has over 300 named varieties and countless unnamed sorts which he has raised from seed. He also devotes about half an acre to gladioli, a large field to cosmos and has five large houses of English violets. Mr. Slocombe's success with dahlias was particularly notable this season because most growers in this vicinity experienced a lack of blooms.

Batavia, Ill.—The greenhouses of the late George H. Serviss are to be offered at public auction October 28, to close the estate.

Troy, O.—L. A. Thomas had a conspicuous and handsome exhibit of flowers at the Miami county fair. His display occupied the center of the art hall.

Marshfield, Wis.—R. I. Macklin has so far recovered from his recent illness as to be able to leave the hospital, and while recuperating he spent two weeks with his brother at Stevens Point.

Mt. Kisco, N. Y.—The Northern Westchester County Horticultural and Agricultural Society will hold its ninth annual exhibition at Whitlock's garage November 3 to 5. H. A. Spavins is to be manager.

Schenectady, N. Y.—Wm. E. John is erecting a new greenhouse, 24 x 60, and expects to complete it about October 15. It is an addition to a wooden house, 10 x 40. Lord & Burnham Co. furnished the material.

Greenwich, Conn.—Alexander Mead & Son removed October 6 to a new store that is one of the finest in town. It is large, light and airy and specially fitted up for the flower business. A new display refrigerator is one of the features.

White Marsh, Md.—Richard Vincent, Jr., will deliver his illustrated lecture on "The Bulb Fields of Holland" at the fall exhibition of the St. Louis Horticultural Society, which will be held November 6 to 11.

Dracut, Mass.—C. S. Finacom reports a successful season, with the single exception of dahlias, which were late in blooming and then frozen out September 14. Mr. Finacom is erecting a new greenhouse this fall, to be used for geraniums.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Chas. F. Edgar, for the last two years foreman at R. M. Rebstock's, 614 Main street, has resigned that position and will go to Philadelphia, Pa., for a short stay. Mr. Edgar made many friends in this city and was well liked by all with whom he had dealings.

Foughkeepsie, N. Y.—The Saltford Flower Shop anticipates a banner season, Vassar College having opened with a full list of fair maidens who insist on having the best in flowers. Geo. Saltford takes personal care of the orchids and has a fine lot of Dendrobium formosum, imported in July, many of which are now flowering, showing how responsive they are to careful treatment. The orchid houses and sheds have been reconstructed with cement walls and floors, with a storage cellar, 75x150 feet, for bulbs.

Upton, Mass.—L. C. Fisk, formerly proprietor of the Oak Grove Conservatories, reports that he is out of the florists' business.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.
Officers for 1911: President, George Asmus, Chicago; vice-president, R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.
Officers for 1912: President, R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; vice-president, August Poehlmann, Morton Grove, Ill.; secretary, John Young, Bedford Hills, N. Y.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.
Annual convention, Chicago, Ill., August 20 to 23, 1912.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

PRESIDENT-ELECT VINCENT, of the S. A. F., is preparing to make a western trip next month, at the time of the big fall shows.

If one is in the business, one's letter-heads should show it. Many of the best firms refuse trade prices to those who do not use printed letter-heads.

PACKING is one of the details that the average plant shipper slights. Really good packing is scarcely less important than really good stock in building up a wholesale plant trade.

THOSE Milwaukee florists have the flower show fever and plan to outdo, next month, their best previous efforts. St. Louis and Cincinnati also are preparing for big shows.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

THE number of women who are engaging in the florists' business is so large as to attract more than passing comment. Especially in the smaller towns the trade is attracting many hundreds of self-reliant women.

SWEET PEA SOCIETY.

The executive committee of the National Sweet Pea Society of America will meet at the Parker House, Boston, Saturday, November 4, at 12 o'clock.

W. Sim, Pres.

H. A. Bunyard, Sec'y.

ONE INSERTION DID IT.

When an advertiser offers seasonable stock it is quite the regular thing for the response to be prompt, and where the quantity of stock is limited it quickly is converted into cash:

Kindly discontinue our violet advertisement, as we have disposed of the stock. We thank you for the quick results this advertisement brought.—Virginia Nursery Co., Purcellville, Va., September 30, 1911.

This was a classified advertisement of four lines, costing 40 cents per week. It appeared in the issues of September 21 and 28, but as the cancellation was dated September 30, it seems probable that the first insertion cleaned up the surplus. However, since the plants were offered at "$5 per hundred, cash with order," probably the advertiser doesn't regret the 40 cents he need not have spent. By the way, haven't you some surplus stock you would give 40 cents to turn into cash?

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

At Detroit the arrangement has been made for the joint exhibition of this society with the American Carnation Society, in January, 1912, to be held in Wayne pavilion, adjoining the Michigan Central station, where trains from New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Washington, Cincinnati, Chicago, etc., come in. The hall is spacious, so arranged that ventilation is readily adjusted.

The effort will be to make this a great popular show. The trolley lines come to the corner from all the surrounding country. The effort is being made to put out a prize list of value. The American Rose Society asks of all its friends support for the prize list.

The annual bulletin for 1912 will be mailed by Christmas and contains much matter of interest.

We would be glad to hear from any and all intending exhibitors at an early date. The Detroit people will do all possible to aid the exhibition.

Benj. Hammond, Sec'y.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Business has continued to show seasonable improvement and the consensus of opinion is that it now is about on a par with the same date last year. Those who have larger glass area this year say the present volume of sales is enough ahead of a year ago to make up for the increased production. It seems doubtful, however, if prices on the whole are as good as they were in the third week of October, 1910. There is considerably more stock in the market this season and the wholesalers appear to be practically holding the prices down against themselves; the quantities of stock are so great that quantity sales are necessary to effect a clearance and, where prices are held at an attractive level for the quantity buyer, the smaller buyer also gets his supplies at reasonable figures.

The present week has seen a change in the rose situation in that supplies of the shorter lengths have decreased much more sharply than have receipts of the longer grades. At the same time there appears to have been an increase in the demand for short roses and it has become impossible to fill all orders, though only a few weeks ago shorts were going begging. The stiffening in price of short roses also has stiffened the prices of the higher grade. It is seldom that better roses, on the whole, have been seen in this market and this season there is a larger list of varieties than usual. Beauties of the medium and long grades are again in large supply.

Chrysanthemums have come in heavily since last report. A complete line now is ready. The buyer can get anything he wants, at from $5 per hundred to $4 per dozen, quality being in proportion to price. For the buyer who can use them, the finer grades offer better values than do the rubbishy stock which is now coming in considerable quantity from growers who make mums merely a catch crop and do not bother to grow them well. The demand has been such that all really good stock has been taken up.

Carnations have shortened in supply, but not sufficiently to produce any scarcity. The stock is of good average quality. Violets are being received in larger quantities and of better quality. Last week's sales returned the best average prices of the season to date. Valley is in good supply, but the demand is erratic, so that some days there is a surplus and other days a shortage.

If You Are in the Market For Good

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

WE WANT TO HEAR FROM YOU

We do not aim to handle the largest quantity of Mums (though our supply is very large)—our aim is to get our stock from specialists, thereby securing nice, clean, well grown flowers in every size. Mid-season sorts are ready, and you may be sure ours are good.

ORCHIDS

There are no finer Cattleyas anywhere—large, perfect, highly colored flowers. Feature them in your corsage work.

VIOLETS

Fine—you'll agree you never saw better in October. Push them now, while the weather is so your customers can wear them on the street.

BEAUTIES

Our stock always is fine.

Now on with a heavy crop of long and medium Beauties, stock that will meet with the approval of the most critical buyers—nothing whatever the matter with them. Large heads, splendid color, strong stems, perfect foliage.

KILLARNEYS

Pink and White—Splendid stock.

Buyers who know the market recognize that, length for length, our Killarneys carry the finest heads of any roses to be had. That's why we never have too many, though we always have enough to take care of all shipping orders.

CARNATIONS

Try these—you will like them.

Year after year we handle the largest lot of strictly high grade Carnations that is to be found on this market. The condition of the stock now arriving in quantity shows we shall be better supplied this season than ever.

Order VALLEY of Us

If you have had any difficulty getting your Valley orders filled, it was because you didn't order of us. Always plenty of Fancy Valley here.

MEXICAN IVY

Try this green and you never will be without it. Ours is good.

ADIANTUM

This is one of our specialties—fine stock always on hand.

Here you get the best Fancy Ferns, all the Smilax and Asparagus strings you want; Sprenger and Plumosa bunches, and Galax.

HEADQUARTERS FOR EASTER LILIES

We always have Easter Lilies, every day in the year, and the finest there are—home grown—they go out in perfect condition.

FLORISTS' REVIEW

When Writing Advertisers

Cattleyas are moving well, but there is no shortage. Prices vary considerably, for there is much difference in quality. Some of the stock now coming in is superb. Oncidiums are more abundant than ever before. Gardenias are scarce. Quite a few gladioli are seen, standing around, for they do not move. Dahlias still arrive, for there has been no frost. The green goods market is quiet. Plenty of everything.

Various Notes.

Word has arrived from Nashville that Thomas H. Joy, of the Joy Floral Co., and Miss Monica McGinnis were quietly married October 15 and are on their way to Chicago, due here the latter part of the present week.

October is birthday month at Winterson's Seed Store. The King of Ireland was 39 October 16. L. H. Winterson was 37 October 10, but there was no celebration, that being postponed until Mrs. Winterson recovers from an illness.

Frank Garland, Des Plaines, is boxing over 175,000 French and Dutch bulbs. He has received word that 9,000 longiflorum lilies will be delivered in a day or two.

Willie Abrahamson, who has been with the Chicago Flower Growers' Co. since his return from Denver, has joined the force of Percy Jones, which now numbers seven.

Steve Miner, who was with Kennicott Bros. Co. for many years, but for the last five years has been working for Cook county, says he is planning to open a retail store on the northwest side.

A. Lange says that with him September was considerably ahead of last year and he considers the retail business good.

At Vaughan & Sperry's, A. L. Vaughan says the mail October 16 was the heaviest received since Decoration day.

The quarterly meeting of the Horticultural Society of Chicago was held at the Art Institute October 13.

E. E. Pieser says October 14 made the biggest day's sales since May 29.

Bassett & Washburn began to cut Halliday chrysanthemums October 17.

A. F. Longren has returned from a trip through Georgia and Alabama in the interest of E. H. Hunt and says it was the best trip he ever has made.

Louis Vissius is buying stock for the Seekins store at Duluth and says he now owns the establishment, retaining Mr. Seekins as manager. He is one of the firm that ran the flower store in the Masonic Temple, the closing of which created a breeze that now appears to be forgotten.

William Graff is again with Friedman in the Congress hotel. It is understood he will have charge of the new store Friedman is to open about November 1 under the name of the Western Floral Co.

George Reinberg and Peter Reinberg bought over 1,200 boxes of glass, besides using quantities on hand, in repairing the breakage by storm. George Reinberg is leaving quite a piece to be rebuilt next spring.

Chicago Flower Growers' Association will have a stockholders' meeting October 20 to vote on the proposition to increase the number of directors.

Charles Erne has returned from a trip to Terre Haute, occasioned by the death of his mother-in-law.

Adam Heitz has his place in good shape. His carnations and roses look fine and his mums are also good. The Heitz establishment is directly opposite the main entrance of St. Louis cemetery, the largest Catholic burying-ground here. He grows a good many mums for All Saints' day. Some 1,500 plants grown with from three to six flowers give a good supply of the middle priced cut flowers which are in big demand for the occasion. About 750 potted mum plants are in good shape and will be disposed of readily on that day.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Frost is needed. The Indian summer that prevails just suits the plantmen, but not so the cut flower market. The supply grows larger daily—so fast that the excellent demand is unable to keep pace. Prices rule low. Dahlias have begun to wane, although they are still an important factor. Quality in dahlias tells as much as in other flowers. The quality stock only is bringing satisfactory returns.

The chrysanthemums have completely changed in one week. A week ago these flowers were wanted for orders. Now the orders are wanted for the flowers. The market is not overstocked with chrysanthemums, but demand and supply are pretty evenly balanced, with prices unchanged. Gloria, pale pink; Mrs. Henry Robinson, white; Donatello, yellow; Robert Halliday, Pacific Supreme, pink, and Cremona, yellow, have been added to the list, for most of the varieties named in the last fortnight are strongly represented. Roses are extremely plentiful. White was the exception for a few days, but that is changed now. White roses are nearly as plentiful as any other color. Beauties are about the best value on the rose list today. I mean by this the long-stemmed Beauties. The lower grades are not plentiful. Carnations are fairly good stock, except red. The Wards and a few Pink Delight touch $4 per hundred. Valley is in brisk demand. There is lots of it. Double violets are worth while now and singles are excellent considering the temperature. Cattleyas move pretty well at the moderate prices asked. There are some nice Dendrobium formosum. Pansies have come. Cosmos is abundant. The other flowers merit no special comment.

Berger Bros.' New Place.

John Berger opened the door of the large double store at 140 and 142 North Thirteenth street. A glance showed that his firm's new home had been wisely chosen. Room, light, air—well, all excellent. The store is on the street level. It is about 160 feet deep by twenty-five feet wide. There is a small street on one side and another in the rear. The former affords plenty of light through tall windows. A door opens on the rear street, affording excellent facilities for receiving and shipping stock. The ceiling is twelve feet high. This insures good ventilation, so important to the success of a cut flower house. An elevator in the rear gives easy access to the basement, to be used for storage. This basement corresponds in size with the floor above. Berger Bros. expect to open their new quarters for business Monday morning, October 30.

The D. & C. Co.

Edward Parker, manager for the Dingee & Conard Co., has put into successful operation a modification of the western plan for early summer propagation of roses to insure an early fall stock of young plants. In former years, Mr. Parker says, the company has never been able to keep pace with the fall demand for young rose plants that accompanies the bulb orders. The stock is so closely cleaned up in the spring and early summer that there is nothing left to offer in the early fall, dependence being placed on summer propagation. These plants are not large enough to give satisfaction at this season of the year. The western method is to plant the roses in February and grow them hard. This word "hard" means all that you can possibly attach to it. Briefly expressed, Mr. Parker says, the only air that reaches the houses during the hot May days comes from the door; the ventilators are kept tightly closed. The cuttings taken June 1 are started in a hotbed outdoors. This bed is made with fresh

MRS. TAFT.

The Great 12

An Unprecedented Array of Choice Roses

Never before in the history of the commercial cut flower business have we been able to offer so much variety in Roses as we are doing at present. The three or four standard sorts of a few years ago have been supplemented by eight or nine new ones that are good all the year round, and commercially possible from the grower's "bread-and-butter" standpoint, so that the retailer has now no cause to complain of lack of variety to offer his customers.

The "Great 12" we are offering are: Prince de Bulgarie (Mrs. Taft), Mrs. Aaron Ward, American Beauty, Pink Killarney, Double Pink Killarney, White Killarney, Richmond, Lady Hillingdon, Maryland, Melody, Perle des Jardins, Kaiserin.

horse manure, tramped and covered with sand. The cuttings are subjected to pretty much the same treatment as the parent stock. They root, Mr. Parker assures me, in eighteen days, almost without loss. Such stock he considers hardly up to the eastern standard. The idea is, however, excellent; it is being put into active operation this season at the establishment of the Dingee & Conard Co., where Mr. Parker has a fine stock of young plants that have been grown with more air than under the plan described and they show the benefit of it.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Several large funerals, a few small receptions and teas, and a general improvement in demand for cut flowers made a busier week for the florists than has been the case since the early part of June. There has also been a perceptible improvement in the quality and quantity of stock reaching the market, although carnations are still short. Chrysanthemums, however, are coming in better, and roses are plentiful and good. Mums will hold the center of the stage for the next six weeks and it is reported that all the local growers have good stocks. The blooms last week brought from $2.50 to $5 per dozen, retail.

Various Notes.

F. P. Barker and wife, of Warren, have recently returned from a vacation trip to Kearsarge, N. H.

S. Peterson, of East Providence, is installing a large new boiler in his range of greenhouses.

Thomas Kennedy, formerly manager of the Riverside Greenhouses, in Bridgeton, has leased a store in the Ward block at Pascoag, where he will open a retail flower store.

James B. Canning reports an unusually heavy business during the last month.

T. J. Johnston & Co. have had several good decorations and weddings recently. Their funeral trade has also been unusually large.

At the recent meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society, the new rose, Sunburst, was exhibited by Charles H.

Mr. Holscher has been busily engaged during the summer in the improvement of his place. Five new houses are nearly completed, also a new barn. He has installed a Kroeschell boiler in his new houses.

Among the recent visitors in this city were: J. J. Karins, for H. A. Dreer, Inc., of Philadelphia; Mr. Hall, of Reed & Keller, New York city; F. G. Seven Pages of Retailers' Cards

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

DENVER.

The Market.

Business is improving, but only at a snail's pace. Compared with last year, trade is not particularly good, but the best part of the month is still to come and there is a chance that it may still catch up. The weather has been exceedingly warm, and, as there have been no heavy frosts, there are still a few garden flowers on the market, such as cosmos, Shasta daisies, antirrhinums, etc.

Carnations are rather scarce, and as they improve in quality the price advances. The electric show is using a number of carnations this week. Tea roses continue to be a glut on the market, and growers have been compelled, they say, to "dump them by the wagon load." Some grand chrysanthemums are coming in, but the good ones are in the minority as yet. Most of the stock is of an ordinary grade, which does not demand a fancy price. Beauties and violets are cleaned up pretty well each day. There is no oversupply of either. Lily of the valley is always scarce; perhaps October weddings are the cause.

Various Notes.

The Colorado Florists' Club held its first fall meeting October 2, at T. M. A. hall. The advisability of organizing a bowling league was discussed, but nothing definite was decided. Nominations of officers for the coming year were made. The election will take place at the next meeting, which will be held November 6, at the usual place. All members are requested to be present.

The visit of President Taft helped a few of the florists, but the majority say it was unusually quiet the day he was here. The Speth Floral Co. had the decoration at the Country Club, with the exception of the breakfast table, which was done by Geo. H. Cooper. The Park Floral Co. had the luncheon at the Crawford Hill home, in which Easter lilies were used almost exclusively. The banquet decoration at El Jebel temple was in charge of the Elitch-Long Flower Store.

A Japanese artist in the window at the Tremont street store of A. C. Sinram is attracting a great deal of attention. Most of his pictures are of flowers.

Hugo Neff, of the Park Floral Co., has been notably successful this year with gladioli, which he has grown in his home garden, having sold all he grew at a good price. He intends going into the business more heavily next year.

Some beautiful orchid plants were seen in the Elitch-Long Flower Store recently.

Walter Dorner, of the flower department of the Daniels & Fisher Stores Co., met with a serious accident recently. While walking in his sleep he missed his footing and fell, receiving injuries which will confine him to his home for some time.

The latest addition to the store force of the Park Floral Co. is Herbert Clausen, formerly manager for Hugh Seales, of Birmingham, Ala.

S. R. Lundy, representing the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, called on the trade last week. Mr. Lundy has moved his family to this city, and will hereafter call this place home.

Emil Glauber is cutting a quantity of exceptionally fine Killarneys. His carnations are also of good quality.

The Park Floral Co. entertained The Coterie at dinner on Wednesday evening, October 4, in the dining room at the Broadway store. After dinner the party adjourned to the "Torture Chamber," where Miss Lenore Williams was admitted to membership. Those present were Messrs. and Mesdames J. A. Valentine, E. P. Neiman, E. S. Kennedy and G. H. Cooper; Misses Gertrude Page, Lena Webb, Margaret Jennings, Avery Edwards and Lenore Williams; Messrs. B. E. Gillis, Chas. McCord, Hugo Neff and Ulrich Helie.

At the opening of The Mart, a new store on Sixteenth street, about 3,000 roses and 1,000 carnations were given away. The flowers were furnished by the New York Floral Co.

The decorations at the Woman's Club during the week of the federation were supplied by W. C. Walter. Mr. Walter is cutting several hundred carnations

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The Indian summer has had its usual influence on the cut flower market and has brought along enormous dahlia shipments, much of the stock unsalable, not because of lack of quality, but the market suffers from indigestion. Then, too, the mum stream grows hourly; the warm weather and the sunshine are accomplishing wonders, and we shall have the late varieties crowding the early ones before the week is over. Polly Rose was selling as low as $3 per hundred October 16, while $3 per dozen seems to be about the top for anything except the new varieties from the expert growers.

Beauties are arriving and quality is fast improving. The demand for the best is wide-spread, because of the great number of society weddings, as many as seven in a single day last week. There are roses enough as to variety this season to meet any fancy. The new kinds grow in favor. Taft, Lady Hillingdon, Sunburst, etc., are all great favorites. Richmonds are improving rapidly in flower and stem. Prices have been fairly steady, but do not advance.

Carnations feel the effect of the hot wave and a good many of them were asleep when received October 14. The top price has been 3 cents, but only high grade stock could command that figure. Most of the arrivals sold at 2 cents and under. Valley is in good demand and the best of it holds at 3 cents. Lilies come in hundreds where the shipments averaged thousands a few weeks ago. Violets lack color and quality, but the growers up the Hudson are sending down about a quarter of a million daily. Gardenias are improving and prices advancing, consequent upon the limited supply. Orchids in many varieties hold well at prevailing rates, 50 cents being the top for cattleyas.

Great quantities of autumn foliage are reaching the New York market and this is used widely in the church wedding decorations. Cosmos is still uninjured by the early frosts. Smilax is overabundant. Tritomas, tuberose and pansies add their quota to the infinite variety.

The advertisements which appear in this column have all been written by Ralph M. Ward personally. They are prepared sometimes on the spur of the moment, perhaps during his hour ride on the Reading Railroad every morning and evening, or whenever he feels so inclined and in his various moods. Of course, some you do not like, and some you tolerate, and we have been told some have done us harm. Those which have done us harm have necessarily done others good and we are not so jealous of our competition as to deny them their portion of business. Mistakes are made by Mr. Ward occasionally, and sometimes big ones, but we are working away just the same, hoping to improve until we reach that age when we begin to decline, as all men do, and when that time comes we want younger blood to take the reins, continue boosting what is right and make away with the ways and means of bygone days. Our business is to sell bulbs—especially lily bulbs—we have no seed store—we sell wholesale only. We import what we sell direct and our sources of supply are reliable, actual growers and not merely exporters or dealers. Our aim is to induce growers to buy the best and we discourage the sale of inferior bulbs—for two good reasons; first, because a grower can not succeed in handling inferior bulbs and, secondly, a permanent business can not be built up in bulbs alone unless one delivers the very best that can be procured. seedsmen are delivering, and in the majority of instances approximately half that. It is further shown that the pea canners are considering making a material raise in their selling prices to cover the abnormally high cost of seed. "Wisconsin pea packers are much concerned," says the house referred to, "over the seed pea situation. Seed houses are delivering twenty, thirty and in a few instances fifty per cent on their future contracts. The present market is $7.50 per bushel for the sweet wrinkled varieties. This seed must go to the growers at $3 per bushel, a loss of $4.50 per bushel, or $18 per acre to the packer. On a fifty case per acre yield, which is somewhere near the average yield, this means an increased cost of 18c per dozen on their 1912 pack.

"It is a cinch that packers can't stand this. It is equally certain that the 1912 pack will have to sell for more money. Some packers think the price ought to be uniformly raised about 20 cents per dozen. We do not think this wise. The price to the consumer must be taken into consideration. Our guess is that future prices when named will average 10 cents per dozen; ranging from 5 to 15 cents per dozen over the opening prices for 1911."

being highly pleased with San Jose and the Santa Clara valley, and already is very enthusiastic over the possibili-

Boddington's Quality Christmas and Winter-flowering Sweet Peas

ALL true stocks of Winter-Flowering Sweet Peas are very scarce this season; some varieties are a total failure, owing to the exceptional season in California this Spring. We can make immediate delivery of all the undermentioned varieties.

Our stocks of Christmas Flowering Sweet Peas have stood the test for years, and we can refer you to the largest growers of this increasingly popular flower, as to the trueness and quality of our seed, earliness of blooming period, and strength and habit of plants.

The following varieties are the "best by test" and include Zvolanek's and our own introductions, grown for seed from selected stocks by the leading California Growers and Specialists of Sweet Peas. Our output last year was nearly 6000 lbs. No kicks and plenty of testimonials as to quality, germination and trueness to type.

WINTER-FLOWERING SWEET PEAS AT NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW, BOSTON, MARCH 25th TO APRIL 1st, 1911.

Partly showing Mr. Wm. Sim's Exhibit, which won the majority of the leading prizes—seed almost exclusively supplied by "Boddington." Sim's Sweet Peas were one of the sensational Exhibits at this Grand Flower Show—average length of stem being twenty inches.

Boddington's Quality Winter-Flowering Sweet Peas

At the Exhibition and Convention of the National Sweet Pea Society of America, July 12th and 13th, 1910, we again won the C. C. Morse & Co.'s Silver Cup for the finest and best collection of Sweet Peas open to the trade only.

BODDINGTON'S EXTRA EARLY CHRISTMAS WHITE SNOWBIRD. An exceptionally early Sweet Pea for indoor flowering—will bloom six weeks after sowing. Color clear white, upon long stems; habit fairly dwarf and of exceptionally free-flowering qualities. Without doubt, the finest early white for indoor planting. We sell one grower in Pennsylvania 35 lbs. of this variety every year; name on application. Oz. 35 cts., ¼ lb. 85 cts., ½ lb. $1.50, lb. $2.50.

BODDINGTON'S CHRISTMAS PINK. This is the earliest and most profitable and useful Sweet Pea in cultivation, as by sowing the seed under glass in latter part of August, flowers can be cut from Thanksgiving on during the Winter months. Oz. 25 cts., ¼ lb. 75 cts., ½ lb. $1.25, lb. $2.00.

BODDINGTON'S CHRISTMAS WHITE. A companion to our Christmas Pink. Just as free and profuse a bloomer. Oz. 15 cts., ¼ lb. 50 cts., ½ lb. 85 cts., lb. $1.50.

BODDINGTON'S CANARY. Similar to the above, but flowers of an exceptionally good yellow. Oz. 35 cts., ¼ lb. $1.00, ½ lb. $1.75, lb. $3.00.

BODDINGTON'S FLAMINGO. Color scarlet; free-flowering and early. Oz. 50 cts., ¼ lb. $1.50, ½ lb. $2.75, lb. $5.00.

Christmas Meteor. Scarlet; fine open red flower. Oz. 25 cts., ¼ lb. 75 cts., ½ lb. $1.25, lb. $2.00.

Florence Denzer. Pure white. Oz. 15 cts., ¼ lb. 50 cts., ½ lb. 85 cts., lb. $1.50.

Le Marquis. This is the same color as Princess of Wales violet; has very large flowers. Oz. 25 cts., ¼ lb. 75 cts., ½ lb. $1.25, lb. $2.00.

LILIUM HARRISII

(THE BERMUDA EASTER LILY)

LET US SUPPLY YOUR WANTS IN LILIES THIS SEASON

We think we can make it to your advantage to do so, as regards both quality and price.

The stock that we offer is not gathered indiscriminately from all kinds of sources, but is grown for us by a few selected growers whose stocks have been worked up from the true, original stock. In order to insure the health of the product, the bulbs are not grown on the same field oftener than one season, other crops being grown on the field the preceding year. The ground is thoroughly manured when the previous crop is grown, leaving it in a high state of cultivation, and when the lily bulbs are planted no fresh manure is used; this prevents disease and insures a crop of strong, healthy bulbs.

In addition to this, we do not dig our bulbs as early as they are usually dug, but leave them in the ground until they are thoroughly ripened and matured. When Harrisii is good it leaves little to be desired. There is very little, if any, stock obtainable as good as the stock that we are offering. We are supplying only this one grade of selected stock and when this is disposed of we shall have no more to offer.

While the quality of the stock that we offer is of the highest, our prices are as low as, or lower than, the prices of those who offer the ordinary stock gathered from indiscriminate sources. We are sure buyers will find our stock very satisfactory, and much more so than the Japan-grown Longiflorum, which has badly deteriorated in recent years.

Bear in mind that we were the original introducers of Harrisii in Bermuda, and that we have exceptional facilities for obtaining our present supplies. Also take note that the smallest bulbs that we offer are 6-7 inch bulbs, not 5-7 inch, as usually offered.

6-7 inch bulbs, 335 to the case, $15.00 per case; full thousand lots, $40.00 per 1000
7-9 inch bulbs, 200 to the case, 16.00 per case; full thousand lots, 75.00 per 1000
9-11 inch bulbs, 100 to the case, 18.00 per case; full thousand lots, 175.00 per 1000

FERNS

We have an exceptionally nice lot of ferns in the following varieties—good, bushy, well-grown plants that will please the most critical buyers. Plants have been grown in pots and are thoroughly well established and nicely finished.

Nephrolepis Bostoniensis and Piersoni, 6-inch pots $0.50 each
Nephrolepis Elegantissima, Piersoni, Bostoniensis and Harrisii, heavy 8-inch plants . . $1.00 to 1.50 each Nephrolepis Elegantissima, Bostoniensis and Harrisii, heavy 10-inch plants 2.50 each

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

Business of late has been quiet. Flowers are none too plentiful—that is, flowers that are usable. Carnations are still scarce; they retail at 60 cents and 75 cents per dozen; roses retail at $1 and $1.50 per dozen; violets at $1 per hundred blooms; snapdragons, short-stemmed, at 50 cents and 60 cents per dozen; lilies at $2 per dozen. There are a few gladioli still seen. There are still plenty of outdoor flowers, such as dahlias, zinnias, cosmos, etc. Mums retail at $3 per dozen. Plants are in fairly good demand. Bulbs are now being sold in the stores, retailing generally at 35 cents per dozen for tulips, 10 cents per dozen for crocus and 35 cents per dozen for narcissi.

Funeral work has been light of late. Last week was a week of sunshine and warm weather, and this has opened the flowers quickly. Steady firing is now the rule at most of the places.

W. L.

WOODFORD, VT.

In the town of Woodford at the present time there are scores of people picking ferns, and it would be impossible to estimate how many thousands of dollars' worth of these will be taken from the town this fall. Picking began earlier this year than usual and will be kept up until the falling snows prevent. It is romantic work in a way, for in many parts of the town there are encampments of families, and parties who declare that they never enjoyed themselves so much in making money.

Already several large shipments of ferns have been made to New York city, which will be kept in cold storage.

PACIFIC COAST.

SAN DIEGO, CAL.

The San Diego Floral Association will hold its annual autumn exhibition at the San Diego Club October 25 to 27.

The summer season trade has been fifty per cent better this year in all branches.

Lanier Bros. have completed another lath house, 45x200, for carnations. They expect to erect another range of glass, 45x200, this coming spring. K.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

The Market.

A few light showers last week tended to freshen everything, with the possible exception of business, and, although that seems to be on the upward grade, there is no particular excitement. Funeral orders are fairly brisk and nearly all lines of fancy stock sell well, but the great bulk of ordinary flowers are still too cheap and too plentiful and the buying public consequently is quite particular as to quality and price. A few days of cold weather or a few days of dark, cloudy skies would do much toward cutting down stock and stiffening prices. Outside mums are now at their best and, although apparently not in as great supply as last year, are abundant enough for all purposes. Asters are over, but other sorts of hardy stock, such as gladioli, dahlias, amaryllis, coreopsis and gaillardias, are used in great abundance in cheap orders. Valley and Lilium longiflorum are plentiful. Orchids are in poor supply and move slowly. Various Notes.

J. G. Gilbertson, well known to the gardening fraternity here, has been appointed gardener to the city parks of Ashland, Ore., where he has resided for several years.

A. J. Frazer has taken charge of the plant of the E. Gill Nursery Co., at Eden Vale, Cal., in the place of C. H. Huntley, who has moved to Berkeley, Cal.

G. Rossi, of G. Rossi & Bros., is expected home this week from a trip to Europe, where he has been for several months.

The regular meeting of the California Retail Florists' Association was held at Eagles' Hall, October 11. G.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Scarcity of flowers on the outside is gradually increasing the demand; yet it is hard for the general public to appreciate the reason for the prices asked by the florists. Mums are the main feature in the window displays. So far there is a scarcity of these. Queen, Gloria, Comoleta and Bonnaffon are the prevailing varieties. Roses and carnations are improving and move well. Dahlias are plentiful and, of varied colors, but unsatisfactory as to keeping qualities. Gladioli have proved a profitable summer and fall flower, and for decorations there is nothing so satisfactory.

Various Notes.

The visit of President Taft to the city created an unusual demand for flowers. The Commercial Club decorated elaborately throughout. The banquet hall was arranged with mums and autumn foliage. Clarke Bros. decorated.

R. H. Starbuck, representing E. H. Hunt, Chicago, is in town.

E. P. Walls, of the Maryland Agricultural College, is appointed instructor in botany at the O. A. C., Corvallis, Ore.

West End, N. J.—William G. Eisele has one of the most attractive trade establishments on the Jersey coast. His patrons from far and near compliment him on his efforts.

Seabright, N. J.—George Hale, superintendent at the E. D. Adams estate, is rejoicing in the fact that he has not lost any of the magnificent specimens of conifers that adorn this beautiful place. A rare tree is Cedrus Atlantica glauca, the first the writer has seen in this country, fully twenty-five feet tall and perfect in every way, also Retinospora squarrosa Veitchii, of same height, with breadth in proportion and perfect in form and color.

budded, grafted, or grown on their own roots,' and not under the same paragraph as 'stocks, cuttings, or seedlings of * * * briar rose.'

The matter came up in a protest of F. B. Vandegrift & Co., custom-house brokers, and in his opinion handed down October 5 General Appraiser Waite said:

"The merchandise in question is invoiced as '2,500 Rosa rugosa.' These are rose plants, and were assessed under the provision in paragraph 264, tariff act of 1909, for 'rose plants, budded, grafted, or grown on their own roots, 4 cents each.' They are claimed by the importers to be dutiable under the further provision in the same paragraph for 'stocks, cuttings, or seedlings of * * * briar rose, 3 years old or less, $1 per thousand plants.'

"Some testimony was taken in this case; and the board has had before it at various times heretofore a commodity known as the Rosa rugosa. See G. A. 4635 (T. D. 21922). The Rosa rugosa, it seems, is not the true briar rose, which is raised in this country as a seedling for stock upon which to graft other roses for the production of rose plants, but is a native of the Orient; and while it is grown from the seed, it embraces several varieties, some of which are desirable as rose plants for the culture of roses to be used as cut flowers and for ornamental purposes. These desirable varieties are perpetuated and propagated by means of grafting or budding upon other stalks or stems, as in this case. When that operation is performed we are satisfied the goods are not covered by that portion of the paragraph claimed by the importers, but have then become rose plants, budded or grafted. The testimony upon the part of the importers is clear that the plants here in question are the budded and grafted rose plants of a particular variety of Rosa rugosa, desirable as a rose in rose culture and for ornamental purposes. In the cases heretofore considered by the board

Vegetable Forcing.FERTILIZER FOR LETTUCE.

Please tell me what I can substitute for well decayed stable manure, mixing it with good outside soil to be used in growing lettuce under glass. Is there a good brand of pulverized manure that I can use? It is impossible to get good, decomposed stable manure here at any price.

A. B. W.

The right way to get decayed manure is to get it when fresh, and keep it wet and turned over frequently until it is cold, so as not to allow it to burn dry. It is usually spoiled by being in the pile undisturbed until it burns dry and loses most of its value.

If you can not get good manure to use now, you can use any of the pulverized manures or commercial fertilizers advertised in The Review, and get good results. Dried blood is a great fertilizer for lettuce. Any of these fertilizers should be covered with soil and not left on top to mold, but do not turn them under too deeply. If your soil is not loose, you can scatter some sand over it and work it in to loosen it up. If it has been well manured, however, it is not likely to be heavy.

H. G.

LETTUCE IN GERANIUM HOUSES.

I wish to plant my houses to lettuce, so I can get two crops without crowding my geraniums too much. How soon can I plant the lettuce here, in northeastern Ohio? I now have some nice plants, about two inches high. Would it be advisable to plant these, or would they run up too much and be too light? The variety is Grand Rapids.

G. C. H.

It takes about twelve weeks from seed to market Grand Rapids lettuce. The crop can be transplanted to the houses about four weeks after the seed is planted; so it is on the benches only eight weeks. It is not too early now for the lettuce plants which you say are two inches tall. The demand in November is usually good, although the prices are lower than they are a little later. Keep the ventilators wide open all day, as these bright days are pretty warm for the plants under glass.

H. G.

LETTUCE TO FOLLOW MUMS.

Can lettuce be grown in a violet house, following Bonaffon mums? If so, when should the seed be planted? I should like to know a little about the culture of the crop in its early stages.

satisfactorily in your violet or mum house. Use the Grand Rapids variety. Plant the seed about four weeks before the mums will be out of the way. Transplant the seedlings as soon as they are up nicely, placing them about 1 1/2 x 2 inches apart, in flats or, better, in a bench, and they will stay there until benches are prepared for them.

The soil should be loose and sandy for best results. If the soil is too heavy, scatter a good coat of sand over the top, also some rotted manure, and turn it well and carefully. Place the plants about 6x8 inches apart in the beds. Water them well at this second transplanting and be careful about watering afterward. Do not water too often. Let the water run in between the plants, as with violets, so as not to wet the foliage much. Keep the house cool.

The Market.

Business continues to improve slightly each week. Everything is coming in such quantities and the quality is so good that there is nothing to be desired except a good, hard freeze to clean up all outside flowers, which are quite satisfactory to many who would otherwise be regular buyers of forced stock. The retailers are all busy in a way, and some of them have been having some nice decorations.

Various Notes.

J. J. Beck, of New Castle, Pa., has the sympathy of his many friends in the death of his wife October 11. Mrs. Beck was operated on last spring, but never entirely recovered.

Wm. Trumpore, who was in the retail business in this city some years ago, was a visitor last week. He just said "How Do?" and kept on farther west on business. He has been with J. H. Small & Sons, New York city, since leaving here.

Harry Hamm, of Wilksburg, had two large decorations at the Hotel Schenley last week. Mr. Hamm says his business is increasing right along. Hoo-Hoo.

Butler, Pa.—Anton Krut has been remodeling his store, on South Main street. He has moved the floor down to the level of the street and has added a handsome show window, which extends back into the room a distance of fifteen feet, giving excellent opportunity for the display of stock.

We have received our first car of Belgian Azaleas, fine plants, personally picked and selected in Ghent by a member of our Company; re-assorted here, and none delivered to our customers that do not come up to the highest standard of excellence—shapely, well balanced, abundantly budded plants.

Mr. W. A. Saltford, of "The Saltford Flower Shop" (whom we quote by permission), said last year:

"The Azaleas we bought from Jackson & Perkins Company were the finest lot we ever forced, and we have given them a duplicate order for four hundred plants this year." (And Mr. Saltford was so well pleased with THAT lot that he gave us another large order for Azaleas THIS year.)

"The Azaleas you shipped me this fall are certainly fine; the Madame Petrick were brought into bloom for Christmas without forcing. We had the best Azaleas in Worcester for the holidays, and I can assure you of my order for next season." Chas. D. Mackie, Worcester, Mass., Dec. 31, 1910.

Prompt orders are invited, while the assortment is complete, and while the plants are fresh and perfect; get them started for the holidays; nothing easier to bring into bloom and nothing more salable or more profitable than these handsome plants when in bloom.

Chrysanthemums

Having disposed of our surplus stock plants of ADVANCE, we are now in position to take orders for young plants for January or February delivery of the three following:

SMITH'S ADVANCE—The earliest large flowering white, a fine companion of Golden Glow. Can be had from July onward according to date of planting and selecting buds. Being more dwarf and flowers more double than October Frost, is a decided improvement on that variety. It was so well received by all purchasers this season, we predict a very heavy demand. Price, $1.20 per 10; $10.00 per 100.

UNAKA—This variety has sustained our last year's description. Being a strong grower with perfect stem and foliage, a fine incurved bloom of a pleasing shade of pink and maturing the first week of October, places it foremost among early pinks. In fact, there is no other good pink to compete with it at this date. Price, $1.20 per 10; $10.00 per 100.

CHRYSOLOREA—This variety is about 15 days earlier than Col. D. Appleton, is of larger size, stronger stem, not as tall, in color is intermediate between this variety and Major Bonaffon. This with its excellent keeping qualities places it in the front ranks of the commercial sorts. Price, $3.00 per 10; $25.00 per 100.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.

That the Chamber of Commerce and the Business Men's Association ought to act in behalf of the merchants who sell flowers, to prevent Yale University from cutting into their trade, was the statement of Chapel street florists concerning the announced plan of the Yale bureau of self-help to open a flower shop on the campus. "If the university," said one florist, "is going into a general retail business, then it is about time the merchants of the city took the matter up to see what they can do about it."

Charles Munro expressed his opinion as follows: "I don't see how they can make a success of it anyway, but we have our Chamber of Commerce to attend to such affairs in our behalf and I think that organization ought to look into this matter. If the university is going to enter a general retail business it seems to me it is high time the tax-paying merchants of the city have something to say about it. The university pays no taxes and we do and we ought to be entitled to some protection. They will not make a success of their flower shop, in my opinion. Flowers are perishable, extremely so, and it takes expert knowledge to make a profit out of the business. If the students who are behind this proposition are poor now, they will be poorer in six months, for what they make off one student they lose on another."

S. H. Moore said: "The percentage of flower-buying students is small. This shop will have to depend for its patronage on the students. I don't see where it can get any other business. I think the scheme might be a success if properly handled, but I do not see how green men—that is, men of no knowledge of the business—can conduct it on a paying basis. I think the Business Men's Association might do well to inquire into the matter."

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO.

The Florists had a narrow escape in their latest match with the Gardeners' team, winning by five points. The final score read: Florists, 1,630; Gardeners, 1,625. At the end of the first match, the Gardeners led by eight points. In the second half the Florists picked up, and, through the strong bowling of Douglas, won out. E. Johnson made the best showing for the Gardeners. Here are the scores:

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Ideal weather has brought out the mums and other stock in grand profusion. The demand, also, is brisk and the fall business is reported good. Dahlias have arrived in excellent condition; the fancy varieties are perfect in every respect and bring good prices. Plants have also been in evidence during the last week and, while not yet heavily in flower, have sold well. Valley was almost out of the question last week, for the supply was cleaned up every day. Heavy funeral orders used the bulk of the flowers and many smaller weddings took considerable stock.

Various Notes.

Every fall, for some reason or other, flower stores spring up here like mushrooms. Last week no less than three stores were opened, all on the east side, where the majority of the stores are now situated. The store opened by J. H. Rebstock is the one most worthy of note, for he has leased a store in a new building situated in the new business district, and a fashionable one, too. The store has every appearance of an up-to-date place and, while he has been in a desirable location, the last move is considered a good one.

William Poore has just completed an addition of two small houses to the three he already had. His increased spring trade has made it necessary for him to make this change.

Even the florists have gone into politics heavily this year, as two of our worthy brothers are on the ticket. Mr. Schoenhut and Mr. Adams are running for the office of councilman and supervisor, respectively. Mr. Kasting is also one of the men on the Democratic list.

IN HONOR OF

Our 25th Anniversary

Since we began the importing, growing and shipping of our specialty, the Araucaria, we—look—give our customers a bargain by cutting the prices just one-half—for a few weeks only.

Our so well-known Christmas Begonia Erfordii, a constant bloomer for the fall holidays, and during the whole winter is never without a flower; in light pink, pink, dark pink and turning gradually into a bright red (big trusses of flowers), 2½-in. pots, $5.00; 3-in., 8c; 4-in., 12c.

NOTICE!

AZALEA INDICA, new crop—first consignment per Steamer Marquette from Belgium just received, and are in excellent condition. Start in now for Christmas forcing! We have the usual 4 best Christmas varieties, well known to every florist as the earliest of all and easy to force. Deutsche Perle, pure double white; Simon Mardner and Mme. Petrick, double pink; and Veraneana, double rose variegated, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00. Easter varieties: Mme. Vander Cruysen, Niobe, Empress of India, Ajollo, Helene Tholemann, Prof. Wolters, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. We have only a limited quantity of 50c and 60c sizes; larger sizes must be taken in addition to small ones. Why? Azaleas are very scarce this year in Belgium, even spot cash cannot buy all we need.

PANSIES.

PANSY PARK PERFECTION is the most thoroughbred strain of giant show and fancy pansies, the flowers of largest size and most perfect form. I have made growing of pansy seeds and plants a specialty for nearly 40 years and it is the result of many years of breeding and selection. It also contains every variety introduced by foreign growers up to date. Samples of many reports: "Send me $10.00 worth of your best pansy seed. If as good in colors and size as they were last year I will need double the amount next year." G. H. Toepke, Detroit, Mich. "The Pansy Park Perfection pansy plants obtained from you for our parks were quite satisfactory. Book our order for 50,000 in separate colors and mixed, as specified below, and deliver in October." S. Manning, General Superintendent of Parks, Baltimore, Md. "The pansies from your seed are the finest thoroughbred flowers I have seen in this place which is noted for good flowers on private estates." Geo. A. Galloupe, Beverly, Mass. An immense stock of fine field-grown plants from seed sown thinly, broadcast, so that each plant has plenty of room to grow stocky and strong, with extra good roots. THREE FINE DREER PLACES.

ing books on drainage when the farm was purchased. The result has been fully demonstrated during the past rainy season, for a better drained piece of farm land would be difficult to find.
The fertility is due to two things:
first, cleanliness; second, intensive farming. Manures have been used and commercial fertilizers are being used, but just now chief reliance is placed on green crops turned under. The condition of the farm, its tilth and vigor of growth are the strongest endorsement of the wisdom of this policy.

The three big crops now being harvested are peonies, phloxes and Japanese iris. Their importance is probably in the order named. It is difficult to form a clear idea of the magnitude of the transactions in these three crops unless a walk is taken over the farm.
Then you form a faint idea of the immense quantities that are going from this place all over the country. Delphinium Belladonna is another important perennial that is grown here;
its dark blue sport and the white, Moerheimi, are the leading varieties of larkspur today. All three thrive with the amateur. Pyrethrum uliginosum stellatum, a Dreer introduction that originated here, is a glistening white daisy, the best for cutting in late summer and fall; it has large flowers and is a free bloomer.

There was just enough color left in the phloxes, late in the season as it was, to make them pretty. Three new varieties have come strongly to the front: Elizabeth Campbell, salmon pink; Frau Anton Buckner, dwarf, considered the finest white, with large flowers; Rosenberg, mauve. The roses at the farm have shown wonderful growth this season. The combination of the crimson clover with the soil has proven just what they wanted. Maman Cochet, in poor condition when planted, is fully three feet high, while Papa Gontier has flowers of excellent size and color.

The greenhouses at Riverview are in splendid condition, showing the advantage of an easily run place, for in these tremendously busy fall days the turning on of two or three valves when needed on a night like that of September 13 means the difference between robust vigor and that tired feeling so often seen in plant, as in human beings. Riverview is devoted to pretty much the same class of stock that was seen there last March, when the place was first visited by the Florists' Club of Philadelphia. Kentias in splendid condition, the only large block of 6-inch arecas in the country, ditto variegated pineapple in all sizes, Phoenix Roebelenii admirably finished, and a crop of unusual interest, Dracaena indivisa. The place is also strong in ferns. Of the nephrolepis type, Boston, Scottii and Whitmani are the principal varieties, with W. K. Harris and Scholzei to complete the quintet.

A feature of the fern section is Adiantum Glory of Moordrecht that is being tried in nephrolepis temperature. While the experiment is only partly made, Mr. Eisele is confident that it will succeed. The far-reaching effect of this discovery will be seen at a glance. Adiantum Farleyense will be a thing of the past, for Glory of Moordrecht, wherever graceful sprays of the beautiful Farleyense are desired, is a fern revolution. Mr. Clark has been successful with his first sowing of seed of Adiantum Glory of Moordrecht; he estimates that something like 10,000 have germinated.

The dahlias and cannas have been transferred from Locust Farm to Riverview. Evidently they enjoy the change, for a finer lot, E. H. Michel asserts, they never have had, and Mr. Michel is an excellent judge.

Cocos Weddelliana is a feature of the Dreer place at Riverton, an exclusive specialty. The specimens of this graceful palm are perfect. From the specimens down to the tiny seedlings, every size is abundantly represented. Kentias in immense quantities are ably grown. The feature of the Phoenix Roebelenii is the tub size four feet high, five feet spread.

Roses are an increasing industry. An illustration of the interest taken by the amateur in new and choice varieties of roses is shown by the fact that the mere mention of the history of the variety Robert Huey brought an order for a dozen at an unusual price. The big range usually filled by azaleas at this season houses new faces: Rhododendron Chandleri, the Christmas forcing variety of today, a variety that will hold its buds when bumped or chilled, and araucarias in the three leading sorts are there in fine condition. The azalea has gone, with a sigh of relief. What a difference it will make to the country!

The holly fern, Cyrtomium Rochfordi, despite the removal of the spore fronds, showed that the claim for its place as a specimen is well founded.

The appearance of the tables in the packing shed indicated great activity.

POINSETTIAS.

When should the bracts on poinsettias begin to show? If they don't show at the right time, what should I do to stop growth and make blooms? I have some six inches high. Give me the best culture to get them in for Christmas.

T. S. & F. Co.

Your poinsettias will show bracts all right in due time, but not before November. Do not on any account do anything to check their growth. This will only cause the plants to drop their foliage and completely spoil them. If they are in a sunny house, kept at 50 to 55 degrees at night, they will do well. As soon as the bracts show, give them a night temperature of 60 degrees in order to get them in nice condition for Christmas.

I have a new greenhouse, 20x75, which I wish to heat with hot water. It is three-fourths span. The north wall, eight feet high, has no glass, while the south wall, thirty-two inches high, is all glass. The west end is all glass, excepting thirty-two inches at the bottom which is boarded. There is a door in the center at this end. The ridge is twelve feet high. The boiler room is joined on the east end, which has no glass, and is fourteen feet wide and sixteen feet high, with a roof of the same height and pitch as the greenhouse. The house will be used for carnations. We have no zero weather, outside temperature seldom going below 20 degrees above zero, and cold spells are of short duration. Carnations and violets live and bloom outside all winter.

Please give me the size and number of flows and returns to maintain a temperature of 50 degrees at night; also best arrangement of the same. You will note that the expansion tank cannot be placed any higher than the ridge of greenhouse. Where shall the flow pipe be placed, so that the tank will be six feet above the highest point of the heating system and not obstruct doors and walks?

No pipes can be placed under the south bench and I would like all pipes to be placed so I could use space under the benches for bulbs. Shall it be the downhill, uphill or level system of piping? Would prefer to place the boiler on south side of furnace room.
F. D. O.

To heat a house, 20x75 feet, arranged as described, to 50 degrees when 20 degrees above zero, use one 2½-inch flow pipe and seven 2-inch returns. The boiler can be placed at any point desired. Start with a 2½-inch flow and carry it to a height about four feet below the ridge, and then carry it at a slight incline to the east end of the greenhouse at a point in line with the row of posts supporting the ridge. There connect it with the expansion tank, which should be overhead and as

KEEP BOILERS FILLED.

Can some of our experienced florists give us the best method generally pursued with steam boilers while they are idle during summer? Are they kept dry or should the water remain in them?

What percentage of boiler insurance on greenhouse steam boilers is carried; also, what percentage of accidents through boilers exploding occur, say in a period of three years? The best information on this will be appreciated. Our locality is a gulf coast town.

M. F. Co.

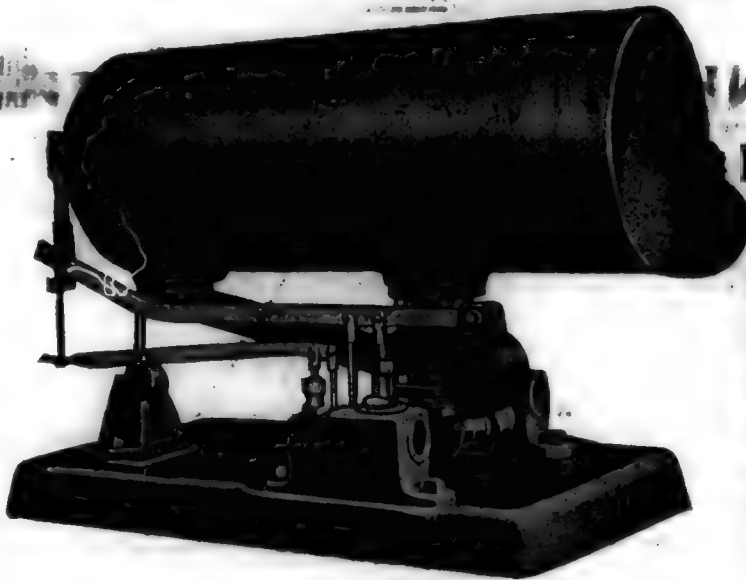

The usual custom is to keep the boilers filled with water during the summer. The oxidation of the inner surface of the boiler and heating pipes is, of course, due to the air contained in the water, and this has been largely expelled from the water which has been in the boiler for some time. If this water is drawn off, the wet surface of the boiler is again brought into contact with the air, and when the boiler is refilled in the fall the water will again contain a considerable amount of air and the oxidation will be greater than had the water been unchanged. The advantage from keeping the boiler filled during the summer is even greater in hot water plants, as then the heating pipes can be kept filled as well.

Comparatively few florists, who use low pressure steam for heating, have their boilers insured. While we have no accurate data, the number of and loss from explosions is quite small.

PIPING FOR ILLINOIS HOUSES.

I have six houses, from ten to fourteen feet wide and nine feet to the ridges and five feet to the gutters. They are fifty-six feet long and run north and south, with a potting shed and boiler room across the north end of the range. The south ends have three feet of glass. These are on a slope to the west so the roof of the east house comes to the ground while are devoid of all unnecessary mechanism.

Every part designed, manufactured and assembled with the idea of permanence foremost.

Every tilt of the trap shows that it's working—draining every drop of condensation from the heating system and automatically returning it to the boiler—no pumps—no trouble.

Condensation is the purest kind of boiler feed water. Don't waste it. Return it directly to the boiler by "Detroit" Return Traps and prevent scale formation.

Two Tank Traps vs. One Tank Traps

Orders for our TWO TANK TRAPS are being repeated and quadrupled by the largest manufacturers in the United States. We will fill your order just as quickly as the repeat orders.

The Canadians killed Reciprocity, but they buy our traps and pay big duties on them. This is good evidence that our traps are a huge success.

Let us return the condensation to your boilers and save the heat units. Our traps do the work for one-tenth of the steam required by pumps.

Will the saving pay?

the west house is four feet above the ground. This side is well protected by an orchard.

I have a 7-section boiler with a fire-box that is 20x36 inches. Beginning at the east side the houses are numbered from one to six. The boiler is at the north end of house number four. Two 3-inch flows are carried each way across the ends of the houses. (The inquiry gives a long description of the arrangement of the present piping, but the information is so vague that it is impossible to make it clear to the readers. Therefore the correct method of piping is given in the answer and no attention is paid to present arrangements.)

Do you think I can get 55 degrees in zero weather, or 48 degrees when it is 10 degrees below zero outside?

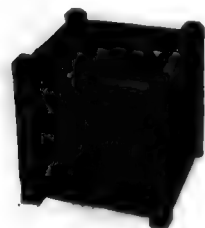

S. R.

The description given of the piping is not clear, especially that of the piping in the three houses on the east side of the range. It is evident that there are six houses, fifty-six feet long and from ten to fourteen feet wide, with the ridges nine feet high. These are to be heated to 55 degrees in zero weather. The boiler is at the north end of the middle house and from it two 3-inch flow pipes are carried either way across the ends of the houses.

In the houses which are ten feet wide there should be one 2-inch flow pipe and four 2-inch returns. If any of the houses are twelve feet wide it would be well to have two 2-inch flows with two returns connected to each, and in houses fourteen feet wide use two flows and five returns.

The boiler should be large enough to handle about 1,500 square feet of radiating surface.

STAMFORD, CONN.

The Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society held its regular meeting in Royal Arcanum hall October 13, with President Stuart in the chair and about 100 members in attendance. Eight new members were elected and five applications received. The exhibition committee reports that arrangements are nearly completed for the first annual exhibition, to be held November 3 and 4, and indications point to a complete success, as all the members are enthusiastic.

The judge's report on the exhibits at this meeting was:

Nerines, by James Stuart, cultural certificate.
Seedling carnations, by Alex Geddes, cultural certificate.

Collection dahlias, Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co., cultural certificate.

Hemantus, A. Whitlaw, certificate of merit.

A vote of thanks was extended to Robert Williamson, for berried shrubs; to P. W. Popp, for chrysanthemums; to J. T. Burns, for apples, and to Clapboard Hill Farm for celery and apples.

An interesting discussion on the prevention of rust on celery and the beauty and value of berried shrubs at this time of year was a feature. President Stuart urged prompt staging by intending exhibitors at the coming show. The final schedule and tickets can be procured from J. B. McArdle, secretary, Greenwich, Conn. J. B. McArdle.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

NEW YORK BELTING

PACKING CO. LTD
91-93 CHAMBERS ST. NEW YORK

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking. "Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

The Market.

Real autumn weather is now setting in and the local florists are hurrying palms and porch decorations under shelter for the winter. People have returned from their cottages by the lake and are thinking once more of beautifying their city homes with flowers and plants. The chrysanthemum season is just commencing here. Roses are good and carnations are coming on nicely. Violets and gardenias, too, are seen here and there, while cattleyas are always in evidence.

Various Notes.

THE COLE GLASS CO., Lancaster, Ohio

SPRINGFIELD, O.

The monthly meeting of the Springfield Florists' Club was held October 9, at the office of the Good & Reese Co. The retiring president, Charles W. Schmidt, entertained the members with a characteristic and pleasing farewell address and turned the chair over to his successor, Christian Binning. In assuming the duties of the office, Mr. Binning thanked the members for the honor conferred upon him, and his first announcement was to the effect that he would secure a gavel with which to encourage every person present at coming meetings to invariably address the chair, and thus facilitate the prompt and decorous transaction of business.

The club was greatly encouraged to a continuation of effort toward the beautification of the city by a letter from one of the school principals, which read, in part, as follows: "On behalf of my patrons, pupils and teachers and myself, I wish to thank you for the most remarkable revolution wrought in the general appearance of the Garfield school yard. We wish to extend our thanks to the Geo. H. Mellen Co. and their superintendent, Mr. Binning. They have done for the Garfield school what the board of education has failed to do for half a century and they are certainly entitled to the credit. Mr. Binning's color scheme has excited no little comment and he can well feel proud of his expenditure of time and labor at our place."

The special committee on place of meeting reported in favor of accepting the offer of the Commercial Club to make use of its rooms on the second Monday evening of each month. This plan was adopted and the next meeting will be held accordingly and will be in the nature of a banquet, at which various members of the club will make addresses.

The former plant of the Fairview Floral Co., at Beatty, will be dismantled and the houses removed by the Geo. H. Mellen Co., who will reërect them adjoining their large range of houses and will install a central heating plant next summer. The three acres of ground and residence have been purchased by Wm. F. Davis, who will take possession June 1, 1912.

Billy Sunday has taken our city by storm and his tabernacle service was attended October 13 by over 200 florists in a body, employers and employees marching in together and occupying a special reserved section of seats in the center of the house. Ge Dale.

A SPRAY OF MUMS.

This is chrysanthemum season and for the next six weeks the florist who believes in using the stock that is in vogue will feature the queen of autumn flowers. Chrysanthemums may be used in practically all the ways other flowers are used. To the decorator and the design maker who likes bold, striking effects there is no flower more serviceable. The accompanying illustration shows a spray of white chrysanthemums made by the Jones-Russell Co., Cleveland. Note the use of big bunches of violets with the ribbon tie.

A CHRYSANTHEMUM WEDDING.

Backed by a Wall of Oak Leaves.

Here is a design for a wedding decoration, planned for a living room 12x24 feet. The two ends of the room were each occupied by an outside door and a window on each side of the doors. One end was the front entrance and the opposite one opened onto a porch. Halfway down the length of the room was a fireplace, the chimney jutting three feet from the wall. To the left of the rear window, on the opposite side, was the stairway. The ceremony was to take place at the rear end of the living room, which, as was just stated, was nearly all glass.

A Complete Change of Scene.

It was decided to eliminate these features of the rear wall for the time being by erecting a new wall, the first layer of which consisted of a stretch of poultry netting, from the picture molding, close to the ceiling, to the floor. On the sides the netting was tacked securely to the edge of the window frames. From the picture molding, in the center of each window, was hung a panel mirror, over the wire, but flat against it.

The next step was to fasten small branches of autumn-tinted oak leaves flat against the wire netting, till the wire was completely covered. These leaves also extended far enough over the mirrors to hide their edges and cut into their surfaces slightly and irregularly. Next another layer of wire was laid on, this time over the oak leaves. This wire had previously been painted bronze green. When pressed against the bronze oak leaves it left a light, spidery tracery over them. That part which covered the surface of the mirror was cut out. The netting is most easily put on in sections of its own width, clinching the edges with wire.

The Fireplace.

Against the end of the jutting fireplace, which stands opposite the mirror on one side, was a tangled panel of bitter-sweet in berry. Opposite the front of the fireplace, at the farther wall, stood an upright piano. Its end was opposite the left-hand mirror. A rattan screen, covered with the bitter-sweet and set against the end of the piano, made a companion piece to that on the end of the fireplace. Thus the mirror panels both reflected the bitter-sweet, otherwise scarcely visible to the guests facing the wedding party.

Two tall jars of handsome yellow mums were set behind the bridal party, against the oak wall. The flowers drooped outward like a canopy over their heads. About the base of each vase was a group of potted plants of the same variety, thus carrying the color effect to the floor. A newel post decoration consisted of a high-handled basket of the same flowers. The balustrade was trimmed with a mat of oak leaves, woven in and out the entire length of the stairway.

The Mantel.

The brick mantel was banked with fern plants, ranging in variety through Farleyense, cuneatum and Croweanum to gracillimum. The wall space above the mantel, being a light buff, was covered with a lace-like tracery of separate smilax sprays, held in place by strands of No. 36 wire fastened to the picture molding. A single vase of medium sized yellow mums stood against a plant of Farleyense on one end of the mantel.

If anyone wished to use this plan and elaborate upon it, the wall of oak leaves could be extended all the way around the room. Against it a border of vases, each holding one large chrysanthemum, could be added. These vases should stand high enough to be seen just above the heads of the guests.

mums, with the stems of each mum laid lengthwise at either end of the group. One mum with its filling of valley, and accompanied by the stem like the tail of a comet, occupied each end of the rectangular table. The stem trailers pointed toward the center.

That the mums, thus treated, lose any of their value artistically, would scarcely be admitted even by the most

IS THIS THE ULTIMATE?

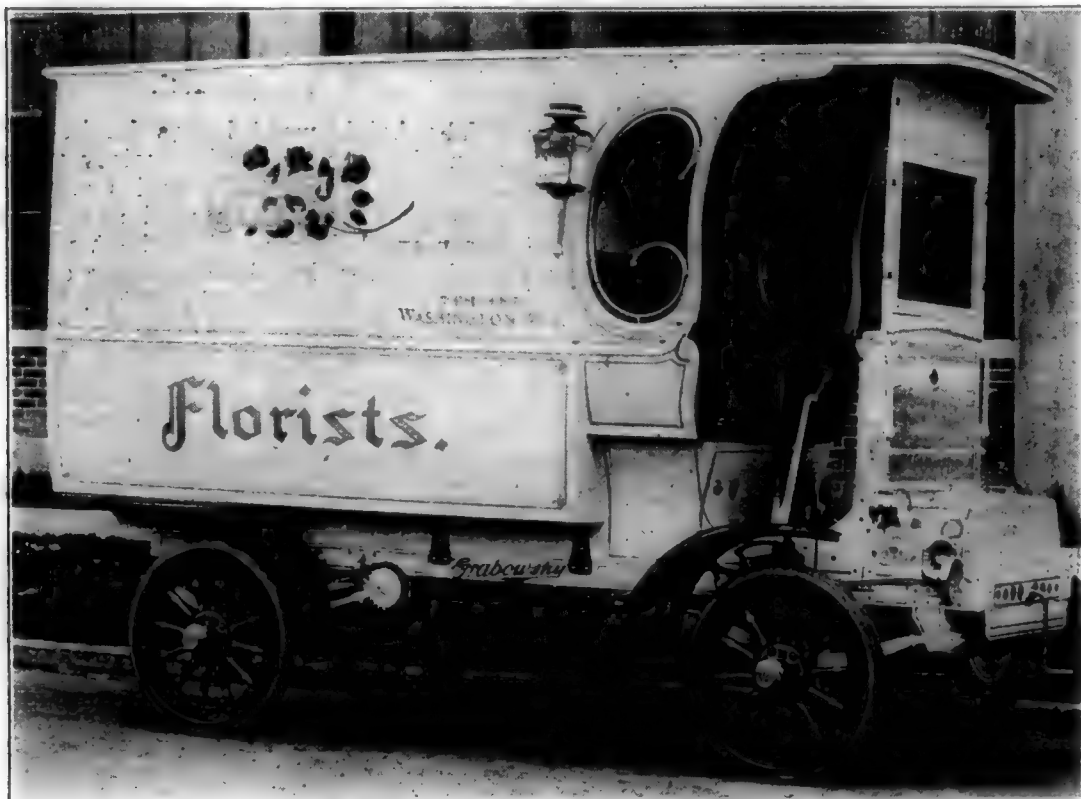

The automobile shown in the accompanying illustration is said to be the first in the world to be equipped with a refrigerator system for the preservation of flowers in course of delivery during the hot months. Right to the other extreme, it also is fitted with a patent exhaust apparatus which heats the wagon body in cold weather, just as florists heretofore have done by means of the portable wagon warmer. The car is the one just put on the streets of St. Louis by Grimm & Gorly. Its capacity is one ton. It is equipped with electric lights, both inside and outside. The machine was made by the Grabowsky Power Wagon Co., Detroit.

FOR A WEDDING DINNER.

Charles G. Pahud, manager of the Pahud Floral Co., Indianapolis, decorated the table for the dinner following the recent Pahud-Asperger wedding, shown in the accompanying illustration. The centerpiece consisted of a large wedding cake placed upon a mirror 30 x 36 inches, bordered by White Killarney roses through which were strung sixteen small incandescent lamps. On each side of the wedding cake was a large vase of White Killarney roses set among palms, ferns and crotons, through which were strung 100 small incandescent lamps. The table was 10 x 16 feet and seated twenty-four people.

THE HOLLYWOOD GARDENS.

There is no part of the United States in which the florists' business is showing more rapid development than has been the case in the Pacific northwest in the last few years. The cities there have grown at a prodigious rate, and floriculture has kept pace. Take Seattle, for instance. At the census of 1900 its population was 80,671, while in 1910 it was 237,194, an increase of 194 per cent. There are only seven cities in the whole country that showed as large a percentage of growth, and of these only one, Los Angeles, was as large as Seattle ten years ago, or is as large today. Is it any

Facing the mirrors, leave a panel of the window glass free of the wire, arrange the bitter-sweet panels outside of the windows and illuminate with a single electric light so that only the diffused light is thrown upon the bitter-sweet, the globe itself being out of sight.

The Dining Room.

For the dining room, which opens from the living room by a double entrance to the right of the front door, were arranged two features only. Until after the ceremony the dining room was closed by two rattan screens swung from the sides of the double doorway. These were trimmed solidly, but not heavily, with bitter-sweet. Connecting the two screens, the combined width of which did not quite span the width of the doorway, was a drape of wide orange satin ribbon, caught with a long loop and end from the upper corner of one screen to the lower corner of the opposite screen. A thin garland of smilax was caught and draped with the ribbon. When dinner was announced, the screens were swung back against the walls of the dining room on each side of the entrance, making decorative panels on the walls.

The Bride's Table.

The bride's table was done quite simply in valley and yellow mums. The mums were of the loose sort, incurved and large. The flowers were cut from their stems. But wait—the stems were a part of the scheme too. The flowers were laid face up on the table and used as centerpieces for the valley. Tiny moss baskets, with the handles removed, were filled with valley and foliage and set in the mum flowers. There was a central group of fine fastidious. It certainly is a welcome change from the overheavy, vulgar table displays so often seen. It seems from some of these decorations, called so by courtesy, that many florists fairly tumble over themselves in the attempt to pile in a little more than the last man has done. It is the fault of the craft that there is such a demand for showy work. Just as good a price might as well be had for more taste, more designing and less material.

wonder the florists of Seattle find business on the boom?

The business conducted under the name of the Hollywood Gardens, at Seattle, was founded only a short time ago, but already it occupies a prominent place among the florists' establishments of that city, and is evidently prosperous and progressive, like the city itself. The proprietors are Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Stimson. During the summer of 1910 they added four greenhouses to their range in the suburbs, and in the first part of September of that year they opened a handsome new store in the Haight building, at the corner of Second avenue and Pine street, in the midst of the shopping district. The interior of this store is shown in one of the photographs here reproduced. The manager, T. B. Pritchard, thinks it is one of the finest stores on the Pacific coast—or did he say the finest on the coast, without exception? The range of fourteen greenhouses shown in the other picture has been added to in the last few months by the erection of two carnation houses, 70x225. The automobile used for delivery, the first of its kind in the city, is shown in front of the greenhouses.

HOW SHALL IT BE DONE?

I have, a few feet away from my greenhouse, a large elm stump so located that it is impossible for me to blow it out or grub it out. Will some reader of The Review please let me know how to kill it out in the quickest way?

NORTHERN INDIANA FLORISTS.

The Fort Wayne Meeting.

The Northern Indiana Florists' Association held its quarterly meeting at Fort Wayne, October 18, at which time the regular business was transacted.

A committee had been appointed to prepare a program for the next meeting, which will be held January 17, 1912, at South Bend. Said committee reported the following program: A paper on "System," by W. W. Coles; "How We Conduct Our Retail Business," by J. S. Stuart; "Carnation Growing," by W. J. Vesey, Jr.

A poll was taken to ascertain the amount of improvements made by the members during the year, which were as follows:

Conner-Ulsh Floral Co., rebuilding.....	$10,000
Muncie Floral Co., improvements.....	100
Ten Eyck & Son, rebuilding.....	1,000
John S. Leach, new houses.....	1,500
Frank & Sons, new houses.....	15,000
Henry W. Johnson, improvements.....	100

Wagoner Floral Co., improvements.....	500

Total.....$43,800

Since our last meeting, we have lost one member by death, Clyde Isenberger. Fitting resolutions were adopted and ordered spread on the minutes, and a copy mailed to the bereft wife.

The committee on exhibition, consisting of Harry White, J. S. Leach and J. S. Stuart, submitted its report, stating that as a whole the display and arrangements made a fine showing. The awards were as follows:

Chrysanthemums—Vase of Mme. Touset, W. J. & M. S. Vesey, first; Muncie Floral Co., second. Vase of V. Poehlmann, W. J. & M. S. Vesey, first.

Vase of Omega, W. J. & M. S. Vesey, first; Miss C. B. Flick, second.

E. G. Hill Co. showed some new early pink, white and yellow mums; Willis Kinyon, a vase of mixed mums; W. J. & M. S. Vesey, pots of well grown pink and white mums.

Roses—Beauties, Bassett & Washburn, first. Vase of Kaiserin, Muncie Floral Co., first. Vase of Richmond, Frank & Sons, first; Bassett & Washburn, second; W. J. & M. S. Vesey, third. Vesey, first; Frank & Sons, second; W. H. Troyer, third. Frank & Sons also showed some good White Perfection, White Wonder, and a red seedling of much merit.

Vesey's table of orchids in variety was fine and proved a great attraction. They also showed 8-inch pans of Scholzei ferns, and 12-inch pots of Whitmani and Boston ferns. Their banks of fine, assorted decorative plants added much to the display.

The Muncie Floral Co. had a good display of poinsettias, plumosus, Sprenger, painted labels, pot covers and bulbs.

"CANNA LILIES."

It was Columbus day, one of those perfect afternoons in October when the haze of Indian summer intensifies the color of flower and foliage to a degree that arouses admiration in all. The Chester valley, beautiful at all times, was doubly so that afternoon. The greens and browns that predominated as you climbed the hill beyond West Grove gave way to a mass of rich coloring, seldom, if ever, seen before. Broad sought in this work. Success comes gradually, but when one glances back over the seventeen years of Mr. Wintzer's work with the canna his success seems little short of marvelous. As I remember it then a canna was a canna; Indian shot, the gardeners called them, probably on account of the hard seed, that requires twenty-four hours in hot water to secure prompt germination. They were usually red and were grown for the foliage more than for the flower.

ress made in cannas is not wonderful?

There were many special features of interest. Here was Minnehaha in perfect form, the indescribably soft shade of blush pink of the large flowers contrasting charmingly with broad bronze foliage. There was Mrs. Alfred F. Conard, recognized as the best pink canna today; color, size and freedom of bloom are unsurpassed. Beyond, Olympic, a wonderful canna of carmine or orient red coloring that makes it unique. I might go on and on with descriptions of varieties of striking beauty, but one more will do. It is an interesting comparison between Buttercup, still the standard yellow canna, and Brilliant, a claimant for that honor, of great vigor and remarkable freedom of bloom. There are new cannas coming, cannas of promise. Some day they will make their mark. It is my wish to make known the cannas of today. Wherever plants are grown outdoors, for beauty and effect, these cannas should have their place. Phil.

expanses of green and bronze foliage, covering acres of ground, were lit by magnificent clusters of large, bright-hued flowers in more colors and shades of color than I have ever seen elsewhere. The effect was heightened by the colors being planted together, a number in a block, while the blocks are distributed in various parts of the ground, allowing the other crops, mostly green, such as Japanese barberry, to intervene. I wish I could convey to you an idea of the beauty of the scene; it was like a table decoration, exquisite as to color and arrangement; or, if you are a landscape artist, fancy an effect that you have dreamed of but could not achieve for lack of suitable material or for want of liberality in your customer.

A nearer view brought out the exquisite colors of the varieties more clearly, the softness and richness of the pinks resembling the rose or the orchid. The purity of the whites is a distinct achievement from the hybridizer's art.

At the foot of the slope where the cannas were growing Antoine Wintzer was busily engaged in lifting certain pots, mostly seedlings, for hybridizing. You know he pots them and takes them indoors, thus insuring a winter crop of flowers. With the aid of the camel's-hair brush another set of seedlings is secured by springtime and a season gained in the march of progress. The true hybridizer has a definite aim with every cross attempted. Vigor, shade of color, size of bloom, one or more of a dozen different qualities that combine to make up the modern canna, are

WINTERING GERBERAS.

Will you kindly inform me whether gerberas are hardy? Is it safe to leave them out for the winter? Sometimes, in this New Mexico climate, the temperature goes 1 to 5 degrees below zero for a few nights and then it may change and not even freeze for a while. The sun is quite hot and we rarely have cloudy weather. I bought some hybrid gerberas in the spring and some plants are beginning to bloom for the first time. Will it be best to take them up and plant them in benches or pots in the carnation houses? R. V. B.

These charming annuals, commonly known as the Barberton daisies, are natives of South Africa. The best known variety, G. Jamesoni, named in honor of Dr. Jameson, leader some years ago in the historical raid with which his name is identified, is a native of the Transvaal. While the summers there are hot, as with you, the temperature never falls to near zero, as in your state, and while I have known these plants on high, well drained ground to winter outside even in New England, I would not advise you to leave your plants outdoors, for in winter and early spring, the seasons when the flowers have the most commercial value, you could get nothing from the plants outdoors even if they lived. A bench in a carnation house with an average winter minimum temperature of 50 to 52 degrees will suit them nicely and, heated thus, they will give you quite a few flowers. Lift them as carefully as possible, so as to have some soil adhere to the roots.

If you can plant some stock outdoors about the last part of April, you will get some fine flowers in late summer—better than can be had under glass. It would be worth while to experiment with a few plants, mulching with leaves or straw as freezing weather arrives.

HYDRANGEAS FOR SPRING.

We have 500 hydrangeas ordered for November delivery, grown in 6-inch pots. How shall we handle them to get best results for Easter and Memorial day?

W. & G.

It is important that the hydrangeas should not have been exposed to any sharp frosts before being forwarded. Well ripened wood will stand considerable cold, but green, immature wood is easily injured. Presuming, however, that your plants were all right when received, place them in a cold pit or greenhouse close to the light, or in a light cellar where they can be kept as little above freezing as possible, and if the wood is plump, a little frost will not harm them. Plants intended for Easter flowering should be run on the dry side, exposed to full sun, and by Christmas they should have hard, nutty-like wood. As the pots are doubtless a mass of roots, it will be better to give the plants a little shift, using a fibrous compost; 8-inch pots will produce fine specimens, carrying up to a dozen heads each. Start right after Christmas, in a temperature of 50 degrees. Spray freely, but do not water too much until the plants have broken freely; then give water in abundance. As they advance, raise the temperature 5 degrees. When flower heads are showing, 60 degrees at night, free syringing and lots of water will be needed. Feed liberally when the plants are well rooted around the pots. As the heads show color, keep a trifle cooler if time will permit.

For Memorial day, the plants can come on more naturally. Start in a cool house in February. As Easter stock goes out, give them more space and heat. Remember always that hydrangeas are thirsty subjects and like plenty of feeding. Never allow green aphids to get any foothold. Gas, force of water, spraying with nicotine, Aphine and other insecticides, as well as ordinary fumigations with nicotine, will, any one of them, keep the plants clean.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Bay Trees.

The time to house bay trees depends on the weather. While they will stand considerable frost in the fall, they are easily injured in spring. It is generally safer to house them after November 1, and in some places even earlier, for it is unwise to subject them to a lower temperature than 20 to 22 degrees above zero. The cellar in which they are stored should have light from above and the doors should be kept wide open on every favorable day. While the plants will not need nearly so much water in winter as at other seasons, they should be looked over occasionally and never be allowed to become really dry, or they will suffer.

Planting Out Bulbs.

The planting out of bulbs should be completed as soon as possible, for the longer the bulbs are out of the soil, the poorer will they flower. Of course, it is possible to delay this planting, even until December, but the results are never so satisfactory.

Liliums, except candidum, which will already have been planted, do not usually arrive until November or December. It is well to prepare the ground for them and mulch with straw or leaves, planting them as soon as they arrive. Such varieties as auratum, Henryi, speciosum, Brownii, Hansoni and tigrinum should be planted ten to twelve inches deep. Use no fresh manure in the soil. Lay some sand below them and scatter some more over them, sufficient to cover the bulbs. It is particularly important to plant liliums as quickly as possible after being received, to secure the best results.

Dahlias.

The present autumn has been a particularly open one and in many places dahlias are still blooming with great freedom. It is, of course, unwise to cut them down while the flowers last, but after they are frozen, they should be cut down to within six or eight inches of the ground, lifted on a sunny day and allowed to dry well before storing them, and be careful not to place them in too warm and drying a place. They are best kept in a cellar which is frostproof without the use of fire heat, laid on racks or shelves to keep them away from moisture. A cellar which will keep potatoes well should be all right for dahlias. If there are only a few roots, put them in boxes and then cover with dry sand. Stored thus, they will come out all right in spring, and when thus covered a little frost in the cellar will not reach the roots.

Shamrocks.

Late in October or early in November is a suitable time to sow seeds of shamrock intended for St. Patrick's day, March 17. A variety of shamrocks are offered and no one knows what the true shamrock is, while many deny that St. Patrick used the shamrock at all. In England and Ireland most of the shamrock sold March 17 each year is Oxalis Acetosella, the wood sorrel, the balance being chiefly Trifolium repens, the white clover. The former is always fresher and greener in March than the clover. In America, most of the shamrocks are the trifolium, but special shamrock seed is purchasable at a higher rate. Sown at the time stated, any of the varieties used as shamrocks will be of a salable size. They want a cool house all the time.

Wallflowers.

Every retail florist with any claims of being up-to-date likes to get hold of a few bunches of wallflower daily. It is, unfortunately, not a hardy plant over most of the United States and must, therefore, be lifted and potted or benched in the fall. Both the yellow and blood red varieties sell well, as everyone seems to enjoy the spring-like suggestion in the odor of the flowers. Wallflowers want a cool house at all times and will not stand any forcing. Early in the new year small bunches are much in demand and it pays every florist with a general retail trade to grow a few pots if he has the space.

Schizanthus.

The earliest sown batch of schizanthus seedlings should now be well established in 5-inch pots and, if they have been given one or two pinchings, they should be shapely and will not need any supports until near flowering time. While schizanthus is especially valuable as a pot plant in early spring, it may be had in bloom for Christmas. If wanted at that date, discontinue pinching. Give the plants a shift into 7-inch pots. If they are in 4-inch pots move first into 6-inch pots, using rich soil. Place where they are close to the glass, in a house which is freely aired and not kept over 50 degrees at night. Schizanthus, to be stocky, must be grown cool and, unless wanted early, they will be better kept at 45 degrees at night or even lower. If a further batch of seed is sown early in November, nice flowering plants can be had in March. The best pot variety, on account of its dwarf habit, is S. Wisetonensis, but there are some large-flowered hybrids which are fine.

CARNATIONS

TO RENEW EXHAUSTED SOIL.

What fertilizers, and what quantities per acre, should we use to restore exhausted land, which has been planted to carnations for two successive seasons? Cow manure is not procurable. We want lasting fertilizers, which will promote a rank growth of carnations. The land is a fine, sandy loam and in spots is almost pure sand, where, of course, the growth is most unsatisfactory and the plants are not of healthy color. We are located in central California.

C. L. W.

Unless a soil has at least a fairly good base of loam to build up from, it is difficult to improve it in a permanent way. Such soil as you describe will not retain fertility for any length of time, and it does not contain the necessary elements to make what plant foods you add assimilable. Hence, no matter what you may add, the plants will not thrive for any length of time. Cow manure, being the most complete plant food of all the natural manures, would be the best thing to put on your soil, and if you cannot secure it your chances for success are not bright. Rotted stable manure will, of course, help your soil to some extent, but not as much as the cow manure would, as it has a tendency to lighten the soil, and your soil is already too light for best results.

It would be better to select those spots which are heavier and plant your carnations on those. A. F. J. B.

GREEN APHIS.

I am enclosing a leaf of a Boston fern and also of a carnation, which are both infested with bugs. As this is my first experience with them, I wish you would kindly suggest a remedy and also state the cause. The green bugs I first noticed when I had a shipment of cinerarias. I tried tobacco fumes, but had poor results. As I am a beginner, I shall greatly esteem your advice.

E. M. L.

The specimens forwarded seemed free from insects on arrival here. The green bugs which you mention in connection with the cinerarias are most likely the common green aphid. These are easily destroyed with tobacco fumes or by spraying with the nicotine extracts. We prefer the latter, as being more effective and cleanly. Full directions are given with each can, so it is unnecessary to give directions here.

Keep your carnations free from this pest, or you will have trouble in the future with stigmonose, which will destroy the vigor of your stock. In growing carnations, as well as all other plants, you should use these insecticides mildly right along as a preventive, rather than wait until the plants become infested and then use them in double doses to rid the plants of the pests.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

THE MUM SPECIALIST'S NOTES.

Some of the Newer Mums.

Every recurring chrysanthemum season brings some surprises to the grower and this year is no exception. Varieties that have been figured on to be in flower by the first or second week in October will have a fit of capriciousness and not come in flower till some two weeks later, or the varieties generally classed as midseason to late will be in flower ahead of their time, and so the game goes merrily on.

No novelties seem to have been presented before the committee to date, something that has not happened for a long while. My own seedlings and the varieties under test of the Wells-Pocket type are all late this year, and the first of the shows, opening October 25, have seen but little that is new presented, so far as we are concerned. Pompons and single varieties are also easily ten days later than usual and the early shows are likely to suffer somewhat in consequence.

Smith's Advance and Unaka.

In the newer commercial types, Smith's Advance has, all things considered, made an excellent showing. It certainly is early. Our first flowers were cut from about the middle to the end of September. There has been some complaint about its buds refusing to swell, but that is only to be expected with such intense heat as we have experienced this year. It is really against its natural character for a mum to flower so early as this variety will. A peculiar fact about Smith's Advance is that while it showed not the faintest trace of color with us, yet in England, both under glass and outdoors, it has shown a decided tendency to go pink. One would have thought that the cooler atmosphere would have preserved its color and its original character, instead of which it seems to have acted the other way.

To Unaka must be given the place of honor in early pinks, for size. A flower ready to cut October 1, with perfect stem and foliage, must be classed among the varieties that have come to stay.

Mrs. Wm. Arnold.

A white that has made a splendid showing and is apparently just now beginning to be appreciated at its true worth is Mrs. Wm. Arnold, a variety that I distributed in 1910. It leaves nothing to be desired in stem and foliage, is a grand keeper and shipper and has been in the market in magnificent condition since October 1. At this season it has been in direct competition with Beatrice May, and while some wonderful flowers of the latter have been seen in the market, Arnold will displace it, for it has a splendid habit and the foliage is fine, whereas Beatrice May, while a magnificent flower, is delicate and the foliage is almost invariably marked and disfigured.

R. F. Felton and Chrysolora.

Another of our 1910 introductions that seems to be coming into its own is R. F. Felton. This is the deepest possible shade of yellow and, in spite of the recent continuous rains and dirty weather, it has not showed the least sign of damping or spotting. This alone endears it to the heart of many growers who can not or will not take the time to use proper precautions when watering their plants when the thing applies to both Lady Carmichael and F. T. Quittenton, two of last year's novelties that are making a good showing. The former is white and the latter crimson. They are today the strongest growers in the house and can not fail to render a good account of themselves.

Wm. Turner will be somewhat late for the early shows, but there are possibilities in this flower, from a commercial as well as exhibition standpoint, that will most likely be brought out this year. W. Wells says that Wm. Turner is a much better variety than Mrs. David Syme. There will be, apparently, a difference of some three weeks between them in flowering and they will not, therefore, conflict with each other, but I shall indeed be surprised if Turner does not go down into 1912 as one of the best.

weather is bad, and to keep the temperature exactly right.

The new Chrysolora seems to be living up to its description, though some growers, myself included, took the bud too early and the flowers suffered in consequence, both in size and finish. Yellows are none too plentiful just at the time when Chrysolora is ready to cut and it certainly will find a welcome.

Last Year's Exhibition Sorts.

Coming now to the exhibition varieties of last year's introduction, the largest thing so far developed is F. E. Nash, a reflexed pink of enormous size, a shade early, perhaps, for some of the exhibitions, but one that certainly must be reckoned with in the future, by present indications.

Mrs. G. C. Kelly is going to live up to the kind words of last year. I shall be surprised if the exhibition season does not show this variety in grand shape almost everywhere. The same

NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

Since the beginning of October, business conditions have improved considerably, owing to the numerous fall weddings and other social functions, some of which have been quite pretentious. The customary fall openings of the leading dry goods houses called for several decorations which were of an elaborate style.

As far as the sale of pot plants, both wholesale and retail, is concerned, a marked decline is now noticeable in comparison with former years. The different florists' establishments are well stocked with all kinds of plants, in the best of condition, waiting for an opportunity to be disposed of. It is hoped that, with the advance of the season, there will be an increased demand for plants.

This year we had the most adverse weather conditions that could befall the many chrysanthemum growers. Excessive heat and continuous rains nearly up to the present time were the cause of all kinds of diseases. Although more stock was planted than in former years, and the cool, dry weather of the last few days has helped the development of the flowers considerably, the output on All Saints' day, November 1, will be far below expectations, especially in regard to first-class flowers. For this day the Mrs. Robinson mum is chiefly planted, with a light sprinkling of a few early pink and yellow varieties. The average prices for white mums are from $3 to $5, and, no matter how scarce the flowers are, the general buyers decline to go above those figures. Roses and carnations, mostly pink and white, will surely be in great demand November 1, to make up for the deficiency in chrysanthemums.

Club Meeting.

The New Orleans Horticultural Society held an interesting and exceptionally well attended monthly meeting October 19, at Kolb's German tavern. President Claude Ory and Secretary C. R. Panter were in their respective places.

The main feature of the session was the discussion of the advisability of holding a flower show either in the spring or fall of next year. Several members expressed their views on this subject, but most of them feared that a show consisting only of products of the local florists would not attract the attention desired. Secretary Panter outlined a plan whereby this society should get in communication with the Progressive Union, of this city, the state government and all the kindred bodies in the line of horticulture and agriculture in Louisiana, to arouse their interest in the holding of a state fair in the early part of November next year. He made a motion that a committee of six be appointed to act, that a certain sum be drawn to defray preliminary expenses, and that, if possible, a report be brought in at the next meeting. The motion was unanimously adopted and the following committee was appointed: C. R. Panter, chairman; Richard Steckler, Harry Papworth, Paul Abele, Edward Baker and J. A. Newsham.

A communication was received from the Progressive Union, inviting the members of this society to maintain a permanent exhibit on the verandas, lobbies, etc., of their new building, the plants being labeled and credit being given to the donors. P. A. Chapin, Joseph Steckler and Harry Papworth were appointed a committee, with instructions to report at the next meeting.

J. A. Newsham exhibited a fine specimen of Dendrobium formosum giganteum, with thirteen flowers on one stem.

Abele Bros. showed some fine flowers of Chrysanthemum Mrs. Robinson.

Dan Newsham and John Bollwinkle sent in applications for membership.

Richard Eichling will read a paper on "A Few Foliage Plants for the Wholesale and Retail Markets" at the next meeting, November 16.

Various Notes.

Abele Bros. have a fine lot of Mrs. Robinson mums, which will undoubtedly be sold out at a good price November 1. The greenhouses and garden are well stocked with all kinds of plants, in a good, healthy condition.

M. Cook's Sons have a good batch of Robinsons; also a large quantity of Olea fragrans, Magnolia fuscata, Laurus Camphora, etc.

Claude Ory, manager for the H. Menard estate, has his chrysanthemums far enough advanced to make a good cut on All Saints' day.

U. J. Virgin has been kept busy during this month with flower work and decorations, including the furnishing of about 600 foliage plants for the fall opening of the Maison Blanche department store.

Henry Rehfeld's Robinsons are among the cleanest and most advanced seen so far.

The Metairie Ridge Nursery Co. has moved into its new and elegant store on Carondelet street and reports a good business in all branches, especially in wedding work.

Bruno Werner, one of the young hustlers, will move in the beginning of November to his new place on Maple street, in the uptown district of the city. The property comprises four lots of ground and a residence. He will begin immediately to build a modern greenhouse and office.

The members of the German Gardeners' Club were recently the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Fabacher. Mr. Fabacher is a noted capitalist and a lover of everything pertaining to horticulture. His garden and conservatory are the finest in the city. The tables were set in the newly built pergola, connected with the picturesque residence. Elegant palms, rare foliage plants, vines and hanging baskets of asparagus and ferns are artistically arranged throughout this new building, and the effect is heightened by a beautiful, multi-colored electric fountain. Refreshments of all kinds were served in abundance and hearty words of appreciation of the generosity of the host and hostess fell from the lips of the happy throng. Henry Kraak, Mr. Fabacher's gardener, was highly commended on the fine condition of the garden and plants. R. E.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

The Market.

Business in general has been slow, though some of the florists have a good day occasionally. When we get a killing frost we can expect better business, as outdoor flowers are still abundant, although we had our first light frost of the season October 23. This is two or three weeks later than the arrival of frost last year. Mums are here in all their glory and are fine. Roses are excellent and carnations are improving. Dahlias are good.

Various Notes.

The Blackman Floral Co. has had a pretty window display lately, showing mums to perfection. The cut of roses and carnations is good and they have an abundance of green goods. At the greenhouses everything is in tiptop shape and a large cut is expected for Christmas. A large batch of poinsettias are looking fine and will be in for the holidays. This firm expects to add 100 feet to the My Maryland house next spring and plant it to Kaiserin for summer flowers. Killarney will be discarded in favor of My Maryland. They still believe in Bride and Bridesmaid and will keep on growing them.

Julius Niednagel & Sons are cutting fine mums, roses and carnations, the mums being extra good.

Henry Seymour is cutting nice mums and carnations. He owns the land between his greenhouses and his residence and this has been open as a street for years. Last summer the city ordered it closed, as some of the people on the street did not want it open. Just lately the city has ordered it opened again and it is probable that the city will buy it, since Mr. Seymour is willing to sell. Mrs. Seymour has been at Deaconess hospital about three weeks, recovering from an operation. She is improving right along.

Miss Nellie Goodge is much improved and is able to be at the greenhouses again, to help with the business.

Mrs. Ben Kramer is back after an extended sojourn in Colorado for her health.

Karl Zeidler will soon take his annual trip with a hunting party down in the wilds of Mississippi. At present he is over on the Wabash with a fishing party.

J. C. Elsperman has removed most of the plants grown outdoors into the greenhouses. The carnations and mums are looking fine.

Royston & Fenton are in crop with their roses again. E. L. Fenton is an enthusiastic member of the Poultry Association and has been out among the florists soliciting premiums for the coming poultry show. He was quite successful. E. L. F.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Business is improving, but it is not yet what it should be. The weather has been warm, with no frost to date, which does not stimulate trade. Stock is fairly plentiful. Carnations are enough to go around and improve in quality as the price advances. Orchids are plentiful, but the demand is rather light. Chrysanthemums are coming in, but not in so large quantities as last year. Killarneys and Beauties are first-class stock.

Various Notes.

The November meeting of the State Florists' Association is to be held at Richmond, Tuesday, November 7. The Indianapolis florists leave on the Pennsylvania train at 8 a. m. It is expected that there will be a large attendance, as Richmond is always an interesting place during the chrysanthemum season.

Adolph Baur, secretary of the American Carnation Society, is busy getting out the premium list.

One of the social events of the week was the wedding of Miss Louise Pahud and Otto Asperger, which occurred at the Pahud residence, October 18. The wedding ceremony was held at St. Mary's church at 8:30 a. m. and the dinner and reception at the residence in the evening. The house was elaborately decorated for the occasion. Mr. and Mrs. Asperger left for an extended honeymoon and will be at home at 3407 North Senate avenue after January 1.

Alvin Schreiber is the proud father of a baby boy.

Adolph Baur spent several days in Detroit last week, meeting with the committees in charge of the Carnation Society's meeting there in January.

W. W. Coles, of Kokomo, was here October 23, attending the ceremonial of the Shriners.

Baur & Steinkamp have been doing a great deal of overhauling at their place this year, having repainted in and out and built a new barn. Stock is in unusually fine shape.

Smith & Young have been shipping quantities of fine labiatas. Their Bride, Maid and Killarney are improving.

Hartje & Elder have been sending in some fine chrysanthemums.

E. J. Fancourt, with the Pennock-

Meehan Co., spent a day with the trade this week.

The Indianapolis Flower & Plant Co. has been cutting some good Beauties. Bert Stanley has taken a position with this concern.

Alfred Brandt spent several days in Chicago last week.

Irwin Bertermann is to officiate as judge at the St. Louis flower show next month.

Albert Pettit has been bringing in some first-class mums and carnations.

C. R. Greene, with A. Wiegand & Sons, has accepted a position in the Tabernacle choir. H. L. W.

PITTSBURGH, PA.

The Market.

Business has been going by fits and starts, sometimes good and then dropping off, and in fact it was quite unsatisfactory last week. There have been plenty of flowers of all kinds, as chrysanthemums have been coming in more plentifully every day. The retail stores have been making special offers of good flowers at low prices in order to get the regular flower buyers started, and the markets have been running over with the finest dahlias and cosmos for some weeks, as every farmer was contributing something. However, it looked Monday as if the outside flowers might see their finish soon, which will help the business somewhat.

Various Notes.

Several of the private greenhouses have opened their chrysanthemum shows to the public, as is their annual custom.

The Schenley conservatories were open to the public Sunday, but their show will be much better by next week, as many of the varieties are not yet showing color.

The Phipps conservatory, on the north side, had a fine display of begonias, but their chrysanthemums are a little late in coming along.

The McCallum Co. is now representing Myers & Samtman, Beauty growers, in this city.

J. B. Murdoch & Co. are getting some fine carnations from their Canonsburg greenhouses.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. is specializing on orchids, valley and Beauties.

Randolph & McClements are cutting some fine mums from their Stanton avenue houses. They also have an immense lot of poinsettias coming along for Christmas.

H. L. Blind & Bros. are cutting some fine chrysanthemums and roses from their West View houses. They report that business is good.

W. J. Smith is cutting fine tritomas and late gladioli at his Canfield, O., place.

Chas. Koenig, who has been consigning to the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., has some of the finest valley seen in years. He says the reports from the other side regarding valley pips for next year are not at all satisfactory.

Hoo-Hoo.

John Kober, 17 years old, messenger for a florist, was hit by a street car October 16. His right leg was broken.

From Trenton, N. J., comes the report of the incorporation of the Pittsburgh Florists' Exchange, of Camden, with $15,000 capital, by V. A. Murray, Harvey L. Lechner and Julian H. Kendig.

It is reported that E. B. Good has made an application in Common Pleas Court No. 1 for the appointment of a receiver for the South View Floral Co., of Baldwin township. The capital stock of the concern is $50,000.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

In spite of the fact that we have had no frost up to date, October 23, most of the outdoor flowers have come to naught, owing to the continued wet and cool weather. Still, it is probable that a killing frost would stimulate business all around. Last week trade was good, and at the beginning of this week all roses and carnations were cleaned up before night. Violets are commencing to come in and are of good quality, considering the prevailing conditions. The supply of mums is daily on the increase. There are enough lilies to meet all demands.

Various Notes.

The A. F. Kellner Co. furnished the table decorations for the banquet of the Teachers' Association, held October 21 at the Auditorium, at which 1,500 were assembled. In the line of cut flowers over 2,000 dahlias were used, besides large quantities of greens and autumn foliage.

On Thursday night of this week, President Taft will arrive in this city, to remain until Friday p. m. It is planned to have a large banquet, the largest in this city thus far, to be held Friday noon at the Auditorium.

Like Philadelphia, Milwaukee also has a florist by the name of Fox, who in some respects can be compared to the Pennsylvania man. The local firm of J. M. Fox & Son, of which James Fox, Jr., is manager, vacated its old stand, at 414 Milwaukee street, October 21, moving to the up-to-date store at the corner of Mason and Milwaukee streets. With an entirely new set of show cases, a larger ice-box and other first-class fixtures, the new store, all finished in white with gray trimmings, presents an elegant appearance. Another feature is the velvet-lined cases, in which the gold, silver and bronze ware is stored and displayed to good advantage. A spacious balcony around two sides of the store furnishes an ideal place for supplies, while an ice machine, operated on the brine system, is just the thing this firm has been wanting for some time. They state that business for October thus far exceeds that of any in the history of this firm.

Mrs. Baumgarten, of the Baumgarten Floral Co., made a business trip to Chicago October 21.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. reports the arrival of the first carload of azaleas in the first part of last week. The demand for florists' supplies is brisk and other business is highly satisfactory.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. says shipping trade is fine. Mr. Seel, formerly with the Milwaukee Journal, is the new bookkeeper, in charge since October 23, while Miss Ternes has been added to the store force.

It must be admitted that the show windows of the Edlfsen-Leidiger Co.

have been exceedingly attractive of late.

While the Currie Bros. Co. does not report an exceptionally fine run of business, the firm is well pleased and hopes the same gait will be kept up for some time.

Mrs. J. T. Hinchliffe, of Racine, Wis., was a Sunday caller.

Next Thursday, November 2, the monthly meeting of the Florists' Club will take place, and as this is the last meeting before the fall flower show, a large attendance is desired and expected.

August Ruesch says that Saturday, October 21, was the banner day thus far. E. O.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Last week seemed more in keeping with the season than any since the summer and in consequence there has been a general air of satisfaction. Several weddings of more than usual prominence, with house and church decorations, a number of large funerals and a few home and social functions have added to the bettered conditions. Mums are more plentiful and beginning to make their influence felt on other products. Roses are more abundant and carnations are of better quantity and quality. Prices remain about the same, with a slight reduction, if anything.

Various Notes.

The new Providence Wholesale Flower Market has finished its first week's existence with satisfactory results. It is confidently believed that as soon as the rough edges get smoothed off it will be the unanimous opinion that the market was just the thing that was wanted.

The Rhode Island Horticultural Society is showing the results of the change in officers and policies that went into effect last spring and the future is bright. At the regular monthly meeting, October 18, notwithstanding the steady down-pour of rain, there was a good attendance, including a large delegation from the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island, headed by President Robert Johnston and Vice-president Eugene Appleton. The speaker of the evening was W. N. Craig, of Boston, on bulbs. After his lecture, which was profusely illustrated, he conducted an interesting question box.

The monthly meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island was held October 16, with a good attendance. A nominating committee was appointed to present a list of officers for election at the November meeting. The society is to participate with the Rhode Island Horticultural Society in the show November 4 and 5. It is also to join with the state society in a series of lectures during the coming winter.

Thomas Roland, of Westerly, is sending some fine mums to the Boston market.

Timothy O'Connor furnished the decorations for the wedding of ex-Governor Charles Dean Kimball's daughter last week.

Joseph Kinder, of Bristol, spent last week in his camp on Prudence Island, in Narragansett bay.

Thomas T. Booth, at the Hill View

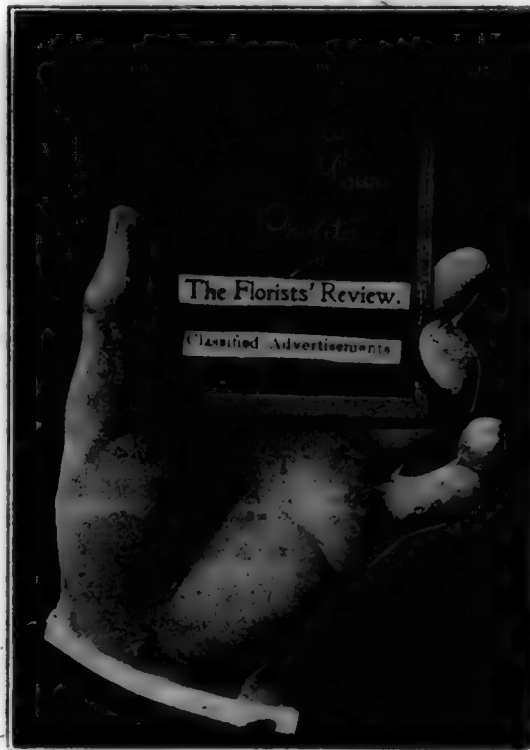

Greenhouses, Manville, has a fine showing of mums and carnations.

John G. Gardner, formerly in the greenhouses on the estate of James J. Van Allen, at Newport, has accepted a position in an orchid establishment at Los Angeles, Cal.

Johnston Bros. had the decorations for the Burlingame wedding last week.

William Hay is preparing to install a five horse-power electric motor for pumping purposes.

Misfortunes never come singly, and Nathan D. Pierce, of Norwood, can testify to this from his own experience of last week. His foot was injured by the falling of a heavy board upon it; a valuable horse died and the boiler in his greenhouse gave out.

The Home Nursery Co., at Norwood, has begun the erection of two new houses, 25x200 and 28x118.

W. H. M.

CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

The market is in a rather peculiar position. Judging from appearances, there is more than enough stock to fill orders, but when the buyer wants a certain flower and wants it in a hurry, then perhaps he must wait for the next shipment. Last week Estelle mums were the one great drag. While many were sold, the supply was so large that the price was hammered to the bottom. The returns from other varieties also suffered. With this large supply the regular arrivals of dahlias, cosmos and even asters and gladioli continue, and it is fortunate that we have the business that we have or a larger superfluity of supply might be apparent.

In roses the early part of last week Beauties were more than adequate, but now they sell up every day. Other sorts now clean up well. The carnation cut locally is long on good white, an occurrence that is more or less of a rarity here. The shades that were affected by the hot weather have been getting better each day, until now they are first-class.

As to other lines, lilies are not in large supply, but are of good quality.

Both double and single violets are coming in stronger and are in demand for corsages. Valley cleans up regularly. Orchids also enjoy a steady demand. In greens, the ferns are good and the same is true of the plumosus from the south.

Club Meeting.

At a special meeting of the Florists' Club October 23, the entertainment committee, composed of C. E. Critchell, P. J. Olinger and Charles H. Hoffmeister, submitted various plans for entertainment of visiting florists during the show in November. The club accepted the proposition of the Bismarck Cafe. The entire rathskeller at that place will be given over to the florists for a large Dutch lunch and smoker Thursday, November 16, at 8 p. m.

The executive committee of the flower show reported that another silver cup had been donated by the Sefton Mfg. Co. The committee placed it on the table decorations. All the cups will be placed on exhibition in a few days in a prominent downtown window. All the details of the exhibition have been arranged. Any firms wishing display space should write Wm. Murphy, 309 Main street.

Various Notes.

J. A. Peterson, who recently returned from Europe, brought with him plants of Nephrolepis exaltata superba, Cyrtomium Rochfordianum and new begonias from Kiev. R. W. Peterson left October 23 for a business trip through the middle west and Washington.

October 21 a burglar stole the telephone cable which held the wires to C. E. Critchell's and the Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange.

E. G. Gillett's wire factory is being taxed to the limit to keep up with orders.

It is with the greatest regret that we tell of the death of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Murphy's infant daughter, Evelyn Ruth, October 24.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange has its salesrooms in first-class shape. Last week they received their stock of supplies.

Albert McCullough is now cutting some excellent valley at his private conservatories.

Charles Pfeiffer is spending a few weeks in hunting at Bliss, Idaho.

Some of A. Sunderbruch's Sons' plants had a warm time October 23. They were caught in the fire that destroyed the A. B. Closson Co. art store.

C. E. Critchell now has more ferns in storage than he has had any previous year.

L. H. Kyrk has built a row of tables that he can raise and lower on hinges, so that he can have more space at his command during the rush hours in the morning.

Visitors: E. J. Fancourt, representing Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia; C. M. Witsch, representing American Foil Co., New York, and W. G. Matthews, Jr., of Dayton. C. H. H.

Burlington, Ia.—Mrs. Joseph Bock is continuing the prosperous business of her husband, recently deceased.

Albert Lea, Minn.—A greenhouse, 20x30, is being erected here for use in the experimental work of the high school agricultural department.

NEWS, NOTES, AND COMMENTS

READERS ARE INVITED TO CONTRIBUTE ITEMS FOR THIS DEPARTMENT.

Johnson City, Tenn.—S. A. Swan is successor to Swan & Cheggin, shippers of evergreens with headquarters formerly at Hunt Dale, N. C.

New Haven, Conn.—Smith T. Bradley says he can not afford space to grow mums for exhibition, the call for flowers of medium size taking all the space.

Bridgeport, Conn.—Carl C. Reck, of the firm of John Reck & Son, has returned from Europe, where he spent the summer in calling on the trade and purchasing bulbs.

Pine Hill, N. Y.—George Hawley is erecting another greenhouse on his property at 994 Madison avenue. The house is 19x75, the same size as the one he built about a year ago.

New Cumberland, Pa.—Mr. Hanson and Mr. Martin, of Reading, have purchased the greenhouses formerly owned by John A. Kepner. They have also bought a double frame house opposite the greenhouses.

St. Cloud, Minn.—John Mattson has completed a new greenhouse, 18x91½ feet, with concrete walls. Aside from this addition, his range consists of four houses, each 108 feet in length. The new house will be used for palms, ferns and potted plants.

Pomona, N. C.—Another large greenhouse, 42½x500 feet, is nearing completion for the J. Van Lindley Nursery Co. It is of iron construction with concrete walls, and is said to have cost about $12,000. It will be used for carnations.

Salem, Mass.—Wm. T. Walke reports the retail branch of his business as steadily increasing. He was fortunate in getting in stocks of geraniums before frost. Nutt, Ricard and Poitevine are the best sellers; never get too many of these popular sorts.

Bradford, Pa.—Wilson & Rickerson, who are growers of both flowers and vegetables, recently bought the greenhouses of W. C. Rockwell. With this newly purchased range added to their former houses, they now have about 25,000 square feet of glass.

Toledo, O.—Clara K. Wisner has brought suit against the city for $4,500, on account of damage done to her business on Delaware avenue a year ago, when the city appropriated the ground on which her establishment was located and which she had leased.

Kalamazoo, Mich.—Garrett De Graaf, proprietor of the Kalamazoo Floral Co., has opened a store in the Krymer block, on West Main street. At his formal opening he made effective use of the slogan, "Grown for you, in Kalamazoo!" He has greenhouses on Cork street.

Kennebunk, Me.—J. O. Elwell has just completed a large addition to his greenhouses.

South Framingham, Mass.—W. R. Nicholson is finishing off three rooms in his service building, as living quarters for the night crew.

Warren, O.—Thomas Fletcher has purchased the Hoyt greenhouses, on West Market street and will remove them to his place on Wood street.

Cromwell, Conn.—Wallace R. Pierson is on a hunting trip in the Maine woods, preparatory to the fall campaign for the distribution of Double White Killarney rose.

Hartford, Conn.—John Coombs says he can not remember such a shortage of carnations at this time, but predicts heavy crops around the holidays. His chrysanthemums are fine and will be seen at several local exhibitions.

Lynn, Mass.—Gibbs Bros. have opened a new store, with a conservatory in the rear, at 231 and 233 Union street. It is one of the handsomest and best equipped stores in the city. The proprietors, J. O. and J. F. Gibbs, have been in business in this city for the last fifteen years and have built up a flourishing business. They have greenhouses on Holyoke street, West Lynn.

Council Bluffs, Ia.—The Herman Bros. Co. is building five more large greenhouses. With this addition, the firm will have more than 140,000 square feet of glass. The business has been growing rapidly since it was started here five years ago. The salesrooms, on Pearl street, near Broadway, are in charge of C. H. Robertson, and are models of attractiveness and convenience.

Reading, Pa.—B. & L. Steckler have erected a handsome store in front of their greenhouses, at 1018 Center avenue. They have also added a new automobile to their delivery outfit. The Steckler brothers have had charge of the business for about four years and have conducted it with great success. Their father, the late David H. Steckler, was proprietor for over twenty years.

West Hoboken, N. J.—Adolph Asmus was slightly injured recently while trying to recapture his automobile from thieves in New York city. Mr. Asmus caught on behind the machine while it was in motion, and attempted to climb over the rear into the seat, but was thrown off by a lurch of the car as it turned a corner. He fell on his back and was picked up unconscious. The car was found in a garage a few hours later, with nearly every accessory stripped from it.

Shadeland, Pa.—A new firm has been organized here, under the name of Lowry Bros. They are building a greenhouse and will grow a general stock of plants.

Catskill, N. Y.—Henry Hansen has completed a new house, 35x75, for carnations. It is the first of a new range to cover five acres of land. Carnations did well, considering the drought, and chrysanthemums are extra fine.

New Haven, Conn.—It is stated that John H. Slocombe, the Townsend avenue florist, won thirty-three first prizes on dahlias during September, besides twelve second prizes and one third prize. He also secured a gold medal and a Connecticut State Agricultural Society's medal.

Ansonia, Conn.—T. G. Mooney, proprietor of the Ansonia Floral Co., has rented half of the store at 158 Main street and will immediately remove from his present location at 124 Main street. The new store will give room for his increasing business and will afford opportunity for better window display and arrangement of stock and fixtures.

Kingston, N. Y.—Valentin Burgevin's Sons gave a public opening to inaugurate the season. It was well attended and everyone was pleased with the splendid stock and attractive appearance of the place. Wm. Williams has practically rebuilt his plant and intends to spread out still more. He feels much encouraged since acquiring the old Stone place.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y.—John Ralph had the decorations recently for the annual banquet of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Blue delphiniums and white roses were used throughout, these being the society's colors. Mr. Ralph also did the decorating for several of the large dinners given in honor of the Knights Templar when they held their convention here recently.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—C. M. Norton has given an option for the sale of his greenhouses and twelve acres of land on Plainfield avenue, opposite the Kent Country Club grounds, to J. Bakker, a market gardener, at $8,000, and it is likely the deal will go through. Mr. Norton inherited the property from his father, Deacon Norton, subject to claims of about $5,500, which was more than the land was worth at that time, twenty-eight years ago. Mr. Norton is now reputed to be worth $60,000 or $70,000 and made most of it in gardening and small fruits. If the sale of his greenhouses and garden goes through he will devote himself to his other property interests.

Pontiac, Ill.—Wm. J. Miller & Son have completed the erection of another large greenhouse on their property on the east side. The new house will be used for violets and lettuce.

Results bring advertising.
 The Review brings results.

SOME of the arriving azaleas are turning out to be of extremely unsatisfactory quality.

Now is the time to dispose of your surplus stock plants of chrysanthemums. The newer varieties will sell well if offered in The Review.

COSMOS LADY LENOX, introduced a few years ago by Arthur T. Boddington, New York, has been giving a splendid account of itself the last few weeks.

Isn't it just possible that silver cups have become so common as flower show prizes that they no longer possess advertising value either for winner or donor?

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

QUITE a few plant shippers think they pack well, whose customers know better. Packing is something of an art and, like other arts, is not to be mastered without painstaking effort.

It is understood that Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, has ceased to import azaleas, finding the line one that did not return a profit proportionate to the difficulty of giving satisfaction to the customers. It is reported that the company's azalea importations had grown to be 350,000 plants.

CANADIAN CUT FLOWERS.

The imports of cut flowers from Canada are insignificant, yet they are increasing. Here are the total values for the last three years:

1908.....	$2,192
1909.....	3,721

OBITUARY.

Mrs. L. Peel.

Mrs. Letitia Peel, who for twenty-six years had conducted a florist's establishment on Old Lawrence street, Flushing, N. Y., died at her home October 12, after an illness of several weeks. She was 78 years old. Her husband died a number of years ago. She is survived by four children.

Mrs. C. A. Lesure.

Lillian Jarvis Lesure, wife of Clyde A. Lesure, florist at Fitchburg, Mass., died October 19. She was only 29 years of age, a native of Troy, N. Y. She was highly educated and an extremely popular member of the community.

Charles A. Fox.

Charles A. Fox, one of the pioneer florists of Baltimore, Md., died Saturday afternoon, October 14, at his home, 1202 Bolton street. He was born in Baltimore eighty years ago. For the last half century he had conducted a flower store at Bolton and Dolphin streets, and at the time of his death he was known as one of the foremost horticulturists in Baltimore. He is survived by a widow, Mrs. Eliza Fox, three daughters, Misses Margaret, Jane and Nellie Fox, and two sons, William J. and Charles A. Fox.

WARNING!

Don't Pay Money to Strangers.

The Review has received several complaints that "a smooth-talking young fellow" has been falsely representing himself as working for The Review and soliciting new subscriptions or renewals in its name, frequently at a cut rate or with the promise of a premium, which in itself should be enough to arouse suspicion. If a receipt is given it never is on printed blanks, sometimes bears no name or address, but in one case was signed "H. Hunter," and in the latest instance was signed A. H. Kellogg.

Never pay money to strangers for The Review. Our representatives all are well known members of the trade in their respective localities.

A SATISFIED CUSTOMER.

Just as "a satisfied customer is the best advertisement," according to the old saying, so is a satisfied advertiser the best customer—of a trade paper—for he keeps buying space regularly, tells others and by his precept adds to the paper's business:

Please stop my cyclamen ad; I am compelled to refuse orders.—Chas. A. Moss, Spartanburg, S. C., October 17, 1911.

I sold all my stock through the advertisement the very next day after it appeared.—Herman W. Kropp, Columbus, O., October 16, 1911.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

It is the general report that last week's business was heavier than for the corresponding period of 1910, the gain being the first this market has been able to report in more than two months. The present week started off at a brisk pace and there is sufficient business in sight for the latter part of the month to insure at least a fair degree of activity for some days to come. The All Saints' day shipments to the south go out the latter part of this week, but this business does not now cut the large figure it did a few years ago. One of the reasons for this, and probably the principal one, is that the south now grows a big crop of chrysanthemums for this date, though another factor is that several of the Chicago wholesalers have had disagreeable experiences with these far southern shipments and now limit their business in that territory to selected buyers of proved credit and known business standing. Some of these buyers are taking good lots of stock October 27 to 30.

Supplies have shortened in the last week in practically every item except chrysanthemums. Quite a few growers report their large, midseason varieties as being from one to two weeks behind the usual date for marketing, but there are, nevertheless, large supplies now on hand, though the greater part of the stock goes into the medium and small grades. Really first-class chrysanthemums are selling well and the prices

MUMS!!!

The Season is in Full Swing.

We are right in the midst of the Mums—such varieties as Halliday, Touset, Early Snow, Pacific Supreme, J. K. Shaw, Crocus—the best midseason whites, pinks and yellows. Our supply is very large and the quality very fine in all sizes.

THE FINEST CATTLEYAS

There are no finer Cattleyas anywhere—large, perfect, highly colored flowers. Feature them in your corsage work. Our supply is large—we will take care of all out-of-town orders.

VIOLETS

Fine—The cooler weather has toned them up. Push them now, so your customers can wear them on the street.

KILLARNEYS

Pink and White—Splendid stock.

Buyers who know the market recognize that, length for length, our Killarneys carry the finest heads of any roses to be had. That's why we never have too many, though we always have enough to take care of all shipping orders.

BEAUTIES

Our stock always is fine.

Now on with a good crop of long and medium Beauties, stock that will meet with the approval of the most critical buyers—nothing whatever the matter with them. Large heads, splendid color, strong stems, perfect foliage.

CARNATIONS

Try these—you will like them.

Year after year we handle the largest lot of strictly high grade Carnations that is to be found on this market. The condition of the stock now arriving in quantity shows we shall be better supplied this season than ever.

Order VALLEY of Us

If you have had any difficulty getting your Valley orders filled, it was because you didn't order of us. Always plenty of Fancy Valley here.

HEADQUARTERS FOR EASTER LILIES

We always have Easter Lilies, every day in the year, and the finest there are—home grown—they go out in perfect condition.

generally are satisfactory. Pompons are now available in considerable quantity and sell well locally; shipping is light on these.

Last week's heavy crops of Beauties were curtailed with unexpected suddenness and it is said that some of those retailers who had advertised cheap sales found difficulty in getting the stock at a price that would afford a profit. Short roses are extremely scarce; but, though the demand is good, other roses are so nearly equal to requirements that there has not as yet been much advance in price. Killarney and White Killarney and, to a lesser extent, Richmond, are about the only roses now available in quantity, the novelties being in extremely light supply. The special grades of Killarneys include stock of the exhibition character and sales are reported of limited quantities as high as 15 cents.

The cuts of carnations have been reduced and prices are making further progress up the scale. Violets are much more plentiful and of improved quality; also, they are selling better than heretofore. The demand for cattleyas is such that large receipts no more than suffice for the orders and good prices are obtained for all good stock. Easter lilies and valley are abundant. Dahlias have been coming in considerable quantity, for the first frost held off until October 23. The cosmos has been especially good.

There is an abundance of everything in the line of green goods.

Various Notes.

C. W. Johnson, who is in charge of the flower show that is to be a feature of the club meeting November 2, makes the following announcement: "All flowers for the novelty exhibition of the Chicago Florists' Club should be shipped express prepaid to A. T. Pyfer, secretary, 30 East Randolph street, Chicago, Ill., to arrive by the afternoon of Thursday, November 2."

John P. Risch went to Evanston October 22 to have a look at a crop of daisies in the greenhouses of Weiland & Risch that he thinks will be heard from a little later.

D. E. Freres says that trade now is making up for its summer dullness.

Frank Ayers, right-hand man for C. W. McKellar, leaves October 26 for another of his trips to Texas, this time for an indefinite stay.

At A. L. Randall's, Frank Johnson says the scope of the cut flower business in this market is well indicated by the fact that one mail Monday brought inquiries regarding standing orders from points as far away as Texas and the state of Washington.

Frank Felke, of Wilmette, says he will begin to cut Bonnaillon chrysanthemum by the end of the week.

H. A. Fisher Co., Kalamazoo, will have the formal opening of its new store October 28.

C. M. Dickinson is again at his desk at E. H. Hunt's, fully recovered from his recent illness.

O. W. Frese reports many inquiries and quite a few orders for New Orleans shipments the latter part of this week. He says that what the trade there wants is Maid and Bride, Winsor and White Lawson—give them these and there will be no trouble.

At J. A. Budlong's, Phil Schupp has word that the southern crop of chrysanthemums is none to good this year, DETROIT.

Club Meeting.

A spirited meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club was held Monday evening, October 16. A committee consisting of M. Bloy, Fred Pautke, Frank Danzer, J. F. Sullivan and Hugo Schroeter was appointed to pay regular visits to Albert Stahelin's greenhouses and report on the condition and progress of the carnations in the movable houses. Mr. Stahelin is also to act as one of this committee. His plants at present are in the pink of condition.

Hugo Schroeter, chairman of the program committee, read an outline of the season's programs as prepared by his committee. The secretary read a report of the meeting held Thursday, October 12, when Messrs. Hammond, Baur, Dorner and Farenwald were in Detroit to complete arrangements for the convention. This convention will be in reality a rose and carnation show, staged by the Rose and Carnation Societies and held under the auspices of the Detroit Florists' Club. An admission fee of 25 cents will be charged, and the gross receipts will be divided as follows: One-half to the Florists' Club, one-fourth to the Rose Society and one-fourth to the Carnation Society. Each society is to provide its own premium funds and the local club will pay the hall rent, advertising, etc. William Dilger has been appointed general manager of the show and all communications should be addressed to him at 38 Broadway.

Frank Danzer reported on the fall show, to be held November 14 and 15, and a preliminary premium list was read. A liberal sum has been donated for premiums, in addition to a number of silver cups, offered by interested parties.

J. F. Sullivan returned Sunday, October 22, from an extended eastern trip, including a journey among the violet growers. Sullivan's store has been entirely redecorated.

A handsome theater is to be built on Broadway, almost opposite Breitmeyer's, and immediately adjoining the new Broadway public market.

Taepke's store has been entirely redecorated in white and buff, making a decidedly pretty effect.

Miss Helene Sullivan, daughter of J. F. Sullivan, and Wilfred John Mahon, of Cleveland, O., were married Wednesday morning, October 25. H. S.

Rockville, Conn.—Theo. Standt has completed his new plant and expects to have the store ready for the holidays.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business in this city is not quite as it should be, according to some of our leading retailers, who say that if funeral work were removed trade would be exceedingly dull. The weather is somewhat colder and we are all looking for a better demand in all lines. There is no social work of note, except for the horse show next week, which will wake up the call for fancy mums and American Beauties.

The wholesalers were fairly well supplied last week with stock of quite good quality. Roses are coming in fine shape and the markets have had some extra specials in Killarney, Richmond, Maryland and extra long Beauties. The bulk of the stock, however, is in the lesser grades. Carnations have been in large demand in all varieties. Mums are coming in more freely and some really high-class blooms are seen. California violets are improving in stem and color, and cosmos, dahlias, lilies, extra good valley and fine long smilax are in abundance.

Various Notes.

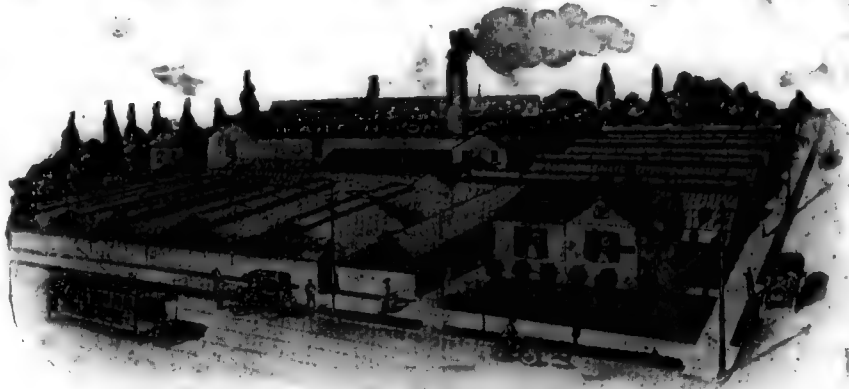

The executive committee of the St. Louis Horticultural Society held a meeting October 17, and arrangements were completed for the coming fall show, which is expected to be better and larger than any previously given. The show will be opened November 11 and continue for five days.

George B. Windler has a fine lot of pot chrysanthemums and other blooming plants, which are handled by the local trade.

The J. F. Ammann Co., of Edwardsville, Ill., is sending a fine cut of roses to C. A. Kuehn's wholesale market. Mr. Kuehn is also receiving a fine cut of lilies and orchids.

The Riessen Floral Co., Paris Floral Co., Grimm & Gorly and Otto Sander, all in the central downtown district, are displaying some extra fine blooms

The officers of the St. Louis Florists' Club met at President Windler's residence last Monday evening to arrange for "big doings" at the next meeting, which takes place Thursday of the flower show week. All visiting florists will be invited to attend.

Kalisch Bros. are making a nice display of mums, both pot plants and cut blooms. Their new store front is most attractive and they report excellent trade so far this season.

Geo. H. Angermueller's consignments of Killarney were of extra fine quality last week and the demand for the special grades was good. A great assortment of dahlias is coming in here daily.

Miss Adele Weber, daughter of Fred C. Weber, is to be married November 7. Mr. Weber has given his daughter a handsome residence on Park View place as a wedding present.

At H. G. Berning's last week, fine shipments of fancy roses were seen. There was also an abundance of those fine Jennemann dahlias and quite a lot of cut chrysanthemums.

The W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. has been handling a lot of violets from the Kirkwood growers, but the quality is not quite right. They say colder weather will bring out the color and stiffen the price.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The week ending October 25 showed no improvement over the one preceding. It rained Thursday, October 19. The rain continued Friday and, worst of all, it rained more Saturday. The weather man prophesied rain Monday, but the weather man was wrong. There is a limit, fortunately, even to rain. Better weather proved a help, but the market is in bad shape. There is such an oversupply that some of the wholesalers found it necessary to stop the shipments of dahlias, while others notified their dahlia growers that with other flowers so abundant and so cheap there was little chance of the dahlias bringing satisfactory returns.

The chrysanthemum is the flower of the day. Orders are filled by the dozen, by the hundred, by the thousand, and still there are plenty left. Yellow is the only color that is not in excess of the demand, for Monrovia is not up to the market requirements, while Halliday is not plentiful. Cremo helps nicely. Virginia Poehlmann and Ivory have been added to the whites. Mrs. Hurley is a pleasing bronze and Garcia a lovely pink of single or semi-double type. Pompons sell fairly, but the small, usually outdoor or frame-grown stock of the bigger sorts goes poorly. The Pacific family is fine, but too plentiful.

The Beauty crop has shortened, but other roses are fearfully abundant, white more so than pink, while Richmond is not in favor. Carnations have suffered sadly. Nobody seems to want them with chrysanthemums so cheap, at least not in any sort of proportion to the supply. Valley and sweet peas sell fairly, but everything else is unsatisfactory. There is lots of business, both in and out of town. The buyers are critical. Only the best will do unless the price is extremely low.

The Shop Windows.

H. H. Battles' frame window was most pleasing last week. A large vase on a pedestal was filled with pink tiger lilies and Killarney roses, a combination new and striking. Gold and white enameled baskets filled with Beauties, a gold basket with bronze chrysanthemums, a white basket with larkspur and yellow daisies filled the other window attractively.

Charles Henry Fox has three large baskets prettily filled with the new dahlia, Franz Liszt, a striking red.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons' window showed many basket combinations. Particularly noted was a wicker basket with three shades of pink carnations, from light to deep, a large white enameled handle basket with pink dahlias, Maryland roses, Enchantress carnations and valley. Another white handle basket with pink chrysanthemums, pink carnations and violets looked well.

Frank L. Polites still favors the fishpond in his front window; chrysanthemums and bright autumn foliage formed a heavy background which made one think of sloping woodland with a pond at the foot.

Robert Kift's little baskettes filled with dahlias, roses and larkspur, at an attractive price, were tempting to the promenaders.

Many passers-by stopped to gaze at the window of Pennock Bros. You know they have Japanese wicker baskets and hampers imported direct by themselves; the long wait before their arrival is repaid by their individuality. Their pleasing combinations were a hamper of dahlias, Gold Medal, Minnie McCullough and Yellow Duke and autumn foliage; vase-shaped handle basket of McCullough dahlias and larkspur; Melody roses, autumn foliage, lavender moire ribbon in round handle basket; a pretty combination of larkspur, white snapdragon, McCullough dahlias and autumn foliage, also in a

The Great 12

An Unprecedented Array of Choice Roses

Never before in the history of the commercial cut flower business have we been able to offer so much variety in Roses as we are doing at present. The three or four standard sorts of a few years ago have been supplemented by eight or nine new ones that are good all the year round, and commercially possible from the grower's "bread-and-butter" standpoint, so that the retailer has now no cause to complain of lack of variety to offer his customers.

The "Great 12" we are offering with a few quotations for this week are:

vase-shaped basket. A low, round handle basket filled with oncidiums, cypripediums, bronze snapdragon, Mrs. Aaron Ward roses and sunshine ribbon was unusual and pleasing. Melody roses were used with cypripediums, ferns and blue ribbon in a small handle basket. A 48-inch hamper filled much of the space. In it were Tint of Gold and Golden Glow chrysanthemums and Mc-Cullough dahlias, with ombre ribbon. A spray of autumn foliage and dahlias was across the lid. They are having quite a sale on their French corsages. These are lace bouquet holders filled with a gardenia, a few sprays of valley and pink snapdragons, one or two Melody, Maryland, Bon Silene and Safrano rosebuds, a small cluster of violets and a small orchid.

Various Notes.

Mrs. John R. Claus opened her new store at Thirteenth street and Germantown avenue October 14, just two squares above her old location. When this lot was purchased last spring an old house stood where the large, modern store and dwelling now are. The large window is not even on all sides.

The front is six feet, the side ten feet and the rear eight feet. It is filled most attractively with large handle basket combinations. An electric lamp is in the center. A large wreath of magnolia leaves and dahlias and several specimen plants give a background. Mrs. Claus gave, on the opening day, white china swans filled with air plant and prepared foliage. These proved a great attraction, for about 2,000 were given away in one day. The business for the first week has been, Mrs. Claus says, more than she anticipated. In the near future a greenhouse will adjoin the rear of the store. It will be 20x100. In the rear of this will be the stable, facing on Park avenue.

FLORISTS' REVIEW

When Writing Advertisers

NEW YORK.

The Market.

After a week of continuous rain the sun is shining. The market all the week was as gloomy as the weather, and the wholesale section was covered with a blue blanket. Prices tumbled as the week advanced and Saturday many a cartload of the accumulation went to the dumping ground or the river, dahlias predominating. Many of these became unsalable at any price. The finest of the cactus type and thousands of the selected stock could not rise above $10 per thousand. Sunday boxes, unopened, were selling at from 25 to 50 cents each.

The chrysanthemum now dominates the market and already small and inferior stock is coming in bunches. In comparison with this, there is also arriving some of the finest stock ever seen in New York. Prices range from 10 cents a bunch to 50 cents a flower, and one can imagine the immense quantity and variety between these extreme values. Some grand blooms sold Saturday as low as $1.50 per dozen. Now that the fall shows are about to begin, the finest stock will go to the exhibitions and the new varieties will be scarce and higher in the New York market.

As usual while the mum sits upon its throne, roses and carnations have been hardly steady and the tendency is downward. There was no scarcity of any variety of rose, and in large clean-ups summer prices prevailed. In proof of this the department stores were advertising them at the week's end as low as 10 cents a dozen. The new kinds come only in limited numbers and sell rapidly. Carnations went all to pieces by Saturday. Splendid stock sold as low as $10 per thousand. In small lots 2 cents was the top price. There is little prospect of immediate improvement. Valley holds well, for the October weddings are numerous and the brides' bouquets are largely valley and orchids. The offerings of the latter are abundant and prices remain barely steady. The oncidium is in wide demand for window decoration. Lilies are lower. There are still tritomas in abundance, and pansies, bouvardia, cosmos, etc. The finest cosmos ever seen in this market goes a-begging. Violets had a blue week; no sunshine, little demand, many of the arrivals colorless and scentless, prices down to 40 cents for the large bunches of selected flowers.

Maybe the sunshine will make everything this week look brighter.

Various Notes.

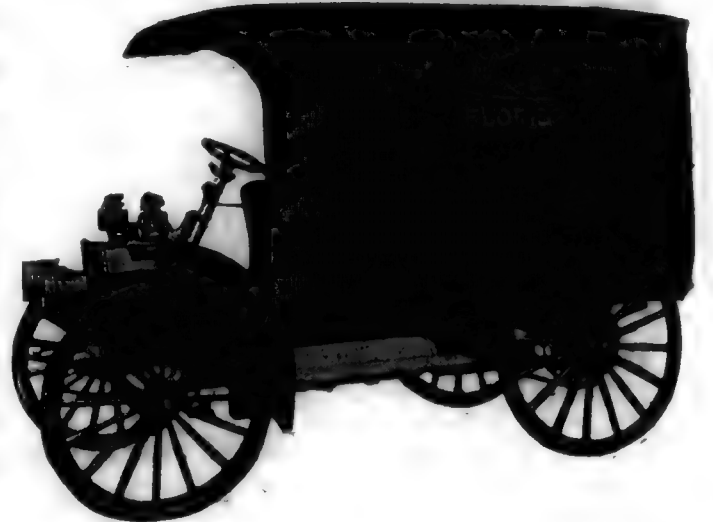

The great flower show at Madison opens October 26. From that date on to the middle of November there will be one continuous performance in which New York and all outlying horticultural societies will play their parts. Unfortunately, many of the shows overlap and every one of them will be worthy of attendance.

The annual show of the American Institute begins November 1, and November 7 the exhibition of the Horticultural Society of New York closes at the Museum of Natural History. This makes a full week of bloom and beauty for the metropolis.

That the present season has been a poor one for the growing of dahlias was evidenced at the annual dahlia show of the New Jersey Floricultural Society, held in its hall at 240 Main street, this city. There were entries in but thirteen of the thirty-four classes, but the show was a striking one, nevertheless.

Among the exhibits of special interest to the trade were those of Lager & Hurrell, who received a first-class certificate for a collection of orchids and an award of 94 points on an orchid plant.

First-class certificates were also awarded to Joseph A. Manda, of West Orange, for a collection of orchids, and to William Tricker, of Arlington, for a collection of roses. Mr. Tricker also secured a certificate of merit for Aconitum Fischeri.

The society's annual chrysanthemum show will be held on Friday evening, November 10.

Emaus, Pa.—D. B. Kroninger will discontinue raising tomatoes and devote all his attention in the future to producing high grade flowers.

Allentown, Pa.—E. N. Kroninger is planning another range of Lord & Burnham houses to be added to the fine plant recently built. Ernest Ashley will remove to his new place after the spring rush is over. Already the land has trebled in value and he is undecided whether to build more glass or hold it as a real estate investment.

The Market.

Business conditions are gradually improving as the season advances, and there is nothing goes to waste in a well managed establishment, as design work utilizes all under grades. Carnations and roses are steadily improving in quality, with a slight increase in the prices. Mums are also in great variety, with a steady demand. Valley is quite scarce. Potted Hydrangeas and cyclamen are the only blooming plants available.

Various Notes.

Clarke Bros. announce the completion of the first section of their range at Hillsboro, Ore., consisting of three houses, 32x300, which will be the nucleus of the future plant. This section will be devoted to roses and carnations.

Martin & Forbes are building a conservatory in the rear of their store, which facilitates handling plants during the rush seasons. E. R. C.

SUBSTITUTE FOR LATH HOUSE.

The Review of September 28 contained the following inquiry from A. V., a resident of a Pacific coast state: "In some parts of our town the building of wooden structures is not permitted, on account of the danger of fire. This keeps me from putting up a lath house that I need for my plants. Do you know of a structure, made of material that is not combustible and at the same time not too expensive, that would answer the purpose of an ordinary lath house? A reply from any reader would greatly oblige."

In reply to this inquiry, I wish to offer the following suggestion: I know of no non-combustible material that would really take the place of the lath, but it seems to me a fairly good house for the purpose could be built by using pipes for the framework, setting the pipes about ten feet apart, in concrete. Any old 1½-inch pipe would do for supports, while 1-inch would be sufficiently strong for the cross pieces on top. Then the whole frame could be covered with wire netting, say 1½-inch or 2-inch mesh. By planting fast-growing vines all around the sides and ends, sufficient shade should be obtained the first summer. Humulus Lupulus, the common hop vine, for instance, is a fast grower and well adapted for use anywhere on the Pacific coast. It would drop its foliage in autumn just at the time when heavy shade would no longer be needed. Evergreen vines are slow growers, as a rule, and might prove detrimental during the winter months.

The inquirer does not state what kind of plant he wishes to handle in such a house; therefore it remains for him to decide how much shade is wanted. Climatic conditions should also be taken into consideration. If the plants are to remain in the house during the winter and must be protected from frost or sun, then burlap, arranged on rollers or pulleys, could be used to good advantage. These could be fixed on the inside of the house, if necessary, in order to comply with the building ordinances. The writer has had no experience with fire-proof lath houses, and merely offers this suggestion as to the possibility of a lathless house that would answer all purposes.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

The Market.

President Taft has honored us with his presence and departed again within the week, but I find no one who has profited thereby except the green goods men, and they have had quite a demand for all kinds of decorative material and cheap flowers. Otherwise, the excess of holidays is having a dampening effect on the flower buyers and business is not as good as it was one year ago by twenty-five per cent. In the face of the bustle and excitement that San Francisco is undergoing, this might seem to be farfetched, but it is nevertheless a fact and there is not a dealer in town but would like to see everything take its normal channel again, and have the public realize that excitement may be all right from some standpoints, but from the survey of the average retailer it is about the worst thing in the world.

In the meanwhile flowers of all kinds are plentiful and the prices are rather smaller than might be expected. Mums are in their glory at this time and have superseded almost everything else. Carnations are in good supply and move slowly. Valley is in fair supply and remains at about the same quotations. Outside of the fancy stock, it is useless to give prices on roses, as the market is overstocked. Other stock has not changed from conditions of a week ago.

SUBSTITUTE FOR LATH HOUSE.

The Review of September 28 contained the following inquiry from A. V., a resident of a Pacific coast state: "In some parts of our town the building of wooden structures is not permitted, on account of the danger of fire. This keeps me from putting up a lath house that I need for my plants. Do you know of a structure, made of material that is not combustible and at the same time not too expensive, that would answer the purpose of an ordinary lath house? A reply from any reader would greatly oblige."

In reply to this inquiry, I wish to offer the following suggestion: I know of no non combustible material that would really take the place of the lath, but it seems to me a fairly good house for the purpose could be built by using pipes for the framework, setting the pipes about ten feet apart, in concrete. Any old 1½-inch pipe would do for supports, while 1-inch would be sufficiently strong for the cross pieces on top. Then the whole frame could be covered with wire netting, say 1½-inch or 2-inch mesh. By planting fast-growing vines all around the sides and ends, sufficient shade should be obtained the first summer. Humulus Lupulus, the common hop vine, for instance, is a fast grower and well adapted for use anywhere on the Pacific coast. It would drop its foliage in autumn just at the time when heavy shade would no longer be needed. Evergreen vines are slow growers, as a rule, and might prove detrimental during the winter months.

The inquirer does not state what kind of plant he wishes to handle in such a house; therefore it remains for him to decide how much shade is wanted. Climatic conditions should also be taken into consideration. If the plants are to remain in the house during the winter and must be protected from frost or sun, then burlap, arranged on rollers or pulleys, could be used to good advantage. These could be fixed on the inside of the house, if necessary, in order to comply with the building ordinances. The writer has had no experience with fire-proof lath houses, and merely offers this suggestion as to the possibility of a lathless house that would answer all purposes.

Henry Klopfer.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

The Market.

President Taft has honored us with his presence and departed again within the week, but I find no one who has profited thereby except the green goods men, and they have had quite a demand for all kinds of decorative material and cheap flowers. Otherwise, the excess of holidays is having a dampening effect on the flower buyers and business is not as good as it was one year ago by twenty-five per cent. In the face of the bustle and excitement that San Francisco is undergoing, this might seem to be farfetched, but it is nevertheless a fact and there is not a dealer in town but would like to see everything take its normal channel again, and have the public realize that excitement may be all right from some standpoints, but from the survey of the average retailer it is about the worst thing in the world.

In the meanwhile flowers of all kinds are plentiful and the prices are rather smaller than might be expected. Mums are in their glory at this time and have superseded almost everything else. Carnations are in good supply and move slowly. Valley is in fair supply and remains at about the same quotations. Outside of the fancy stock, it is useless to give prices on roses, as the market is overstocked. Other stock has not changed from conditions of a week ago.

Vegetable Forcing.

CUCUMBERS AND TOMATOES.

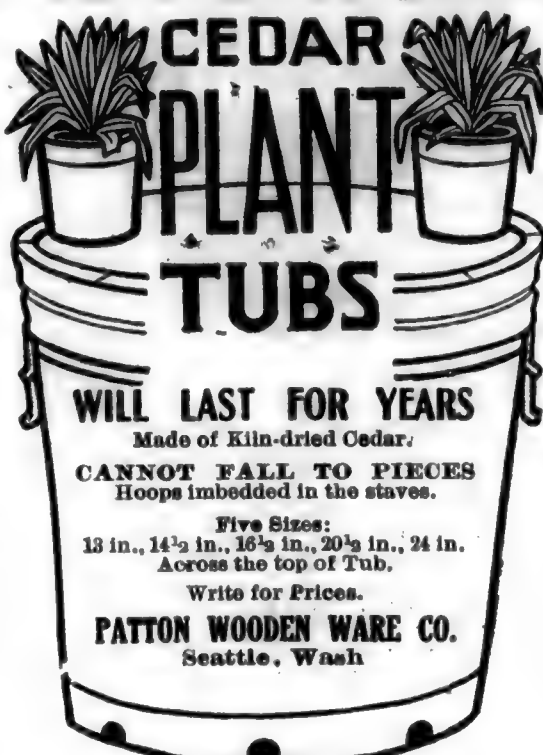

We have one greenhouse, 28x160, which is planted to mums, and after they are gone we will run the house to radishes until late spring, when we expect to plant it to cucumbers, which will be started in 5-inch or 6-inch pots. We also have two houses, one of them 28x160 and the other 40x160, which will be used for lettuce during the winter, after which they will be planted to tomatoes for an early summer crop. Will you please give me a little information as to what variety of cucumbers will be best suited for such forcing? Please state, also, when the seed should be planted so as to have good, strong plants in 5-inch or 6-inch pots at setting-out time, which will be about April 1.

I also intend to build a house, 45x100, for growing roses, but will use it for tomatoes or cucumbers this winter, and I had thought of growing them on the ground instead of on raised benches, which will not be built until next spring. I have had a little experience with forcing tomatoes, but none with cucumbers, so I wish to know the easiest variety of the latter to manage. Any information will be greatly appreciated. My location is northern Wyoming. L. M. B.

The Davis Perfect forcing cucumber is giving satisfaction with a great many cucumber growers. It is a long variety, prolific, and easy to grow. The best strains of Improved White Spine are, however, more prolific, although harder to grow; that is, they require careful attention on the part of the grower. All seedsmen have their special name for their best strain of Improved White Spine forcing cucumber. The Boston type of Improved Arlington White Spine forcing is grown more than all others, and is probably the best money-maker.

In the spring you will find solid beds as good as raised beds, or better, for vegetables. Spade in a good coat of manure and plant your cuke seed five weeks before your plants are wanted, ready to bench from 5-inch and 6-inch pots. H. G.

The Market.

Roses are plentiful and of good quality. Chrysanthemums are now coming in more plentifully and the demand is good. Prices as usual. The call for yellow seems to predominate. Carnations are good and more plentiful. Cosmos is fine this year and sells readily, retail, at 25 cents per dozen. Dahlias are plentiful and the demand is good. Pink is the best seller. They retail at 75 cents per dozen. No home-grown violets as yet are seen in this market. Weddings and receptions are quite frequent now and the decorators have been kept busy. Potted plants in bloom are scarce. Green is plentiful in all lines.

Various Notes.

E. G. Bunyar, at Independence, Mo., has just completed a large house, to be planted to violets. It is his intention to build two more at once, as part of the material is already on the ground. Mr. Bunyar is growing quite a large lot of stevia this season. He finds a ready market for all he can grow. One large bunch of moonvine cuttings were finely rooted. He intends to root 30,000 for his spring trade.

The R. S. Brown & Son greenhouses, near Independence, Mo., are in fine shape. The summer's improvements include a large packing and shipping shed. The mums are fine. They are the largest growers of vinca vines in the west, and their benches bordered by the vines are a fine sight. They are all in 3-inch pots. Large batches of stock geraniums are benched, as they

The Market.

Last week was almost sunless; only October 16 did Old Sol appear for a short time. The wind has steadily persisted in the east or northeast, and each day has seen more or less rain.
These conditions have shortened up supplies of cut flowers, although at the same time the climatic conditions have restricted retail trade. Still the market has cleaned up quite well, particularly so October 21. Chrysanthemums are now the leading flowers. There are not many additional sorts arriving as compared with the previous week, but the quality is a little better. Pacific Supreme leads as a pink. Edmond Albe does not take well. Roses are in good supply, with little change in prices.
The quality is excellent. Carnations are selling particularly well. A year ago street peddlers were selling great quantities of both these and roses, but so far prices are above them. A few days of sun, however, will cause a glut.

Violets for so early are of extra fine quality and quite abundant. Some dahlias still arrive. Frost has not visited some growers at all yet. Cosmos sells only moderately. Pink snapdragon is popular if of the correct shade.
Lilies and valley are each in good supply. Some nice Bouvardia Humboldtii is coming in, and among orchids there

The Newburys, Mitchell, S. D.

is now an abundance of Cypripedium insigne and Cattleya labiata, with some other varieties. Gardenias are still in short supply. Sweet peas came from several growers, making 40 to 50 cents per hundred. The demand for green goods shows a slight improvement.

Various Notes.

The annual meeting of the Boston
Coöperative Flower Market was held
October 23, with a large attendance.
The reports were all of a satisfactory nature.

E. O. Orpet, of Lake Forest, Ill., has been spending the week with friends in and about Boston. His old confreres were all glad to see him again.

T. F. Galvin had a neat window October 21, of crotons, pandanus, dra-cenas, etc., planted in separate beds and mossed over to hide all pots. They also had an excellent orchid display.

Alexander Porter, of Woburn, is sending in excellent Christmas Pink sweet peas, also quantities of fine Princess violets.

From the William Hill greenhouses some nice Bouvardia Humboldtii is being sent to Thomas Pegler, also callas in quantity. In mums, their Pacific Supreme is noteworthy.

William T. Walke, of Salem, has fine cyclamens and Lorraine begonias. The latter include the variety Glory of Cincinnati. These are handled by J. M.
Cohen.

Wax Bros., on Tremont street, had a striking window last week, of yellow chrysanthemums and autumn foliage.
Such orchids as yellow oncidiums also were used.

At a meeting of the North Shore
Horticultural Society October 20, A. E.
Parsons, the president, presented a gold watch to James McGregor, one of the veteran members of the society. There was a large attendance of members.
T. J. Gray represented the Boston seed trade.

William Nicholson, of Framingham, likes Smith's Unaka chrysanthemum, as well as the early variety, Advance.
In carnations at present, Gloriosa,

White Wonder, Scarlet Glow and Pink Delight are noteworthy. He is growing the last named heavily. Mr. Nicholson hopes to attend the great international flower show in London in May, 1912.

W. A. Riggs, of Auburndale, grows mums just as well as when a private gardener. Certainly no better Pink Supreme, Halliday and Pacific are seen than his this season.

A host of friends, including large numbers of prominent gardeners, florists, seedsmen and others, with ladies, visited Mr. and Mrs. Peter Fisher, of Ellis, on the evening of October 23, the occasion being the celebration of their silver wedding. The house was charmingly decorated, Carnation Benora being noteworthy, and the popular and still youthful looking couple were showered with good wishes. All attending had a most delightful time.

Dobbins & Shannon, of Woburn, now are large shippers of violets.

The big fruit show which opened October 23 in Horticultural hall fills every inch of available space in the building and is a superb one. The attendance never has been equaled heretofore.

N. H. Silverman, on Winter street, keeps his store attractive. At present he uses yellow chrysanthemums, orchids, partridge berries and bunches of the bright Ilex verticillata in his window with excellent effect.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Boston Flower Exchange takes place at 6:30 p. m., October 28, at Young's hotel.

The chrysanthemum show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, which opens November 9, promises to be an excellent one. There will be concerts by a ladies' orchestra every evening and afternoon except the opening day, when one concert will be given. In the schedule of the February, 1912, show, carnations are well provided for, being allotted twenty classes.

J. W. Simpson, of Woburn, is already in the market with Bonnaffon chrysanthemums. Mr. Simpson is getting an enviable reputation for his yellow marguerites. W. N. Craig.

Albert Scott filed a petition in bankruptcy October 19; liabilities, $551; assets, none.

Zinn's store was burglarized October 15. The loss was not large, but the robbery was an exceedingly bold one.

Wax Bros. have the new auto all right, but it should not be inferred from the note in last week's Review that they have a branch store. Their interests center at 143 Tremont street.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Leonard H. Vaughan, Chicago; First Vice-Pres., M. H. Duryea, New York City; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

VISITED CHICAGO: Joseph Schilder, of Schilder Bros., Chillicothe, O.

THE way frost held off insures a good crop of sweet corn, and good quality in the seed.

BULB planting in Holland was delayed by the long drought, but has progressed rapidly since there came nearly a fortnight of rain.

GUSTAV SCHOTT, Aschaffenburg, Bavaria, grower and exporter of natural grass seeds, now is represented in America by McHutchison & Co., New York.

THE Yokohama Nursery Co. reports that September 4, via Steamship Panama, it received 254 cases of bulbs for Chicago, 457 cases for New York, and on August 29, via Steamship Awa, 925 cases for New York, and 586 cases for Chicago, making an addition of 2,222 cases to those already reported.

BOUQUET GREEN is firm in price. First hands in Wisconsin are holding stiff at a price that makes jobbers demand 7 to 8 cents. Open weather may result in a larger supply than now is anticipated, but an early snow and freeze would cause a big shortage and a jump in prices. Probably never again will green sell at the figures of a few years ago.

THE SEED SHORTAGE.

In an open letter to the trade, sent out October 16, W. Atlee Burpee & Co. say in part: "This is the third season of poor seed crops in several important lines. In proportion to population, stocks the world over are today the smallest the trade has ever known.

"As of all other merchandise, the prices of seeds are governed, necessaearly advance list for dealers, as intended. To illustrate how difficult it is this year to know the product of different crops, we need only name sweet peas. During the past summer we made two trips to California, and while allowing for a short growth of vine and other conditions affecting the crops, have been greatly disappointed in the actual yields thus far obtained—in many cases falling far below what we considered conservative estimates.

"We have been constantly on the alert throughout the summer and fall, having traveled more than 30,000 miles in America and Europe to inspect growing crops. Although supplies of many seeds are now so extremely short, yet it is a pleasure to note each succeeding year that planters and dealers seem to consider more and more quality rather than price."

THE WORLD'S SEED CROPS.

In its issue of October 14, the Gardeners' Chronicle, London, prints the following summary of the world's seed crops:

"Peas.—Peas are very deficient in all countries, and are likely to be at famine prices. The crop is a very disappointing one; in fact, one of the worst in living memory, many crops producing not more, and in some cases less, than the seed sown. The demand is far in excess of the supply both at home and abroad.

"Broad Beans.—In most English counties and in Holland, broad beans have been scorched by the sun and smothered with black fly; many acres have been plowed in. In some few done fairly well, but, owing to the heat, most of the blooms have dropped, and consequently few pods have formed.

The very recent rain has started the production of pods again, but it can hardly be expected that these will ripen.

"Brassica.—The cabbages supply an exception to the rule. The plants, having been in the ground since last year, were well established, and able to withstand the early drought; they ripened off well before the excess of drought could affect them materially. Crops of this kind of seed are therefore fairly good, and the seed is in splendid condition. There was, however, but a small acreage, and seeds can not be very plentiful next year. Among brassicas, however, turnips have yielded extremely short and disappointing crops, the white-fleshed varieties in particular.

"Beet.—The beet crop is very deficient everywhere. The plants did not get a chance to grow and branch out, and many plantations failed entirely.
Seeds of beet are not usually ready to harvest until the end of October, sometimes later, but this year they have long since been cut, although not yet cleaned. The seeds will probably prove to be very small and somewhat light, but of good quality.

"Carrots.—The crops of carrot seed are very light indeed. The roots, having suffered from the wet season of last year, kept badly through the winter, and the drought during the summer completed the undoing of this crop. Consequently the prices rule very high.

"Onions.—The remarks on carrots apply equally to onions, and the outlook for these two important vegetables is anything but a rosy one, plants and bulbs being very scarce indeed.

"Mangolds.—Although these gave promise of a fairly good crop at one time—in the early stages—being more robust growers than beets and more able to withstand drought, yet before the plants developed seed the black fly appeared, and gradually smothered most of the plantations, stopped the growth of the seed, and killed many of the plants. Hence the yield will prove to be less than for many years.

"Lettuces.—These are not so bad generally as some vegetable seeds. The plants in some places have suffered severely, but where they have stood, the yield may be put probably at not much more than half a crop.

"Radishes.—The continental crops of radish seeds are extremely poor, and in England, although somewhat better, they are yielding badly. The promise was good, and plantations looked like yielding well from the appearance of the pods, but none contains more than a few seeds, and many pods are quite empty. The yield barely comes up to half what was expected.

"Flower Seeds.—Flower seeds have fared, as a rule, somewhat better than vegetable seeds, and in a very few cases the plants have produced good crops. In many instances they have suffered considerably, and have yielded little or no seed, asters being among the worst failures. Sweet peas are also a very moderate crop, although the quality of the seed is considerably better than in the last two years. Nasturtiums suffered from the great heat, with the result that the crop is a very light one. Many perennials and biennials have suffered severely, such as Canterbury bells, myosotis and others, and the crops are deficient, whilst the Prudence is of more frequent use than any other intellectual quality; it produces vigilance rather than elevation, rather prevents loss than procures advantages, and keeps a man on the safe side, inducing him to make a permanent investment rather than a temporary speculation. A man need not be a miser to be prudent—a prudent man is one who is thoughtful and has the ability to foresee what is sensible and then follow his own conclusions. Especially should a man be prudent in buying lily bulbs, because it costs no more to force good bulbs than inferior ones, and since the real profit is not on the bulbs themselves but on the prolific qualities of the bulbs, how costly inferior bulbs actually are must be manifest to all who think.

The best lily bulbs you can buy are none too good, being a product of nature and subject to nature's whims; so buy the best you can get and you will be doing all mortal man can do toward success.

LILIUM HARRISII

(THE BERMUDA EASTER LILY)

LET US SUPPLY YOUR WANTS IN LILIES THIS SEASON

We think we can make it to your advantage to do so, as regards both quality and price.

The stock that we offer is not gathered indiscriminately from all kinds of sources, but is grown for us by a few selected growers whose stocks have been worked up from the true, original stock. In order to insure the health of the product, the bulbs are not grown on the same field oftener than one season, other crops being grown on the field the preceding year. The ground is thoroughly manured when the previous crop is grown, leaving it in a high state of cultivation, and when the lily bulbs are planted no fresh manure is used; this prevents disease and insures a crop of strong, healthy bulbs.

In addition to this, we do not dig our bulbs as early as they are usually dug, but leave them in the ground until they are thoroughly ripened and matured. When Harrisii is good it leaves little to be desired. There is very little, if any, stock obtainable as good as the stock that we are offering. We are supplying only this one grade of selected stock and when this is disposed of we shall have no more to offer.

While the quality of the stock that we offer is of the highest, our prices are as low as, or lower than, the prices of those who offer the ordinary stock gathered from indiscriminate sources. We are sure buyers will find our stock very satisfactory, and much more so than the Japan-grown Longiflorum, which has badly deteriorated in recent years.

Bear in mind that we were the original introducers of Harrisii in Bermuda, and that we have exceptional facilities for obtaining our present supplies. Also take note that the smallest bulbs that we offer are 6-7 inch bulbs, not 5-7 inch, as usually offered.

6-7 inch bulbs, 335 to the case, $15.00 per case; full thousand lots, $ 40.00 per 1000
7-9 inch bulbs, 200 to the case, 16.00 per case; full thousand lots, 75.00 per 1000
9-11 inch bulbs, 100 to the case, 18.00 per case; full thousand lots, 175.00 per 1000

FERNS

We have an exceptionally nice lot of ferns in the following varieties—good, bushy, well-grown plants that will please the most critical buyers. Plants have been grown in pots and are thoroughly well established and nicely finished.

Nephrolepis Bostoniensis and Piersoni, 6-inch pots $0.50 each Nephrolepis Elegantissima, Piersoni, Bostoniensis and Harrisii, heavy 8-inch plants . . $1.00 to 1.50 each following each other, the two first with excess of rain and cold and the last spoiled by excess of heat and lack of rain, it may well be wondered what may be the result of next season should the summer of 1912 unfortunately prove to be unfavorable for the production of seeds. It would be so disastrous that we may well hope that seed growers and gardeners may be saved from the experience."

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1911-12: Pres., J. H. Dayton, Painesville, O.; Vice-pres., W. H. Wyman, North Abington, Mass.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., O. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-seventh annual meeting, Boston June 1912.

THE southwestern nurseries have had an extremely dry year and do not look upon the season's outlook as favorably as usual.

THE Connecticut Valley Orchard Co., of Westminster, Vt., has been incorporated, with a capital of $10,000, by E. G. Tuthill, J. Dascomb and Geo. H. Dascomb.

T. A. MILSTEAD, of Edmond, Okla., has removed to Ada, Okla., with the intention, it is said, of establishing a nursery there. He will build a residence at Ada in the near future.

E. I. MARTIN, of the Redlands Nurseries, Redlands, Cal., is erecting a large propagating house on his recently acquired property on Orange street, Rialto, Cal. Oil will be used as fuel.

THE Minnesota Orchard Co. has been incorporated at Indianapolis, Ind., with a capital stock of $50,000. The directors are R. S. Kennedy, Geo. A. Smith, Arthur Christofferson, Julius Harvet and Wm. H. Dye.

T. E. EWING, general manager of the Wooster Nursery Co., of Wooster, O., has engaged E. M. Fox as superintendent of the stock growing department. Mr. Fox has also purchased an interest in the business. He is a nurseryman of long experience.

W. T. KIRKMAN, of the Kirkman Nursery Co., Fresno, Cal., has purchased 120 acres of land near Borden, Madera county, Cal., and will begin at once to prepare the ground for planting. The firm also has land holdings in Merced county and other localities of the San Joaquin valley.

THE Texas Nurserymen's Association, at its recent convention in Waco, adopted resolutions favoring the establishment of the parcels post, endorsing the purposes of the Texas Land Exposition, recommending the work of the Texas Department of Agriculture with reference to the enforcement of the nursery inspection law, and approving the proposed national inspection law, with the exception of paragraph vii. A committee composed of C. C. Mayhew, E. W. Kirkpatrick and R. H. Bushway was appointed to confer with the committee from the American Association of Nurserymen, relative to the revision of this law as regards paragraph vii.

"YOU HAVE THE

Finest Cannas in the World

I CONGRATULATE YOU."

Your esteemed friend, the landscape gardener in charge of the grounds around our Nation's Capitol, said this to us and his worthy successor continues to beautify Washington with Wintzer's Wonder Cannas.

"The Finest Cannas in the World"—It's worth repeating and remembering. Our Mr. Wintzer has worked for 17 years to improve America's Cannas and the superiority of such of our introductions as Mrs. Alfred F. Conard, Meteor, Rosea Gigantea, Wyoming and a host of others, is fully and freely recognized.

We have a 50 per cent larger crop this year than last and the clean healthiness of our stock is noteworthy.

The Great New Forcing Hydrangea Arborescens Grandiflora Alba or—“HILLS OF SNOW”

Illustration of a two-year-old field-grown, cut back plant, forced, of Hydrangea Arborescens Grandiflora Alba. The true forcing variety.

The best flowers were produced from cut back plants, potted in heavy soil without a fertilizer. Where stimulants were used, the tendency was towards a weak neck that would not hold the mammoth bloom upright. It is imperative, to get the best results, that the plants should be subjected to hard freezing before bringing into the heat.

IMPORTANT

As is well known, there are two distinct varieties of this new Hydrangea, one of which cannot be coddled or coaxed into producing a single flower under glass. The stock we offer is the true forcing variety. We have a fine stock of 50,000 one, two and three-year-old field-grown plants, ready to pot up for forcing. These will move quickly. Order to-day.

Young Stock from 2½-inch pots, 50c per doz., $3.50 per hundred, $30.00 per thousand.
 One year field-grown plants, 12 to 18 inches, 1 cane, 75c per doz., $5.50 per hundred, $50.00 per thousand.

 Two year field-grown, Select, 18 to 24 inches, 3 to 5 canes, $2.00 per doz., $18.00 per hundred, $175.00 per thousand.

The Good & Reese Company
 The Largest Rose Growers In the World. SPRINGFIELD, OHIO

This shrub forces easily both for Easter and Decoration day. This new Hydrangea is without question the grandest shrub or plant of any kind for forcing that is in existence today. This statement will admit of no controversy.

To show how easily it can be brought into flower, a neighbor florist, just starting in the business, without any previous knowledge on forcing plants, having never forced a single plant of any kind, potted 500 field plants the 20th of October, plunging them in a cold frame. Nine weeks before Easter part of them were brought in and kept at a night temperature of 40 to 45 degrees; during the day the temperature would run from 50 to 60 degrees. They were in full flower for Easter.

The balance of the plants were brought in the 20th of March and kept about the same temperature. The first bloom perfected the 12th of May, and the lot was in full bloom for Decoration day and—What a sight! Enough to warm the cockles in the heart of any florist. Everyone who saw them could but wonder.

The plants on which the canes were allowed to remain, when brought in, threw out branches a foot to 15 inches in length with a bloom on every tip. On those that were cut back to within four inches of the pot, the eyes broke near the base of the plant, throwing up from five to eight canes three feet high, with blooms of the purest snow white that were a foot in diameter. The lasting qualities of its flowers are one of its great money making points, as the blooms last in perfect condition from two to three weeks.

CLEVELAND.

The Sixth City's Market.

Mums are pushing all other stock to the background in this market. Good roses in pink and white are plentiful and some bargain sales were made last week to clean up. Carnations are of a better quality and find a ready sale. Orchids in quantity are coming in daily, mostly Cattleya labiata. Some elegant Touse, Halliday, Pacific Supreme and Early Snow chrysanthemums were noted. Pompons, yellow and white, put in their appearance in the latter part of last week.

Various Notes.

The annual election was held at the last meeting of the Florists' Club and resulted as follows: President, Adam Graham; first vice-president, Charles Schmitt; second vice-president, A. L. Brown; secretary, Frank A. Friedley; treasurer, Charles E. Russell.

Louis Merkel, of Mentor, called on the growers here last week.

Frank A. Friedley is back on the job at the greenhouses of J. M. Gasser Co., after being laid up a month with blood poisoning resulting from a rusty nail in the foot.

Knoble Bros. held special rose sales last week, advertising "Killarneys, two and one-half dozen for $1 at the store, or one dozen for $1 delivered." They disposed of several thousand roses a day.

George Bate, of the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., says he is going to steer a quiet (?) little crowd down Akron way, on Turkey Foot lake, on a duck hunt the last of this month. Those are great ducks down at their camp. You use red, white and blue "shot," each color having a different value. There always are fifty-two "ducks" in a "flock," twenty-six black and twenty-six red. They are mixed up generally, but frequently fly in "pairs." Sometimes "three of a kind" are seen together and—but unlucky is the man who "sees" "fours." Occasionally you can "flush" a covey of five. But here is the question: "Who will bring home the feathers?"

We Are Rolling Up Dollars For our Advertisers

See what one of them says:

In looking over our advertising records for the last few years, we find that your publication has made a remarkable record. Since we began to advertise with you in 1907, for every dollar we have spent we have received $8.74 in direct sales. This leaves out, of course, all the indirect influence which our advertising has had, which, no doubt, amounts to a great deal. We think it only due you to let you know these facts and we will be glad at any time to testify to the value of your publication as a medium for reaching high grade florists.—McCray Refrigerator Co., Kendallville, Ind.

MIAMI, FLA.

J. W. Warner, of the Miami Floral Co., reports that the firm is now engaged in carrying out a contract for planting about 8,000 young trees, consisting of Australian pines and hibiscus, to be set alternately along the streets of the Everglade Land Sales Co.'s addition to Fort Lauderdale, Fla., a flourishing town about twenty-five miles north of this city. This is one of the biggest undertakings of the kind to be attempted in the state, as fifteen miles of streets, which are all paved as well, are being set on both sides methodically with handsome shade trees, intermingled with the beautiful ever-blooming red hibiscus. Hence the Miami Floral Co. naturally feels some degree of pride in the handling of such a contract. After the completion of this part of the work, the firm will have charge of the plants for a year or longer, and expects to make the Gateway to the Everglades, as Fort Lauderdale is sometimes called, really the show spot of the beautiful east coast.

Portland, Conn.—Otto Keser says demand is ahead of supply at present. Stock is looking good. Otto, Jr., is taking up an agricultural course and the second son, who is expected to succeed to the business, will take up a horticultural course at Cornell.

Springfield, Mass.—Mark Aitken is well pleased with the returns from his new plant at Agawam under the care of W. Morgan, who has been grower here for several years. Wm. Schlatter & Son report an increasing demand for the pins they introduced some time since. Their stock is in fine shape.

AZALEAS ARE IN Start Them Now For Christmas...

We have received our first car of Belgian Azaleas, fine plants, personally picked and selected in Ghent by a member of our Company; re-assorted here, and none delivered to our customers that do not come up to the highest standard of excellence—shapely, well balanced, abundantly budded plants.

"The Azaleas you shipped me this fall are certainly fine; the Madame Petrick were brought into bloom for Christmas without forcing. We had the best Azaleas in Worcester for the holidays, and I can assure you of my order for next season." Chas. D. Mackle, Worcester, Mass., Dec. 31, 1910.
 "The car of plants made record-breaking time and came through in fine shape; the Azaleas and Rhododendrons were very fine, in fact, beyond criticism." T. R. Hopkins, Seattle, Washington, Jan. 11, 1911.

Prompt orders are invited, while the assortment is complete, and while the plants are fresh and perfect; get them started for the holidays; nothing easier to bring into bloom and nothing more salable or more profitable than these handsome plants when in bloom.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

Cloudy weather has shortened the supply of roses and the market is feeling the good effects. Chrysanthemums are so plentiful that the demand for Easter lilies has been reduced to a minimum, although the lilies are particularly good. Dahlias are fine and also cheap. In fact, they are so cheap that some growers are not sending any to market on account of the difficulty of getting enough money out of them to pay for the trouble. Cosmos also is fine and plentiful, but it is an absolute drug on the market. Cattleyas are moving well. Mums are abundant. Greens are finding considerable demand in small lots. Autumn leaves are displayed in many windows.

The rose market is about the same as last week. Beauties are going very well and other roses are moving. In fact, business is perceptibly better than it was last week, and while retailers are still watching keenly for frost, they are not reduced to dependence on it for trade.

Various Notes.

W. Marche has ordered an automobile delivery wagon. His business has been most satisfactory of late.

Everyone at Blackstone's was too busy to talk October 23, being engaged on large funeral pieces. The store is somewhat cluttered up now, but when the alterations are finished it is going to be a real show place. Mr. Blackstone has just ordered his second auto for deliveries.

"Business is much better and stock is fine," was the word at Pennock-Meehan's, and they were too busy to say much more this week.

"Prospects are excellent, and present trade is good," said Mr. Schell, at the Florists' Exchange. "Dealers in general seem to be busy and satisfied," he added.

Julius Dilloff, representing Schloss Bros., New York, was here last week.

Gude Bros. Co. is furnishing the trade with some fine Beauties and other roses. They had the contract this week to decorate the department store of S. Kann Sons & Co., which is celebrating an anniversary.

Kramer always manages to have an attractive window, and his store usually looks like an ice cream soda parlor on a hot day—filled with buyers.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

Trade was rather quiet last week, although flowers seem to be more plentiful. Carnations are better and have longer stems, and mums are in good shape. Violets are in now, but we need some cooler weather to make them really good stock. Snapdragons in many colors are coming in and a few gladioli that were planted late are found useful in funeral work. There are plenty of outdoor flowers, as we have had no severe weather yet, and they are used in bouquets, etc.

Last week was decidedly disagreeable, with lots of rain, and in consequence flowers do not open quickly. Funeral work has been good and plants, particularly decorative, sell well at fairly good prices. Bulbs are also selling well, but a sharp frost would help to liven up things in general.

Various Notes.

A street faker appeared last Saturday with a big array of roses and carnations. He sold them cheaply, although they seemed of fair quality—not the usual sleepy stock one sees.

The stores are making nice window displays. W. L.

Hammond, Ind.—L. E. Klemm has just finished two more greenhouses, for which he used Moninger material. The hydrangea is one of his specialties, and one with which he always has had exceptional success. Mr. Klemm's youngest son, Rudolph, appears to inherit his father's love for the business.

CAN HANDLE LARGEST ORDER ON SHORT NOTICE

Now is the time to force Azalea Indica for Christmas. What varieties will you force? Surely the ones, the early varieties, that I know I can get in in time for Xmas. There is Deutsche Perle, one of the best early double whites. We have plants full of buds, at 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. Simon Mardner, you know this variety well. It is an early, deep, double pink variety, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. Vervaeana, one of the old standard, well favored, large, double, variegated varieties, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. Didn't you ever hear of that earliest of all varieties, Mme. Petrick? This is a variety hard to beat, pink, double flowers, full of buds and never fails to bloom. A child can bring this variety into bloom for Christmas. It is very scarce and high in price this fall in Belgium. You must have a few of them anyhow, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

Easter Varieties. For Easter forcing we have only the well known standard American varieties, such as Mme. Van der Cruysen, pink (very scarce this fall in Belgium), 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. Niobe, double white. We have a large stock of this, $1.00, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00; some, but a limited quantity, at 50c, 60c to 75c. Deutsche Perle, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. Helene Theleman, light pink, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. President Oswald de Kerchove, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Schryveriana and Empress of India, large, double, variegated, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. Professeur Wolters, 50c, 60c, 70c, $1.00 to $1.50. Simon Mardner, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Vervaeana and Apollo, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00; dozen or 100 at same prices. Simon Mardner, Vervaeana, Deutsche Perle, smaller size, 50c each.

I still have a good supply of strong, bushy stock in perfect health. My plants are excep-giving universal satisfaction. Have received many letters from satisfied customers and not one complained. Killing frosts in this locality are very late.
